2285a. Policy of third party insurance—Prosecution under Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), Part II.]—Resp. was charged with using a motor vehicle without there being in force in respect of such user a policy of insurance satisfying the requirements of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43). A police officer sought to give evidence of the contents of a certificate of insurance produced by resp., but it was objected on behalf of resp. that, no notice to produce the policy having been given, secondary evidence of its contents was not admissible. The justices upheld the objection, &, in the absence of other evidence, dismissed the information :—Held : the evidence ought to have been received.

The decision of His Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, which by the provisions of the Act is conclusive, is that on Mar. 22, 1928, Northern Rhodesia was a territory under His Majesty's protection. 4085a. Return to Potato Marketing Board—Agricultural Marketing Act, 1931 (c. 42), s. 17 (2).]—Applt. brought an action against resp. to recover the price of certain potatoes sold & delivered to resp. Resp. counter-claimed damages, on the ground that applt. had agreed to grow 9½ acres of royal kidney potatoes, & to deliver the whole crop to resp. at a fixed price, but that, in breach of his contract, applt. had not delivered to resp. the whole product of the 9½ acres, but had wrongfully sold part thereof to other buyers, at a price higher than that at which he had contracted to sell to resp. For the purpose of proving that applt. had planted only 9½ acres with royal kidney potatoes, resp. subpœnaed the secretary of the Potato Marketing Board to produce the return made by applt. showing the total acreage of potatoes planted on his land. The county ct. judge refused to make an order for the production of the return, on the ground that it was a privileged document, which need not be produced, &, after hearing evidence, he gave judgment for applt. On appeal, his judgment was set aside by the Ct. of Appeal (by a majority), & a new trial ordered, for the reason that Agricultural Marketing Act, 1931 (c. 42), s. 17, did not expressly alter the common law whereby material evidence of this kind could not properly be excluded :—Held : (1) on a true construction of the whole of sect. 17 of the Act of 1931, the return in PART VIII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 5.—B.

6258 vii. ——.]—In order to justify the issue of a commission to take evidence abroad, it must be shown that the evidence is directly material to the issue raised.

Applt.'s statement of claim alleged that for the use of "trichlorethylene" for dry-cleaning applt. had installed special machinery & had been trading in New Zealand under the fancy name of "Tri-cleaning" & that resp. co. had been formed under its name "Tri-cleaning" Co. with a view to causing confusion to the public & so obtaining a portion of the goodwill that had been built up by applts., or, alternatively, that the name of resp. co. was calculated to deceive the public into believing that that co. was the applt. co. or a subsidiary thereof. Resps.' defence was a bare denial of the allegations in the statement of claim, from which it might possibly be inferred that the issue raised was whether "Tri-cleaning" was a fancy name. The evidence sought to be taken in Australia was sworn to be material because it was from persons familiar with the trade of dry-cleaning by trichlorethylene & the manner in which the same is described or referred to. These witnesses could only speak as to conditions in Australia, but not as to those as to its use in New Zealand :—Held : such evidence could not be material in the action.—NEW ZEALAND TOWEL SUPPLY & LAUNDRY, LTD. v. N. national exchange transactions as "the purchase & sale of all kinds of currency & gold in any form & the bills of exchange, cheques, drafts, letters of credit, telegraphic orders, & document of any other nature requiring the transfer of funds from Chile or vice versa." Conflicting evidence by Chilean experts was given as to the meaning in Chile of first-class bills on London. The evidence accepted was that "payable in Chile in first-class bills on London" had a special mercantile meaning in Chile, namely, "bills drawn in Chile by one or other of a select list of bankers & mercantile houses in Chile upon one or other of a select list of bankers & mercantile houses in London" & these were known technically as F. C. L. bills. An advocate in Chile who had been Minister of Justice gave evidence that the F. C. L. bills came within the mischief of the Chilean legislation:—Held: (1) the conditions precedent to the admissibility of evidence as to the meaning in Chile of first-class bills on London had been fulfilled, namely, the evidence did not conflict with a statutory definition, was of a usage common to the place in question & expoinded without contradicting the terms of the contract; (2) though witnesses could be called to prove foreign law, the ct. was at liberty to look at a translation of the passages in question & to consider what was their proper meaning, but the ct. would have regard not only to its own view of the foreign law but to the interpretation put upon it by a competent foreign authority.—DE BEÉCHE v. SOUTH AMERICAN STORES (GATH & CHAVES), LTD., & CHILIAN STORES (GATH & CHAVES), LTD., [1935] A. 6957a. Document under seal of U.S.A.—Photostatic copy—Certificate of naturalisation.]—At the trial of applt., who was a British subject by birth, for an offence against art. 6, para. 1 (a) of Aliens Order, 1920, & for making an untrue statement for the purpose of procuring a passport, the prosecution endeavoured to prove by means of a photostatic copy of a certificate of naturalisation authenticated by the seal of the United States of America that applt. had lost his British nationality. Applt. was convicted on both charges, & on appeal it was conceded by the Crown that the document ought not to have been admitted in evidence, inasmuch as the mode of authenticating the document did not fulfil the requirements of Evidence Act, 1851 (c. 99), s. 7:—Held: though the prosecution might have proceeded at the trial on the basis that under Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 (c. 12), s. 1 (4), the burden of proving that he was not an alien lay on applt., they had not taken this course, but had themselves accepted the burden of proof & endeavoured to discharge it by putting in evidence an inadmissible document, & accordingly the conviction must be quashed.—R. v. BEADON (1933), 24 Cr. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

Part I.—The Office of Executor or Administrator.

4a. Limitation of number—Appointment of four general executors—Limited appointment of fifth—Invalid.]—A testator by his will appointed four persons as exors. & trustees of his will, & after certain bequests appointed a fifth person literary exor. in respect of certain papers. The usual exors.' oath was sworn by the four general exors. for the purpose of a grant to them of the estate save & except the papers in respect of which the fifth person was appointed literary exor. The oath was refused by the Registry on the ground that by reason of Jud. Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 160, one of the five exors. must renounce. The exors. applied to the ct. asking that the oath tendered by them might be received :—Held : as the oath asked in effect for grants to five exors. it contravened Jud. B. his exor. save & except settled land vested in deceased settled previously to his death & not by his will. Deceased appointed no special exor. At his death the trustees of the settlement of the land were C. D. & E. F., & a grant of probate was made to them as special exors. limited to the settled land. Before the administration of the estate was complete, C. D. became incapable of acting in the trusts & A. B. was appointed in his place for the purposes of the Settled Land Act, 1925. On motion to revoke the grant of probate to the special exors. & for a fresh grant limited to the settled land to E. F. along with A. B. :—Ordered that the grant of probate limited to the settled land be revoked & fresh probate granted to E. F., power being reserved to C. sg. Will mutilated—By accident.]—Testator made a will, which was discovered, a year after his death, mutilated by the destruction of parts thereof containing certain words of the will. The state of the will when discovered was due to the way in which it had been kept by testator. Testator had also made a draft will, as well as a pretended will, but no copy of his last will, & no oral evidences as to the precise form of the last will as it stood before becoming mutilated was forthcoming. The ct. made an order for probate of the will, in so far as the same was legible, & so far as the same was illegible, in the words & figures contained in a copy of the will which, as regards the missing portions, had been reconstructed from the context of the will, from the draft will & from the pretended will.—In the Goods of WRIGHT (1908), 44 I. After his death, on the will being opened, it was found to have a piece cut out of it. Probate

By an Act of the Irish Free State passed in 1929, after the separation from Great Britain, the Bank of Ireland was for the first time authorised to act as exor. or administrator. The Bank of Ireland has places of business in Northern Ireland, therefore in the United Kingdom. A testator domiciled in the Irish Free State, by his will dated in 1931, appointed the governor & co. of the Bank of Ireland his exor. Amongst the assets was personal estate domiciled in England. As a preliminary to the issue of a grant of probate in England to the English estate the Bank moved for leave to swear by its representative that it fulfilled the definition of a " corpn." in the Acts & Rules : —Held : the Bank having been empowered to undertake the business in question only since the establishment of the Irish Free State, had that power within the Free State only & was not for the purpose of the motion a " corpn. constituted under the law of the United Kingdom or any part thereof," & the motion accordingly failed.—Re BARLOW (H. 924a. ——.]—Ct. of Probate Act, 1857 (c. 77), s. 73, confers wide powers on the ct. Misfeasance on the part of an exor. with regard to the estate of his testator is a ground for proceeding under the sect., even after the exor. has intermeddled.

Exors. had intermeddled & neglected to prove the will, & had made an agreement with the universal legatee that the will should not be proved. 1351a. —— ——.]—A testamentary paper headed "Codicil to be attached to my will," & proceeding "This is the last will & testament of A. B." did not expressly or by implication revoke an earlier will although it effected a substantial difference in the destination of a large portion of the property passing. The same paper bore, in addition to the signature of the testator, the signatures of four persons, two of whom were beneficiaries under it; all four signatures had been placed on the paper at the time of attestation, & there was evidence that the two beneficiaries signed otherwise than as attesting:—Held: the words "last will & testament" did not preclude the admission to probate of both papers, & probate of the codicil might go without including the names of the two beneficiaries as attesting witnesses.—KITCAT v. KING, [1930] P. 266; 99 L. 1398a. —— Wills not independent.]—If testamentary papers are independent, one dealing exclusively with property within the jurisdiction & the other with property outside it, there is no obligation on a party propounding the first to obtain probate of the second. The question is whether the papers are independent or interdependent.

Testator left two wills, one English, the other American; the latter dealt exclusively with property outside the English jurisdiction, but the two documents were interdependent with regard to the residue, which was liable for English estate duty. The exors. of the two wills were different persons. Testator had expressly directed that the American will should be "probated" in America:—Held: (1) the two wills & a codicil to the English will should all be proved in England; (2) the document to be retained in the English Probate Registry as evidence of the testamentary act of making the American will should be an examined & sealed copy of that will, & after probate the original American will should be handed out to the exors. named therein for probate in America.—In the Estate of TODD, [1926] P. 173; 95 L. Being all sui juris, they signed an act of renunciation in which they consented to the appcts. taking the grant subject to the approval of the ct. It was submitted that though normally the ct. would make a grant only to kindred of an intestate, in " special circumstances " it would make a grant to a stranger. The ct. exercised that power under sect. 162 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 162, as amended by Administration of Justice Act, 1928 (c. 26), s. 9 :—Held : in the " special circumstances " the order would be made as prayed.—Re MORGANS (W. Owing to the uncertainty of the date of his death it was not known whether he was survived by his father, who in that event would have been entitled to a grant of administration. The father died in 1909 leaving a will, & a brother of the presumed deceased was now entitled to a grant of administration of his estate whether as his next of kin or as the exor. of his father. The brother of the presumed deceased refused either to renounce his derivative right as exor. of his father or to take the grant in his original right as next of kin of his brother, & he had become bkpt. 2585d. —— Death of settlor fifty years earlier—Personal representatives not traced.]—G. died in 1882 & the chain of representation to his estate was not known & could not be ascertained without considerable expense. E., testator, died on Mar. 27, 1930, & the present appcts., who were his exors., had taken probate of his will in due course save & except land vested in testator which was settled previously to his death & not by his will & remained settled land notwithstanding his death. Testator was interested in land settled by the will of G. as follows: (a) he was tenant for life for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), of a portion of the N. estate subject to a compound settlement consisting of the will of G. together with an indenture of resettlement of the N. estate dated Sept. 25, 1909; (b) he was absolute owner of certain portions of the N. estate, which by reason of a rentcharge upon them continued to be settled land after his death. These portions were included in a settlement created by the will of G. but were not subject to the compound settlement or the resettlement. They were therefore the subject of a separate settlement; (c) certain portions of the N. estate of which testator was absolute owner were subject to the same conditions as to title as (b) but testator had exonerated these latter from the incidence of the rentcharge as between the various portions of the estate, but he could only do so in so far as the income from both (b) & (c) was adequate to meet the rentcharge. As regards the burden of the rentcharge as a whole both (b) & (c) remained subject to it in favour of the chargee. Of these interests in settled land of testator all three remained subject to the rentcharge, the object of which was to provide an annuity to the still surviving widow of G., & apart from the operation of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 30 (3), for the purposes of that Act, there were originally no trustees of any of these interests of testator under the settlement created by the will of G. On July 22, 1931, S. & W. had already as trustees of the compound settlement & resettlement obtained a grant of special probate to testator as his special exors. limited to settled land, vested in him as tenant for life under the compound settlement & resettlement. Probate of testator's will having excluded settled land there was no representation in respect of the settled land of which he was absolute owner which remained settled land because of the existence of the rentcharge. On the application of the general exors. of the will of testator the ct. revoked the earlier probate & granted general probate to them save & except settled land, of which special exors. had already been appointed by the grant dated July 22, 1931, under the authority of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 155, without citing the personal representatives (if any) of the settlor, G.—In the Estate of POWELL, [1935] P. 114; 104 L. 3022a. Absence of necessary party—Non-disclosure of material facts.]—On an ex parte motion in this matter in Dec. 1933, a grant of administration with the will annexed was made to creditors of deceased, & the ct., in dispensing with the citation of the exor., expressed it as an exceptional course which should not be regarded as justifying in ordinary cases any relaxation of the usual practice of giving an exor., by a formal notice, the opportunity of appearing before the ct. In July, 1935, the exor. applied for the revocation of the grant, & after fresh evidence the President revoked the grant which he had made, on the ground that on the original motion material facts had not been disclosed which, had they been disclosed, would have caused him to require the citation of the exor. In the order embodying the grant the administrators were not described as creditors, & it was directed that in all future grants of administration to a creditor he should be so described in the order. The administrators appealed against the revocation of the grant :—Held : the decision of the President must be affirmed, owing to non-disclosure of material facts. 3127a. ——.]—The proviso to R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 1, that nothing in that rule contained shall deprive an exor. who has not unreasonably instituted or carried on or resisted any proceedings, of any right to costs out of a particular estate or fund to which he would be entitled according to the rules theretofore acted upon in the Chancery Div., governs the case of bare exors. who reasonably propound a will & codicil, even if, though the will is pronounced for, the codicil is pronounced against. The position of such exors. differs from that of persons named as exors. in a testamentary paper which they unsuccessfully propound. Having established the validity of the will, & made good their position as testator's exors., they are entitled to their costs of the litigation out of the estate as between solr. & client, & can be deprived of that right, which rests substantially upon contract, only if they have acted culpably or unreasonably. Until that has been established, their costs are not in the discretion of the ct., & notwithstanding Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 49, repealed & re-enacted by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 31 (1) (h), an appeal lies without leave from an order condemning them in costs or depriving them of costs out of the estate.—In the Estate of PLANT, WILD v. PLANT, [1926] P. 139 ; *sub nom. 3127b. ——.]—The principle of the decision in In the Estate of Plant, Wild v. Plant, No. 3127a, ante, that exors. who have established the validity of their will are entitled to their whole costs of the litigation, although they fail in establishing a codicil, does not extend in all cases to costs incurred by them by reason of their insisting upon probate not only of clauses in a will expressing the testamentary mind of their testator, but also of a clause which is found not to be his testamentary act. If a residuary gift is excluded from probate on the ground of want of capacity the question still arises whether the costs so incurred by the exors. are due to their "violation or culpable neglect of duty." If the ct. finds on this issue that an exor. is a wrongdoer, his primâ facie right to receive out of the estate costs not otherwise provided for is displaced.—THOMAS v. JONES, [1928] P. 162 ; 139 L. 3692a. —— —— ——.]—In my view Collis v. Flower, No. 3691, was wrong, for the reasons that I have been stating. The common law tenancy was terminated. The exor. had a common law tenancy, & it was terminated by notice to quit. He did not remain in occupation of the house, &, in my view, the original tenant having no right, as we have now decided, to dispose of the property by will, had no right to give any statutory right to the exor., & the exor., who had not lived in the house, could not claim to be a statutory tenant. In my view, therefore, Collis v. Flower, No. 3691, is no longer an authority.

The administrator case stands on a different footing, because one has to look in all these cases to see what the facts were. The administrator case is the case of Mellows v. Low, No. 3692. There the facts were different. The original tenant was a weekly tenant. It was a common law tenancy, & during her tenancy she died intestate. Consequently, whatever rights she had in

The administrator, however, is entitled to recover for the estate damages for being deprived of the use & possession of the chattel after the issue of the letters of administration.—DAY v. HORTON (1913), 26 W. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—J. (a) ii.

3660 i. Right to receive dividends.]—Dividends paid out of the profits of industrial cos. in Quebec, Canada, declared periodically so far as circumstances permit, are generally speaking to be treated as "civil fruits" within art. 449 of the Civil Code of Quebec, & must, pursuant to art. 451, be considered as having been acquired day by day & belonging to the usufructuary in proportion to the duration of his usufruct.

E., who was entitled under the will & a deed of gift of his father to certain dividends payable by a co. of which his father had been the founder & sole shareholder, died three days before the declaration of dividends on its preferred & common stocks out of profits admittedly earned during E.'s lifetime. On a claim by applt., the widow & executrix & universal legatee of E., to the proportionate share of the dividends so declared which she alleged was due to her husband at the date of his death under the will & deed of gift :—Held : (1) although E. was not a usufructuary under the deed of gift, having only a right as beneficiary to share in certain "fruits & revenues" (the dividends) distributed from time to time by the trustees under the deed of gift, he was, by virtue of the provisions of art. 981 (a) to (p) of the Civil Code of Quebec, a beneficiary under the deed of gift & the will with personal rights against the fiduciary donees & the fiduciary legatee respectively; (2) art. 451 of the Civil Code was applicable by analogy to the rights of a beneficiary under the will & deed of gift in respect of the dividends declared by the co. The dividends in question, therefore, were civil fruits subject to the principle contained in art. 451 that they should be considered to have been acquired day by day, & E.'s widow was accordingly entitled to her husband's proportionate share of the dividends which were in fact declared three days after his death.—LAVERDURE v. DU TREMBLAY, [1937] A. C. 666; 106 L. J. P. C. 107, P. C.—CAN.

her common law tenancy remained to her representatives in an intestacy. No notice to quit was ever given. Consequently the common law tenancy remained. Then the landlord claimed that on the death of the tenant intestate, with no member of her family residing in the house, the tenancy lapsed. It was held that the administratrix was a person who derived title under the original tenant, &, consequently, that the residence could not be interfered with. The point of that case which renders it a right decision is that no notice to quit the common law tenancy had ever been given. The common law tenancy, therefore, remained, & it remained in the person who at common law was entitled to it, & her tenancy had never been terminated. Consequently, Mellows v. Low, No. 3692, on the facts, is right, but if notice to terminate the common law tenancy had been given the ct. could not, in my opinion, have said, unless the matter could be brought within the very curious clause about intestacy to which I have referred, that such an administratrix not being in possession is entitled to be protected by the Act (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—SKINNER v. GEARY, [1931] 2 K. C. who was the right heir of H., by his will appointed the applicant T. exor. & trustee & devised his lands to the use of the applicant for life with remainders over. On Jan. 1, 1926, the commencement of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), the lands passing under the wills of H. & C. remained subject to the settlement created by the will of H., &, in the event of the termination of the limited ownership under the will, also subject to the settlement created by the will of C. On the same date J. was tenant for life under the will of H. By a vesting deed dated Apr. 16, 1926, the lands were declared to be vested in J. in fee upon the trusts operating from time to time under the will of H. or otherwise. J. died Apr. 27, 1928. General probate of his will including the settled land was granted to his exors. in the first place. Later the grant was amended limiting it "save & except the settled land vested in testator settled previously to his death & remaining settled notwithstanding his death." J. having died without issue appct. T. then became tenant for life in possession under the settlement created by the will of C. as well as the trustee of that settlement. On appeal from the registrar a grant of probate of the will of J. limited to the settled land was directed to issue to the appct. as special exor. of J.—In the Estate of TAYLOR, [1929] P. 260; 98 L. S. M., 1913, is to be considered one of the "exceptions."

A farmer died intestate leaving four dependent infant children. The administrator of his estate sold certain chattels which were during the lifetime of the deceased "exemptions" under Executions Act, s. 29. On an application by the administrator for directions as to the disposition of the moneys realised from the sale, the creditors of the deceased, none of whom had recovered judgment, contended that the right of exemption terminated on the deceased's death ; that all the assets of the deceased, including the exemptions, were liable for his debts ; & that even if the chattels continued to be exempt, the proceeds of their sale was not exempt : —Held : the administrator, who had also been appointed guardian, held the money received from the sale of the exemptions for the benefit of the children.—Re MCKENZIE ESTATE (Man.), [1930] 1 D. 4101a. Liability to contribute rateably—Under Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), ss. 32, 33, 34—Notwithstanding devolution of beneficial interest to heir-at-law of lunatic.]—For six years before her death a lady was a certified patient at a mental home, & without any testamentary capacity. She was not, however, a lunatic so found by inquisition, & never had a committee or receiver. She died at the home on Feb. 1, 1929, a spinster & intestate, aged seventy-six :—Held : her real estate went to her heir at law under Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 51 (2), which exemption sect. read with the definition sect., sect. 55 (1) (viii.), was not confined to cases where a lunatic or defective had a committee or receiver. However, the exemption in sect. 51 (2) only extends to the devolution of the beneficial interest, & the real estate must bear its rateable share of the funeral, testamentary & administration expenses, debts, & liabilities, under sects. 32, 33, 34, & Sched. 4101b. —— "According to value"—Meaning of "value."]—In Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), Sched. I., Part II., para. 6, "Property specifically devised or bequeathed, rateably according to value," the word "value" means the value to testator. Where, therefore, property is devised subject to a mtge. created by testator, & other property is devised burdened with the payment of specified legacies, & the personal estate of testator is insufficient to pay pecuniary legacies & debts, in order to ascertain the proportion payable the word "value" means the value of the property to testator & not the value of the property to the devisees. The "value" in the case of the property burdened with the mtge. is the value of the property less the amount of the mtge., whereas in the case of the property burdened with the payment of legacies the amount of the legacies is not to be deducted to ascertain the "value" of the property.—Re JOHN, JONES v. JOHN, [1933] Ch. 370 ; 102 L. 4485a. —— —— Bankruptcy Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 36 (2)—Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 34, Sched. I., Part I.]—S. P., the debtor, died in Oct. 1934, intestate & insolvent. His widow, who had taken out letters of administration, having in her husband's lifetime advanced him certain moneys for the purpose of his business, & having after his death received certain sums which formed part of his estate & which equalled the amount so advanced by her, on Feb. 1, 1935, paid them as his administratrix into her own private account. On Feb. 8 an order was made for the administration of her deceased husband's estate in bkpcy., the sums then still remaining in her hands. These sums paid into her own private account having been claimed by the official receiver as trustee of the husband's estate, who alleged that by virtue of Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 36 (2) (replacing Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 3) & Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), the widow had no right of retainer as against other creditors, a special case was at the request of both parties sent by the county ct. judge, before whom the matter first came, for the opinion & determination of the High Ct. :—Held : on Feb. 8, the widow had in her hands the sums in question forming part of her husband's estate & she had not made these sums her own by paying them in to her private account on Feb. 1, for she had no right of retainer as against the other debts due from the estate, which were all of higher degree than the debt owing to her, & the sums must accordingly be handed over to the official receiver.—Re S. 4538a. —— Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 34 (1).]—Under sect. 34 (1), & the rules set out in Part I. of Sched. I., to Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), in the administration of insolvent estates an exor. has no right of retainer of a simple contract debt against the Crown so far as the Crown has priority under the bkpcy. rules affecting debt priorities; consequently the Crown has priority for a claim for taxes, not exceeding in the whole one year's assessment.

In my opinion there are now only two, or possibly three, degrees of priority of debts, being, first, those which are by the Bkpcy. Act expressly given priority; secondly, those which are expressly directed to be paid pari passu; & possibly, thirdly, those mentioned in Bkpcy. Act. 1914 (c. 59), s. 36, & in sect. 3 of the Partnership Act, 1890 (c. 39), the effect of the latter section being expressly retained in the Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 33. It follows that the balance of any Crown debt in excess of that portion which is given priority is now of the same degree as the debt of the executrix in the present case, & that she can retain against such balance (LORD ATKIN).

The right still remains as before, the right to retain against debts of equal degree. Some debts have been put in a higher degree than they were before; but the exor.'s right always has been subject to changes of that description. What has been affected is not the right, but the classes in respect of which the right is exercised (LORD ATKIN).—A.-G. v. JACKSON, [1932] A. C. 365; 48 T. L. R. 261; 76 Sol. Jo. 146; *sub nom. Between the death of testator & the subsequent death of his wife each of the 460 shares of the value of £35 each which belonged to him at the date of his death became, as the result of the capitalisation of a portion of the reserve fund of the co., consolidated with a new share of the value of £15 into a share of the value of £50. Testator's estate, as the result of the capitalisation, also became entitled, in consequence of his holding of 460 ordinary shares, to 920 preferred ordinary shares of £10 each :—Held : (1) following Smell v. Dee (1707), 2 Salk. 415, the gifts were contingent. & (2) the original 460 shares together with the accretions became, on the death of testator's wife, the property of the specific legatees.—Re BUXTON, BUXTON v. BUXTON, [1930] 1 Ch. 648 ; 99 L. From that date the trustees accumulated funds until 1924, when they brought an action of multiplepoinding & exoneration for distribution of the estate :—Held : (1) while as a general rule interest was allowed upon legacies from the death of testator or from the prescribed date of payment, there was no absolute rule compelling the ct. in all cases to allow such interest, the general rule being displaced if circumstances showed it to be inapplicable ; (2) the general legatees were not entitled to interest on their legacies from 1890 to 1919, in respect that, owing to the insolvency of the estate during that period, there was no asset realisable to meet the legacies nor any interest-bearing subject ; (3) there was no absolute rule to the effect that the rate of legal interest should be 5 per cent., the rate of interest being in every case for the discretion of the ct. in the particular circumstances.—WADDELL'S TRUSTEES v. CRAWFORD, [1926] S. The will declared that the two legacies to the grandchildren were subject to the widow's life interest & directed that they should be paid when the grandchildren should attain twenty-one. but in case the estate should be divided before they attained that age, interest should be paid on their legacies. If payment was delayed in order thereby to benefit a residuary legatee, then, in the absence of a direction to the contrary, no interest upon such postponed legacies would be payable before the expiration of the prescribed period. But where the postponement was intended primarily to enable the exors. to collect & realise the assets, the postponed legacies would carry interest from such a time after the end of the "exors.' year" as the exors. had in hand realised assets which could rightfully be applied to the payment of such legacies.—MORPETH v. WILLIAMSON, [1926] N. She then made a will appointing him one of her exors. & giving him a legacy of £100 & a protected life interest in the income of her residuary estate. She then guaranteed the son's overdraft on his current account. On each occasion the son charged his estate & interest in a public-house to secure such sum as the testatrix might be called upon to pay. The estate of testatrix was about to be called upon to pay a sum of over £5,000. The son after the death of testatrix executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors:—Held: (1) the fact that testatrix required security for the repayment of the debt after the execution of her will showed an intention not to release the debt, & the son was liable to the estate in the amount which would have to be paid to the bank; (2) notwithstanding that the debt or some part might remain unpaid, the trustees of the will were entitled to pay in their discretion such part of the income as they might think necessary for the son's maintenance & support.—Re EISER'S WILL TRUSTS, FOGG v. EASTWOOD, [1937] 1 All E. After the date of his will testator paid off the mtge. & took a reconveyance of the mortgaged property. Shortly before his death, in June & Oct. 1917, testator contracted to purchase certain freehold properties in respect of which he paid deposits, leaving balances of the purchase-money owing to the respective vendors. On Dec. 23, 1917, testator made a final codicil, by which, after revoking the appointment of one of his exors. & bequeathing a legacy, he confirmed his will in all other respects. Testator died on Dec. 26, 1917, without having completed the purchases or paid the balances of the purchase-money, & shortly after his death his exors. completed the purchases & paid the balances of the purchase-money; whereupon the question arose whether, as between the persons claiming under testator's will, those balances ought to be borne by the freehold properties of testator in respect of which same were payable, or ought to be satisfied out of his residuary estate :—Held : (1) inasmuch as a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money differs essentially from a mtge., even in the modern & wider sense of that term, upon the true construction of the will in the absence of any context enlarging the meaning of the term "mtge.," the balances of the unpaid purchase-money owing at testator's death were not "sums of money secured on mtge.," & no contrary intention was signified by the direction in the will to pay & discharge such sums out of testator's residuary estate, so as to exclude the operation of 1854 Act, which by virtue of 1867 Act, s. 2, extends to a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money; with the result that the balances in question ought to be borne by & satisfied out of the freehold properties in respect of which same were payable, & the devisees thereof were not entitled to have those balances discharged out of testator's residuary estate; (2) the confirmation of the will by the last codicil thereto, although executed after the mtge. on testator's freehold property had been paid off & after the vendor's lien had arisen, had not the effect of extending the meaning of the words "any sums of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold & leasehold properties," so as to include the balances of unpaid purchase-money in question.—Re BEIRNSTEIN, BARNETT v. BEIRNSTEIN, [1925] Ch. 12; 94 L. 5620a. Special fund for payment of debts—"Contrary or other intention"—Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 35.]—The provision by testator in his will of a special fund, not being any of the funds mentioned in sect. 35 (2) of the above Act, for payment of his debts operates as the expression of a "contrary or other intention" within the sect., so as to exonerate, as between the different persons claiming through testator, a personalty fund which at testator's death was subject to a mtge. from the primary liability to discharge it; but the fund is only exonerated to the extent that the special fund is available for discharging the mtge. debt, &, in so far as it is inadequate, the mortgaged property remains primarily liable.—Re FEGAN, FEGAN v. FEGAN, [1928] 1 Ch. 45; 97 L. 5654a. —— —— To revert to residue on death of legatee.]—By his will, testator bequeathed a legacy of £16,000 to trustees for his daughter A. during her life & after her death directed that the legacy should revert to & be added to his general residuary personal estate & go as the same was bequeathed by his will. Testator then gave his general residuary personal estate to B. Testator devised his estates in certain places to other trustees as a fund for the discharge of his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses & his pecuniary legacies in aid of his personal estate, with power to his trustees, if they thought it expedient or necessary either before or after his residuary personal estate should be exhausted to raise money for those purposes by sale or mortgage & subject thereto upon trust for B., in fee. The personal estate of testator was insufficient for the payment of his debts & legacies, & B. supplied such deficiency, including the annual payments to A. in respect of her legacy. A. survived both testator & B. On the death of B., the question arose whether, as testator's personalty was insufficient for the payments before mentioned, testator intended that the corpus of the legacy should be raised out of the real estate devised to B. for the benefit of B., who was testator's residuary legatee :—Held : the words " revert to & be added to my general residuary estate " in the will, showed that the testator meant the legacy to be restored to the funds from which it was taken ; & it was not to be taken from the real estate merely for the purpose of augmenting the personal estate.—Re SOMERSET (DUKE), THYNNE v. ST. 5917b. —— —— —— —— ——.]—A testator by his will, after directing his executors to pay all legacies free of estate duty & to pay out of his estate any duty which might become payable on any gift made before his decease & after bequeathing certain legacies & annuities & the use & benefit of two freehold cottages, directed them to collect the income from the remainder of his estate & to pay 75 per cent. thereof to E. H. during her life & on her death the income of the whole of the estate to be invested for the benefit of the children of M. & A. on their attaining the age of twenty-one years, & if there should be no children then the whole of the accumulated funds was to be divided between two named charities. Testator died on Mar. 12, 1929. It having been held upon the originating summons that, in consequence of the will having been attested by the husband of E. H., the 75 per cent. share of the income of the residuary estate was undisposed of by the will, until the death of E. H. or the birth of a child to either M. or A., the question then arose whether testator's funeral, testamentary & administration expenses, debts & liabilities other than the estate duty in the will mentioned ought to be paid primarily out of such undisposed of income or out of the corpus of his estate:—Held: (1) the "real & personal" estate of a deceased person made assets for the payment of his debts by Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 32 (1), include the share of income of testator's residuary estate accruing after his death as to which he died intestate; (2) that property "undisposed of by will," made by sect. 34 (3), Sched. I., Part II., para. 1, of that Act the primary fund for payment of the expenses, debts, & liabilities mentioned in that subsect. includes a share of future income of residuary estate which lapses by reason of the statutory inability of the legatee to take under the will; (3) upon the proper construction of the will & the sub-sect. there was no provision for payment of the funeral, testamentary, & administration expenses, debts, & liabilities, with the result that those expenses & the debts & liabilities, except the estate duty in the will mentioned, must be paid primarily out of the share of income which lapsed & any other property undisposed of by the will.—Re TONG, HILTON v. BRADBURY, [1931] 1 Ch. 202; 100 L. Testator died on Aug. 15, 1928, & was at his death entitled, subject to the effect of the provisions of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), to two equal ninth shares of certain freehold property comprised in his father's residuary estate, & to one equal fourth part of certain freehold minerals purchased by him. He also owned the entirety of certain other freehold property. The residuary gift of personalty lapsed as regards three equal seventh parts owing to the death of two legatees in the testator's lifetime: — Held: testator by directing that his debts should first be paid out of the residue before division amongst the residuary legatees had shown an intention that in regard to the lapsed shares of residue the order of administration prescribed by Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), Sched. Testator died on Aug. 1, 1928, & his exors., in pursuance of the directions contained in the will, carried on his business, until Feb. 1, 1929, when, testator's tenancy of the business premises being about to expire, they removed the business to other premises, a lease of which was shortly afterwards granted to deft. alone, of which lease to deft. pltfs. did not become aware until a few weeks after the grant thereof, when deft. claimed the right to hold the lease of the new premises for his own benefit, to exclude pltfs. from the new premises & to set up & carry on his own account a business similar to & in competition with testator's business. Deft. having, since the issue of the writ in the action, assigned the lease of the new premises to B. & the goodwill of the business also having been assigned to her, it became no longer necessary to grant any of the relief claimed & necessary to determine only whether deft. was entitled at the date of the issue of the writ to the right which he then claimed, for the purpose of deciding how the costs of the action ought to be borne:—Held: (1) in face of the claim made by deft. to the benefit of the lease, pltfs. were justified in bringing the action; (2) having regard to the special nature of the business of a yacht broker which necessarily involved competition between every individual broker with all the others, it would have been a breach by deft. of his fiduciary duty towards the beneficiaries under the will, if he had at the date of the issue of the writ set up on his own account an independent business of a yacht broker in competition with pltfs., carrying on their testator's business; with the result that deft. must pay all the costs of the action.—Re THOMSON, THOMSON v. ALLEN, [1930] 1 Ch. 203; 99 L. 6053a. Effect of Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 39.]—The expression " personal representatives " in the Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 39, does not include trustees in the ordinary sense, even when the personal representatives themselves become trustees upon an assent. The introductory words of sect. 39, conferring powers on personal representatives " during a minority of any beneficiary or the subsistence of any life interest, or until the period of distribution arrives," are explained by the fact that under the new law of intestate succession the existence of an infant beneficiary or of a beneficiary, such as a widow, entitled to a life interest only may postpone distribution, & that in these cases sect. 33 places the personal representatives substantially in the position of trustees. The provision in sect. 39 (1) (ii), conferring on personal representatives " all the powers, discretions & duties conferred or imposed by law on trustees holding land upon an effectual trust for sale " does not operate referentially to make Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (2), applicable to pure personalty. Accordingly, where under the will of a testator unauthorised investments are retained under a power to postpone conversion, the rule laid down in Howe v. Lord Dartmouth (1802), 7 Ves. 137a, still remains applicable in regard to the income payable to a tenant for life.—Re TROLLOPE'S WILL TRUSTS, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. TROLLOPE, [1927] 1 Ch. 596; 96 L. Being unable to effect a sale of a certain dwelling-house property which upon its conversion into money would form part of the residuary estate, the exors. leased it for 16 months, reserving to themselves the right to determine the lease if they should wish to sell. A few weeks later they & the tenant entered into an agreement, called an " option to purchase," under which he made a cash payment & agreed to make monthly payments thereafter in addition to rent, & which also provided that on $1,000 being thus paid, or at any sooner time, he would be entitled to a conveyance, the amounts so paid as well as the rent to be credited on the purchase price, & the balance to be secured by mtge. payable in monthly payments. The " option " was stated to be irrevocable within the time for " acceptance " thereof, but was to remain in force only so long as the purchaser remained tenant of the property, & payment of $1,000 at any time during the continuance of the agreement, was to constitute the " acceptance " of the option :—Held : a sale within the power given by the will.—CLOSE v. MCMEANS, [1931] 3 W. 6770a. Negligence.]—A co. was formed for the purpose of buying the business of a firm of bill brokers, & by the memorandum of assocn. the directors were empowered to buy it upon such terms & under such stipulation as to guarantee or otherwise as might be agreed upon. The prospectus referred to the memorandum of assocn. & to a certain deed of covenant. By that deed the business was assigned to the co., & all accounts, except such as the directors should require to be reserved & excepted, were to be carried on by the co., & the partners in the business guaranteed that all debts due to the firm & taken over by the co. were good. By a second deed of the same date, not mentioned or disclosed to the shareholders, assets of the firm to the nominal value of £4,213,896 were reserved & excepted, & provisions were made for guaranteeing payment by the partners of the balance which, after a certain period & under certain arrangements, should not be got in on this account. The co. carried on business for some time, & then stopped payment. A bill was filed by the co. against the living directors & the exors. of a deceased director stating these facts, & that the co. had lost £1,500,000 by taking the liabilities of the business, & by the insufficiency of the guarantee, & charged that the directors had been guilty of a breach of duty in buying the business without obtaining the sanction of a general meeting, & in not taking mtges. on the property of the partners in order to secure the guarantee, but no fraud was charged

The partition was built, pltf. contributed the $1,000 & the lessees went into possession. H. died in Jan. 1923, & his wife, deft. A. & deft. co., the executors named in the will, obtained probate thereof. In Oct. 1923, M. made an assignment in bkpcy. & deft. co. was appointed custodian of the bkpt. estate. Pltf.'s claim in this action was to recover a large sum made up of rent, taxes, cost of repairs & interest. D. died, & at the time of his death was under contract with the purchaser of the adjoining house, No. 11, to erect a garden fence for him & to give him a similar right of way to his garden. Pltf. entered No. 10 shortly after the death of D. & a few days later H., a sub-contractor, on the orders of W., the builder of the houses, erected the fence at the back of No. 11 so as to constrict the right of way granted by D. to pltf. Pltf. sued defts., the exors. of D. as exors., & by his amended statement of claim founded his action (a) in breach of covenant, & (b) in nuisance, but it was argued solely as an action of tort. These facts being proved by pltf., defts. called no evidence, & there was no evidence of the contract of D. with W., the builder. Deft., as sole exor. of testatrix, employed to wind up her estate a solr. who, unknown to him, had at one time been suspended from practice, & who obtained from the first pltf. the Post Office Savings Bank deposit book & the Savings Certificates. Deft. heard for the first time of the solr.'s suspension three months later, when the first pltf. told him of it. Under deft.'s written authority, a warrant valued at £62 4*s.* had been issued in favour of the solr.'s firm, & the first pltf. wrote to deft. objecting to his having taken that course. Later, the first pltf. asked deft. to employ another solr., but deft. did not do so, as the solr. was then promising to settle the matter. Ultimately the solr. absconded, & the sums of £14 14*s.* 5*d.* & £62 4*s.* were not recovered. 74a. —— ——.]—Applts. were brought before a magistrate in Trinidad under sect. 5 of the French Guiana Extradition Ordinance of Trinidad charged with being fugitive criminals from French Guiana, where there is a penal settlement. At the hearing it was proved that they had each been convicted in France of a specified crime, & had each received a sentence of imprisonment which was unexpired. The magistrate made an entry in his magistrate's book against their names "extradition ordered." He did not, however, make, as he should have done, an order under Extradition Act, 1870 (c. 52), s. 10 (made applicable by sect. 5 of the Ordinance), for committal to await the Governor's warrant for surrender. Instead another magistrate, who had not heard the case, made a detention order under sect. 3 of the Ordinance, which section applies to suspected fugitives. Upon habeas corpus proceedings:—Held: the appellants should be released: (1) because under the terms of the extradition treaty with France they could be extradited only if the crimes of which they had been convicted were committed in French territory, & there was no evidence that that was so, nor was it necessarily involved in the convictions; (2) because sects. 11 & 12 of the local Summary Conviction Offences (Procedure) Ordinance did not make the entry in the magistrate's book equivalent to an order under Extradition Act, 1870 (c. 52), s. 10, & the irregularities with regard to the order signed prevented the detention of applts. from being warranted.—KOSSEKECHATKO v. A.-G. Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (c. 69), s. 5, provides : " A fugitive when apprehended shall be brought before a magistrate. . . . If . . . such evidence is produced as . . . raises a strong or probable presumption that the fugitive committed the offence mentioned in the warrant . . . the magistrate shall commit the fugitive to prison to await his return " :—Held : in requiring, as a condition of committing an alleged fugitive, such evidence as raises " a strong or probable presumption " that he committed the offence, the sect. means such evidence as, if it remained uncontradicted at the trial, would entitle a reasonable jury to convict the alleged fugitive upon it.

Where, in proceedings under this sect., a magistrate has found that the evidence produced before him raises a strong or probable presumption that the alleged fugitive is guilty of the offence & has committed him, & the alleged exception to the definition so that it must now be read as meaning that the expression " legislatures," where there are local legislatures as well as a central legislature, means the central legislature only ; but, in respect of the Commonwealth of Australia, means the Parliament of the Commonwealth only when it has exercised its powers to deal with the surrender of fugitive offenders between the Commonwealth & other parts of His Majesty's dominions. The Commonwealth Service & Execution of Process Act, 1901, was not an exercise by the Commonwealth of any overriding powers which the Commonwealth possesses in respect of the subject-matter of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (c. 69).—Re MUNRO, [1935] N. n ii. —— Jurisdiction of States.]—For the purposes of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, Australia is one British possession. But within the several States, State judicial officers have authority under the law of the " possession " & so are competent to act under the provisions of that statute. A New Zealand warrant was brought to Australia & indorsed by a police magistrate for New South Wales under sect. 13 of Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881. Deft. was arrested under the warrant & was brought before a stipendiary magistrate at Sydney, who made an order reciting that he was satisfied, as required by sect. 14 of Fugitive Offenders Act, that the warrant was issued by a person having lawful authority to issue it & directing that the deft. be returned to New Zealand :—Held : the New South Wales magistrate had jurisdiction to order the return of deft. under sect. 14 of Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881.—MCARTHUR v. WILLIAMS (1936), 55 C. sb. Authentication of warrant & depositions.]—In proceedings before a magistrate under Fugitive Offenders' Act, 1881, the endorsed warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive bore the signature of a person who signed as a magistrate ; the signature was certified by the Acting British Resident of the locality. A witness before the magistrate gave evidence identifying the signature of the magistrate & of the Resident, & stated that the magistrate was de facto exercising jurisdiction. Depositions put before the magistrate bearing the endorsement " True Copy " were similarly signed, certified, & identified :—Held : both the warrant & the copy of the depositions were duly authenticated as required by Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, ss. 5, 29. —Re POUNDALL, Ex p. WILLIAMS (1931), 48 N. sd. Application of Order in Council—How proved.]—Promulgation of an Order in Council may be proved by the production of a copy of the Government Gazette containing the notice of proclamation of the Order in Council. The application of Fugitive Offenders' Acts, 1881 & 1915, to a Protected State by Order in Council, which is proclaimed in the London Gazette, may be proved as an Act of State by tendering a copy of such Gazette. An Order in Council of the State of Perak made the penal code of the Straits Settlements applicable in Perak " upon the publication thereof in the Gazette." A book containing such Order was in evidence before a magistrate & contained a note that the Order was published in the Perak Government Gazette of a certain date :—Held : this notification afforded prima facie evidence of the due publication of the penal code in the State of Perak since it fell within the terms of N.S.W. 44a. "Occupier" of factory.]—Resp. co. was charged, as occupier of a factory, which was subject to certain regulations made in pursuance of the Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 79, for the generation, transformation & distribution & use of electrical energy, with having neglected to observe a certain provision of the regulations, in that, certain work having to be done on a switchboard for high pressure situated in the power-station, the co. failed to make dead the switchboard, contrary to the requirements of the regulations, & that, in consequence of such neglect, a workman was killed. The work on the switchboard was being carried out by another co., & at the time of the accident the work had not yet been completed nor had the switchboard been handed over in working order to resp. co. The justices dismissed the charge, on the ground that in the circumstances resp. co. was not the occupier within the meaning of the Act at the time of the accident :—Held : (1) as the object of the switchboard was to control the distribution of extremely powerful electrical energy which came from resp. co.'s power-house, resp. co. was the occupier, within the meaning of the Act, & was therefore guilty of the offence with which it was charged ; (2) as the switchboard in question was not a "machine or implement moved by steam, water or other mechanical power," within sect. 142 of the Act of 1901, that sect. was of no avail to the resp. co.—TURNER v. COURTAULDS, LTD., [1937] 1 All E. 68a. —— ——.] — Resps., the occupiers of a factory, provided adequate guards for securely fencing the mill-gearing, & exhibited a notice prohibiting workmen from removing any guard without special instructions. The workmen removed nine guards for the purpose of setting the rollers, &, having replaced only eight of the guards, started the rollers. Owing to their neglect, one workman, who slipped & fell, was dragged into the coupling gear & was killed. An information against resps. under 1901 Act, s. 136, for neglecting to observe the provision of sect. 10 (1) (c) that the mill-gearing must be securely fenced, was dismissed, on the grounds that resps. had taken all adequate precautions by providing the necessary guards, & that it was the fault of the workmen that caused the accident :—Held : under sect. 10 it was the duty of resps. not merely to provide guards, but to fence the machinery securely, & as they had not performed this duty, the justices ought to have convicted them.—THOMAS v. BOLTON (THOMAS) & SON, LTD. 68b. —— ——.]—Resps. were charged with having failed to have certain mill gearing in their factory securely fenced, or in such position or of such construction as to be equally safe to every person employed or working in their factory, in consequence of which one of their workmen was injured. The mill gearing consisted of a countershaft 12½ ft. from the ground to which a belt was attached, & the workman was injured in replacing the belt. The justices dismissed the charge, holding that the said mill gearing need not be fenced, as it was as safe as it would be if fenced :—Held : as the essential purpose of Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10 (1) (c), is to provide absolute safety, so far as fencing can provide it, it was clear that the sect. had been contravened, & the offence charged was, therefore, proved. —FINDLAY v. NEWMAN, HENDER & CO., LTD., [1937] 4 All E. Resps. had put up a notice in the factory as follows : " Do not put your hands in the machinery while it is in motion. Persons disregard this notice at their own risk." The pinion-wheels, although usually stopped, were occasionally allowed to remain in motion, for the purpose of greasing. The magistrate dismissed the charge, holding that the pinion-wheels were not dangerous parts of the machine unless in motion, when it was not usual for greasing to be done :—Held : as the wheels were dangerous parts of the machinery, they ought to have been securely fenced, despite the fact that greasing was not usually done while the machinery was in motion, as it cannot be assumed that every person will always exercise the necessary care. The offence charged was therefore proved.—CHASTENEY v. NAIRN (MICHAEL) & CO., LTD., [1937] 1 All E. R. 376 ; 81 Sol. Jo. 238 ; 35 L. G. R. 195, D. C.

72a. —— ——.] — An infant workgirl lost the ring finger of her right hand by accident arising out of & in the course of her employment. She received compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act for a time, & then accepted £20 in purported settlement on the promise by the employer to re-employ her. No memorandum of this agreement was recorded. She worked at this employment for five years, when, by reason of trade conditions, she was discharged. She then commenced an action against the employer for damages for personal injuries resultant from the employer's alleged breach of statutory duty to fence the machine. The action was tried by a judge alone, who found that the injury had been caused by the employer's breach of statutory duty to fence, & that there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf. He, however, also found, having regard to the fact that the infant had received employment for five years after her accident under the agreement, that the agreement to accept compensation, though not registered, was for her benefit & therefore binding, with the result that the action was barred by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 29, of the Act. The infant appealed :—Held : (1) without deciding whether the agreement was for the infant's benefit or whether further proceedings might be taken under the Workmen's Compensation Act, the action for breach of statutory duty failed because, on the evidence, the machine was not a dangerous machine within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10, & therefore there was no duty on the employer to fence it; (2) on the evidence, the accident was caused by the negligence of pltf., which was a complete defence to the action even if such negligence had only been of a contributory character.—HIGGINS v. HARRISON (1932), 25 B. 72b. ——— What amounts to "dangerous."]—Pltf. was employed by defts., a firm of brickmakers, & was being taught to drive a mechanical excavator. When going, as he was entitled to do, to the tool-box, he slipped & his leg was caught & severely injured by a wheel of the machine which was not cased or fenced. No negligence on the part of anyone was alleged. Pltf. claimed that the absence of fencing made the machine a dangerous machine, & claimed damages for breach of statutory duty:—Held: in considering whether machinery is dangerous, it must not be assumed that everybody will always be careful. A part of a machine is dangerous if it is a possible cause of injury to anybody acting in a way in which a human being may be reasonably expected to act in circumstances which may be reasonably expected to occur. In the circumstances the part of the machine complained of was a dangerous one within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10.—WALKER v. BLETCHLEY FLETTONS, LTD., [1937] 1 All E. R. 170.

76a. ——— ———.]—A workman in a factory injured his hand in a machine so constructed that it could only be operated by the workman actuating a safety device with one hand & the operating lever with the other. On the hearing of an information against the occupiers of the factory charging them with an offence against sect. 10 of 1901 Act, the justices held that the machine was "equally safe to every person employed or working in the factory as it would be if it were securely fenced" within sub-sect. (1) (c) of that sect., & they therefore dismissed the information:—Held: the word "safe" in the sub-sect. meant actually safe, not merely reasonably or practically safe, & the justices ought to have convicted resps.—SOWTER v. STEEL BARREL CO., LTD. Machinery equally safe fenced or unfenced—Overhead shaft.]—Resps. were the occupiers of a factory in which was a machine driven by a pulley fixed on a horizontal shaft, which formed part of the mill gearing. The driving belt slipped off the pulley & an employee of resps. attempted to put it back while the shaft was running & sustained injuries. The shaft & pulley were about thirteen feet from the floor & they were not fenced or guarded. In attempting to put on the belt the workman stood on a beam about seven feet from the floor, & was acting contrary to resps.' instructions. Resps. were summoned for not having the shaft fenced, but the justices, being of opinion that any fence would have been useless owing to the shaft being thirteen feet above the ground, dismissed the case:—Held: the finding of the justices was not equivalent to a finding that the shaft was "in such position or of such construction as to be equally safe to every person employed or working in the factory as it would be if it were securely fenced," which was the requirement of 1901 Act, s. 10 (1) (c), & there would have been no evidence to support the latter finding.—ATKINSON v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. 76c. Statutory duty to use guard.]—An infant employee in a woodworking factory was injured while operating a spindle machine. The machine had been supplied with a guard, but in view of the waste of time caused by the use of the guard, the employee was instructed by his employers to operate the machine without the guard, & was doing so at the time of the accident. Having accepted compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act, the infant employee brought an action alleging a breach by his employers of Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 10, & argued that the compensation he had accepted had been paid under a contract that was not for his benefit & one that, being an infant, he was entitled to repudiate. The employers contended that the obligation to use a guard imposed upon a workman by the Woodworking Machinery Regulations, 1922, reg. 23, is absolute, & cannot be waived or abrogated by an order of his employers, & that the accident was due to the breach of the employee's statutory duty:—Held: (1) the employers, by ordering their employee not to use the guard, had failed to provide a guard within the meaning of the regulations. There was therefore no guard provided within reg. 23, & there had been no breach by the employee of that regulation; (2) (per GREER, L.J.) the employers were not entitled to take advantage of their own wrong in ordering the guard not to be used; (3) the infant employee's election to accept compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Acts was not for his benefit & was therefore not binding upon him.—MURRAY v. SCHWACHMAN, LTD., [1937] 2 All E. 76a 1. ——— ———.]—Defts. were the occupiers of a factory. A workman in their employment, following his daily duties, climbed up a ladder to the shafting in the dye-house to fix a belt on a pulley, & was caught in the shafting, whirled round & killed. No one actually saw the occurrence, but, as portions of deceased's clothing were on the shaft, they probably got caught in it. An information against defts. charged that, contrary to Factory & Workshop Act, 1901, s. 10 (1) (c), a part of the mill gearing, namely, a line of shafting, was neither securely fenced nor in such a position nor of such construction as to be equally as safe to every person employed or working in the factory as if it had been securely fenced. The justices dismissed the information, but stated a case for the opinion of the K. B. A workman was injured while testing the machinery of the saw in a manner which was held to be the direct cause of the accident. In an action for damages for personal injuries it was argued on behalf of the workman that, in order to prevent him from obtaining compensation based upon a breach of a statutory duty, there must be contributory negligence on the part of the workman limited to acts done in breach of some order or done outside the ambit of his employment :—Held : the negligence of a workman which would prevent him from obtaining compensation based upon a breach of a statutory duty was negligence of the ordinary kind, & as the workman had been negligent in the present case he could not recover.—CRAZE v. MEYER-DUMORE BOTTLERS' EQUIPMENT CO., LTD., [1936] 2 All E. Duty to keep in repair & free from obstruction —Part of factory in occupation of lessee.]—[supply of mechanical power referred to in Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 149 (1), is not limited to the case of supply by the owner of the building, & there is no reason to read into the sub-sect. after the word " supplied " the words " by the owner."

X. owned a building which was a factory where more than forty persons were employed, & carried on business as a shirt manufacturer in the basement & on the ground & first floors. The second floor was unoccupied. The third & fourth floors were let to Y., who carried on business there as a blouse manufacturer, employing more than forty persons. The factory of X. & that of Y. were respectively worked by separate & distinct electric motors, driven by electricity generated & supplied by the electricity undertaking of a municipal corpn. & each factory had a separate meter. Without this supply of electricity the electric motors could not be driven :—Held : mechanical power, namely, electrical current, was supplied to different parts of the same building within sect. 149 (1). Accordingly, as the building was a tenement factory, etc., the owner, was responsible under sect. 14 (6), (7) of the Act that the means of escape in case of fire provided throughout the factory, including the two floors occupied by Y., should be maintained in good condition & free from obstruction.—MUMBY v. VOLP, [1930] 1 K. 138b. —— ——.]—A workman in a ship in dock fell through a hatchway of which the fencing had become loose & was injured. He was employed in replacing the insulation on refrigerator pipes, & his employers were in no way connected with either of defts. He sued the stevedores working on the hatch, & the owners, for negligence & breach of their statutory duty to light the ship efficiently & to fence the hatchway while it remained open. The Factory & Workshop, Dangerous & Unhealthy Industries Regulations, 1934, reg. 12, provides that decks where work is being done must be efficiently lighted when "processes," which include unloading, are being carried on. Defts. contended that the "process" was finished when the hatchways had been fenced in accordance with the regulations; & also that pltf., who was not engaged in any of the processes, was not within the benefit of reg. 37, which provides for the fencing of hatchways:—Held: (1) the process of unloading continues until all the hatch covers have been replaced; (2) on the authority of Manchester Ship Canal Co. v. Director of Public Prosecutions, No. 138a, the effect of Docks Regulations, 1925, was to protect any workman employed in the ship even if not employed on any of the processes & the 1934 Regulations did not withdraw this protection.—HAWKINS v. THAMES STEVEDORE CO., LTD. & UNION COLD STORAGE CO., LTD., [1936] 2 All E. -.]—Pltf., employed as a labourer, was assisting in the unloading of timber from defts.' ship. Having finished unloading one kind of timber, a different skid was required to unload the next kind. It was suggested to pltf. that a suitable skid was to be found in the after part of the ship & he proceeded there in search of one. In a badly lighted part of the deck space he fell down an open hatch & was injured. It was contended for defts. that there was no invitation to pltf. to go to the part of the ship where the accident happened. Pltf. relied upon a breach of the regulations made under the Factory & Workshops Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 79, namely, that in breach of reg. 12 (c) the deck space was insufficiently lighted & in breach of reg. 37 (a) the hatch was insufficiently fenced. The only fence in the present case was some distance from the hatch & in any event of an insufficient height:—Held: (1) pltf. was an invitee & was entitled to recover; (2) in the above reg. 12 (c) "required to proceed" does not necessarily mean ordered to proceed; but includes any place where a workman might properly go for ropes, slings, skids, etc.; (3) in the above reg. 37 (a) "accessible" means accessible without reasonable let or hindrance & the "fence" is a fence situated in close proximity to a single hatch.—HENAGHAN v. REDERIET FORANGIRENE, [1936] 2 All E. 138d. Hatch covering not strengthened—Docks Regulations, 1934.]—Five stevedores were loading a ship, &, following instructions given to them by the hatch foreman, a servant of deft. co., placed 49 tons of iron upon a between-deck hatch covering. The hatch covering collapsed & pltfs. fell into the hold & were injured. The claim in negligence was barred by the doctrine of common employment, & reliance was placed upon a breach of statutory duty imposed by Docks Regulations, 1934, regs. 36, 38, made under Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22). Reg. 36 requires a deck-stage or cargo-stage to be substantially constructed, & reg. 38 provides that no cargo shall be loaded or unloaded by a fall or sling at any intermediate deck unless either the hatch at that deck is securely fastened or a secure landing platform has been placed across it:—Held: (1) the ct. was bound by the dictum of SCRUTTON, L.J., in Hillen & Pettigrew v. I.C.I. (Alkali), Ltd., to hold that the hatch of a ship is not a deck-stage or cargo-stage within the meaning of that word in reg. 36; (2) the placing of the weight of iron upon the hatch coverings when they were not so strengthened & reinforced as to be capable of bearing the weight imposed upon them was a breach of reg. 38; (3) reg. 38 imposes a duty upon the shipowner & does not impose a duty upon the persons employed in the process of loading or unloading. It could not, therefore, be said that pltfs. were guilty of any breach of statutory duty.—HANLON v. PORT OF LIVERPOOL STEVEDORING CO., LTD., [1937] 4 All E. R. 39.

q 1. —— Defective hoist—Liability of scaffolding firm.]—A scaffolding firm were employed by builders to erect a hoisting machine for use in the construction of a building which the builders were erecting. The scaffolding firm erected the machine & handed it over to the builders. It was not used until after it was handed over; when it collapsed, owing to defects in its construction, causing injuries to certain workmen:—Held: the scaffolding firm were guilty of an offence under para. 4 (a) of the Building (Amendment) Regs., 1931, in respect that a duty of compliance with the Regs. was imposed upon them as well as upon the builders; & the fact that the Regs. applied only to premises in which machinery was "temporarily used" did not preclude the commission of an offence under para. 4 (a) before the date on which the machine was brought into actual use.—SCAFFOLDING (GREAT BRITAIN), LTD. v. STHERN, [1936] S. machinery. By sect. 105 the provisions of the Acts with respect (inter alia) to fines in respect of death or injury are applicable as if any premises on which machinery worked by steam, water, or other mechanical power is temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building or any structural work in connection with a building were included in the word "factory," & as if the person who by himself, his agents or workmen, temporarily uses any such machinery for the before-mentioned purpose were the occupier of a factory. The Secretary of State, in pursuance of s. 79, made certain regulations casting upon employers of workmen the duty of fencing floor-openings with a suitable guard rail & toe board or other efficient means:—Held: (1) the words "temporarily used" are not confined to the actual moment when the machinery is in use, but extend to the whole period during which the machinery is available for use in the constructional work, & therefore that persons who had brought such machinery upon the premises were liable to conviction as the occupiers of a factory in respect of the death of a workman who fell through an unfenced shaft at a time when the mechanical hoist for which the shaft was made was not in use; (2) the words "employers of workmen" imposed upon sub-contractors, engaged in laying floors in a building in course of erection, liability in respect of the death of one of their workmen who fell through an unguarded well hole which the sub-contractors had left for a staircase in the construction of which the sub-contractors were not concerned.—BARNETT v. CAXTON FLOORS, LTD., BUTLER v. KLEINE PATENT FIRE RESISTING FLOORING SYNDICATE, LTD. 153b. —— Electric crane.]—By para. 31 of the Building Regulations, 1926, made under Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), which apply to all premises on which machinery worked by steam, water or other mechanical power is temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building: "Any part of the premises in which any person is habitually employed shall be covered in such a manner as to protect any person who is working in that part from being struck by any falling material or article."

Pltf., a bricklayer, having been struck while at work on a building under reconstruction by bricks falling from a higher floor & thereby injured, claimed damages for negligence, as having been due to the breach of a statutory regulation—namely, para. 31 set out above. The county ct. judge dismissed the action on the ground that the scaffolding where the accident happened having only been in position for a day & a half, neither pltf. nor any other person was habitually employed there. On appeal:—Held: (1) "mechanical power" includes an electric crane; (2) the regulation assumed that workmen would have to move about from one part of the premises to another & imposed a duty upon the employers to afford protective cover against falling material in all parts of the building where it might be required, for the benefit of any person who might be working there. Pltf. was therefore entitled to recover damages for his injury.—KEARNS v. GEE, WALKER & SLATER, LTD., [1937] 1 K. B. 187; [1936] 3 All E. R. 151; 106 L. J. K. B. 16; 155 L. T. 519; 52 T. L. 180b. —— Extensive building site—House on site completed.]—Injuries were sustained by two workmen in the employ of resps., who were contractors engaged in the erection of a number of houses on a large area of unenclosed land. At one point on the building site was a mortar mill driven by a petrol engine, & there was also on the site a concrete mixer on wheels, which was moved about the site as occasion required. In the first case the workman injured himself while working on the roof of a house which had almost been completed. The mortar mill was 100 yds. distant from the house, & was not within its curtilage or precincts. In the second case the accident occurred in a completed house from which the mortar mill was 25 yds. & the concrete mixer about 400 yds. distant; neither of these machines had any connection with the accident. In both cases the workmen were disabled for more than three days, but resps. did not send written notice to the inspector of the district. Informations for failing to give notice were preferred against resps. under the Notice of Accidents Act, 1906 (c. 53), as amended by Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42). The justices dismissed both informations:—Held: (without deciding whether an extensive building site may be a "factory" within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 105 (1)), the question of the extent of "premises on which machinery . . . is temporarily used for the purpose of the construction of a building" was one of degree & therefore of fact; & the justices had not misdirected themselves in holding that a house on such a site, when completed, or nearly completed, became a separate set of premises, which could not be deemed to be a "factory" within the Act.—PEASE v. SIMMS (W. No notices containing the terms of the agreement were kept by resps. as required by Truck Act, 1896 (c. 44), & no particulars in writing were supplied to applt. as required by that Act:—Held: the agreement was a clear attempt to evade the above Act. 264b. ——.]—By order dated Mar. 3, 1897, the Secretary of State exempted from the provisions of Truck Act, 1896 (c. 44), persons engaged in the weaving of cotton in the county of Lancashire. Resp., a weaver of cotton in Lancashire employed by applts., was negligent in performing certain work &, in accordance with a custom which had long existed in the Lancashire trade, the employers deducted a reasonable sum from the "standard list" rates of wages which had been agreed between the employers' & workers' organisations, as the remuneration for good, merchantable cloth, & paid her the balance as her wages:—Held: this deduction was not illegal as being in contravention of the Truck Acts.—HART v. RIVERSDALE MILL CO., [1928] 1 K. 264c. ——.]—Pltf. was a weaver in defts.' employment & his wages were calculated on the amount & kind of cloth woven in each week in accordance with a uniform list of prices agreed between the employer's & workmen's unions. According to the list of prices, pltf. became entitled for the week ending Aug. 1, 1928, after agreed deduction to a sum of £2 5*s.* 0½*d.*, but defts. only paid him £2 4*s.* 0½*d.*, claiming the right to deduct 1*s.* in respect of three yards of cloth woven with a fault rendering them unmerchantable. The evidence showed that it had been the practice of the mill for many years to make deductions for work not done with reasonable care & skill, the deductions not exceeding in amount the loss sustained by the employers & often not being exacted. A similar usage existed in the bulk of the mills carrying on the Lancashire weaving trade, though some of the mill owners were trying to do without deductions:—Held: this practice was not rendered illegal by the Truck Act, 1831 (c. 37), s. 3, as it did not involve a deduction for bad work from ascertained wages, but a deduction for bad work made in calculating the wages.—SAGAR v. RIDEHALGH (H.) & SON, LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 310; 100 L. The father failed to pay the rent for the house, & resps. deducted the rent from applt.'s wages, applt. signing a written consent to the deduction in order to save the family from eviction. Applt. brought an action to recover sums amounting to £37 15*s.* 4*d.*, which he alleged were illegally deducted :—Held : he was entitled to recover the sum claimed as the deductions were illegal, null & void under Truck Act, 1831 (c. 37), ss. 2, 3.—PENMAN v. FIFE COAL CO., LTD., [1936] A. One was an application to defts. to allot to her a number of shares in deft. co. The other contained (inter alia) a request that " you [the co.] should deduct from my wages each week & allocate towards payment for my shares the following amounts. . . . Similar applications & requests were later made in respect of further shares. For some weeks pltf. received her net wages in coin & an envelope containing the share subscription in coin, which was immediately handed back to defts. Thereafter pltf. was handed only the net amount & a receipt for the deductions made. Pltf. sued to recover the amount of her wages which had been applied in payment of shares. Defts. counterclaimed the amount due in respect of unpaid instalments of shares :—Held : (1) the agreement that deductions should be made from pltf.'s wages was illegal under Truck Acts, & pltf. was entitled to recover the sum claimed, there being no distinction between the two methods employed for the deductions ; (2) the agreement to take & pay for shares was not severable from the illegal agreement relative to deductions, & the counterclaim failed.—KENYON v. DARWEN COTTON MANUFACTURING CO., LTD., [1936] 2 K. There was no evidence of a statutory defence provided by sect. 83 of Early Closing Act that the employer had used due diligence to enforce the provisions of the Act or that the offence had been committed without the employer's knowledge, consent or connivance. Pltfs., the county council, owned land adjoining one of the approaches & built a school on it. Defts. denied pltfs.' right to free access to the school over the approach :—Held : as the old highway consisted of the approaches to the ferry plus the passage across the river, & the substituted highway consisted of the approaches to the bridge plus the bridge, & as the old approaches were highways to which owners would be entitled to access, the substituted approaches were highways by which adjoining owners had similar rights of access, & defts.' claim was ill founded.—YORKSHIRE, EAST RIDING, COUNTY COUNCIL v. SELBY BRIDGE CO. They proved that as long as living memory went there had always been at this place a ferry with a uniform rate of charge during the day, though at night a different charge had been made, & at times during the night there had been refusal to carry passengers :—Held : there was evidence from which a presumption ought to be made of a grant in times gone by of a franchise ferry of which pltfs. were not in possession, & though there was evidence of acts which were not permissible by the owner of the ferry, & which were wrongful as between him & the public, such acts were due to ignorance of his rights, & were not sufficient to rebut the evidence of a franchise ferry.—LAYZELL v. THOMPSON (1926), 91 J. Extent of right—Whether exclusive right of ferry—Construction of Act.]—By a private Act pltfs. were empowered to make & maintain a motor road from South Haven Point in the parish of Studland in the county of Dorset to a public road leading from Studland to Swanage. By sect. 56 of the Act they were empowered to establish, maintain, work & use a ferry service for passengers, animals, vehicles & goods between the Sandbanks & South Haven Point within Poole Harbour. By sect. 62, passed for the protection of the Poole Harbour Comrs., pltfs. were required to establish or acquire & thereafter continuously work the ferry by means of a vessel propelled by steam on a chain cable system, & by sects. 62, 97, passed for the benefit of certain landowners, they were required to provide from seven o'clock in the forenoon when summer time should be in force & from eight o'clock in the forenoon at all other times of the year until one hour after sunset on every day a minimum hourly service of vessels from each shore. The two sects. contained provisions enabling Poole Harbour Comrs. & the landowners respectively to exercise certain powers & rights in case pltfs. should cease working the ferry or fail to work it continuously & efficiently. 71a. Exemption from tolls—Crown.]—By a local Act of Parliament private landowners were authorised to establish & maintain a ferry service at Torpoint, Cornwall, across the river Tamar, & to charge tolls for its use. Avoidance of the tolls by the running of any boat service for hire in competition with the ferry was penalised by the Act, but officers & other servants of His Majesty were exempted from this provision, & their vessels were allowed free passage between the points served by the ferry. By another sect. of the Act, the ferry owners & their successors were exempted from the payment of rates & taxes in respect of the ferry. By Ferries (Acquisition by Local Authorities) Act, 1919 (c. 75), deft. council became the owners of the Torpoint ferry. Upon a summons to determine what, if any, officers, men, or other persons in His Majesty's service were entitled to be borne free of charge or toll, by the Torpoint ferry : —Held : the Crown's general prerogative of exemption from the payment of tolls cannot be deemed to have been abandoned by implication, in respect of tolls created by any Act of Parliament, either (a) by reason merely of the specific exemption in such Act of any class of His Majesty's servants from the payment of tolls, nor (b) from the fact that the Crown has foregone or curtailed its rights in any other direction (e.g. that of imposing taxation) elsewhere in such Act.—A.-G. v. CORNWALL COUNTY COUNCIL (1933), 97 J. In an action of trespass for this arrest, defts. gave much evidence to show that P.'s fishery included the place where the pltf. was apprehended. The jury, however, defined the limits of the fishery so as to exclude that place by a few yards; but they also found that P. & defts. believed that it included that place:—Held : defts. were entitled to the protection of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, ss. 35 & 63.—HUGHES v. BUCKLAND (1846), 15 M. & W. 346; 3 Dow. & L. 702; 15 L. Defts. carried on the business of beet sugar manufacturers at a factory abutting on the Ouse some miles above pltf.'s fisheries. Pltf. alleged that in the course of defts.' manufacturing operations, & in particular from Sept. 1933, to Jan. 1934, following the beet harvest, large quantities of refuse & effluent were discharged from the factory into the river, & by reason of that he had suffered damage & his fisheries had been prejudicially affected. He claimed an injunction accordingly & damages. At the hearing evidence was also given as to injury to the fisheries between Sept. 1934, & Jan. 1935:—Held : disturbance of a several fishery is an invasion of a legal right, & in such a case it is not necessary to prove pecuniary loss, but the injury to the legal right carries with it the right to damages; but pltf. had failed to show that the injury to his fisheries had been caused by the acts of defts.—NICHOLLS v. ELY BEET SUGAR FACTORY, LTD., [1936] Ch. 343; 105 L. The owner of the fishing rights over that part of the river affected commenced an action for an injunction & damages against the owners of the gasworks:—Held : it was satisfactorily proved that the effluent from the gasworks was, on each occasion, the cause of the death of the fish, & pltf. was entitled to an injunction & damages.—GRANBY (MARQUIS) v. BAKEWELL URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1923) 87 J. sr. Duty to erect grating in tail race of mill—Although banks of adjoining owner affected.]—Deft. was fined at petty sessions for failing to erect a grating or lattice across the tail race of his mill at a point where the tail race re-enters the river "F." The river "F." is a river in which there are salmon. For a certain distance before & at the point where the tail race re-enters this river it is bounded on both sides by lands that belong to an adjoining owner, & not to the deft., the owner of the mill. There was no grating or lattice on the tail race where it diverged from or re-entered the river; to construct the grating or lattice, it would be necessary to erect piers that would project into the banks, on the side of the tail race, the property of the adjoining owner. Deft. had started the necessary work of erecting the grating, but had abandoned it in consequence of the objection of the adjoining owner to any trespass on his lands. Deft. had the use of the tail race from the moment it left his own lands until it reached the river :—Held : deft. was under a statutory obligation by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 106, s. 76, to erect the grating even though it entailed an interference with the banks of the adjoining owner.—R. In this cove suppliant had set a salmon trap net under licence from the Department of Marine & Fisheries. Dredging operations were being carried on in the vicinity of the breakwater by the Department of Public Works under the supervision & direction of one of its officers. The tug A., hired by resp., whilst moving a loaded scow to the dumping grounds came into contact with suppliant's net, seriously damaging the same. The action was to recover the value, or cost of repairing the net & the loss of the use thereof for about one month :—Held : the master & crew of the tug A., the crew of the scow, & the master & crew of the dredge were servants of the Crown employed upon a public work within sect. 19c of Exchequer Ct. Act, & the ct. had jurisdiction to hear & entertain the action. On the evidence, the net in question was not an interference to navigation within sect. 33 of Fisheries Act, 1927, & the master of the tug A., was negligent in moving the scow as & when he did; suppliant was entitled to damages for the injury caused to his net & damages for the loss of the use of his net.—MASON v. R., [1933] Ex. sz. Order to proceed to nearest port—Onus of proof as to port.]—The master of a trawler, who had refused to comply with a direction to proceed to Stornoway given by a British sea fishery officer, was charged with contravening Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22), s. 14 (2). Stornoway was not the nearest port to the place where the direction was given, & the prosecutor made no attempt to prove that it was the most convenient port :—Held : the fact that a sea fishery officer directed accused to go to Stornoway raised a strong presumption that Stornoway was the most convenient port within Sea Fisheries Act, 1883, s. 12 (8); it was open to accused to rebut that presumption; &, as accused had not been allowed to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses on the question of convenience, it was impossible to hold that he ought to have been convicted.—MACKENZIE v. JINKS, [1934] S. r i. —— Grant of licence—Validity of regulations.]—Sect. 69A of the Fisheries Act provided, among other things: that, under licence from the Minister a vessel registered as a British ship in Canada & owned by "a Canadian or a Canadian co. with its principal place of business in Canada," is allowed to use an "otter" or other similar trawl. Moreover under this Statute, rules & regulations might be made by Order in Council, & the same were made providing that such licence could be granted only to "Canadian built" vessels, & that after Apr. 1932, none but such would be eligible for licence, & further providing that after Apr. 1, 1930, a licence fee of one cent a pound on the fish caught should be payable. This fee in the case of deft. would amount to between $130,000 to $150,000 a year :—Held : as the regulations ignore the statutory limitation to British ships registered in Canada or owned by a Canadian, etc., & fix as the condition upon which the licence would issue that such ships be Canadian built, & such condition being obviously beyond the scope of the Act, & the delegated powers, such regulations are ultra vires, unenforceable, null & void.—R. v. NATIONAL FISH CO., LTD., [1931] Ex. steam fishing boat, brought an action in the county ct. against deft., who was a member of the crew of the boat, claiming a sum as money lent by them to deft. Deft. alleged in defence that the sum claimed had been paid to him as wages; &, further, that the county ct. had no jurisdiction, the question between the parties being a dispute concerning wages within Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), s. 387, which could only be dealt with by a superintendent thereunder. At the trial it was found as a fact that the sum claimed had been lent to deft., & that there was no real dispute concerning wages: —Held: (1) the county ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the action notwithstanding the section, inasmuch as that ct. had all along had jurisdiction to entertain an action for money lent & the section did not either expressly or by implication exclude that jurisdiction; (2) the jurisdiction of the superintendent under the sect. did not arise until a party to the dispute called him to decide it, & here no party had called upon him to do so.—STURLEY v. POWELL, [1930] 1 K. In each case the questions whether the master fairly & honestly on reasonable ground believed it necessary to take shelter, & whether he exercised reasonable skill, competence & courage in the circumstances, are questions of fact for the tribunal whose duty it is to find the facts.

(2) The Convention of Oct. 20, 1818, between Great Britain & the United States, respecting fisheries & boundary lines, did not apply to the Pacific waters so far as fisheries were concerned, & therefore could not be available as justification for the entry in question.—THE MAY v. R., [1931] S. h ii. —— ——.]—(1) To justify, as against incurrence of penalty under the Customs & Fisheries Protection Act, R. S. C., 1927, s. 10, a foreign fishing vessel entering Canadian territorial waters on the ground of "stress of weather," there must be such a condition of atmosphere & sea as would produce in the mind of a reasonably competent & skilful master, possessing courage & firmness, a well grounded bonâ fide apprehension that if he remains outside such waters he will put in jeopardy his vessel & cargo. A want of bona fides would abrogate any right or privilege to shelter given by the statute. Further, weaknesses in a vessel may be such, as instanced in certain respects in the present case, as, e.g., glass of inadequate thickness in pilot house windows a small height from the sea, constituting a special danger from waves, that any distress arising from them should be deemed a distress created by the owner or master himself.

(2) The Convention of Oct. 20, 1818, between Great Britain & the United States, respecting fisheries & boundary lines, has no application to Canadian territorial waters on the Pacific Coast, so far as fisheries are concerned. Even if it had, deft. vessels could claim no privilege under it, as the only permission to take shelter in Canadian waters given by the proviso to art. 1 thereof is permission to enter "bays or harbours," & the place where they were seized was not shown to be a bay or harbour.—THE QUEEN CITY v. R., THE TILLIE M. v. R.; THE SUNRISE v. R., [1931] S. S.* was shortly afterwards seized for an infraction of sect. 10 (c) of Customs & Fisheries Protection Act: —Held: though an American vessel may, under Fisheries Treaty, 1818, enter a Canadian port for the purpose of making repairs therein, this did not render lawful the act of her master in purchasing ice as aforesaid, contrary to the provision of Customs & Fisheries Act, & the vessel was lawfully seized & forfeited.—R. v. AUXILIARY FISHING SCHOONER NATALIE S., [1932] Ex. Warranty on order form—Order form retained by seller.]—By Food & Drugs (Adulteration) Act, 1928 (c. 31), s. 29 (1), it is a defence on a prosecution for selling drugs not of the nature, substance or quality demanded by the purchaser for deft. to prove that he purchased the drugs as being of the nature, substance & quality so demanded & with a written warranty to that effect & that he had no reason to believe at the time he sold the drugs that they were otherwise, & that he sold them in the same state as when he bought them. Applts. gave an order for drugs on an order form specifying that the goods were ordered on the condition that the suppliers warranted them to be of the nature, substance & quality described in the order. The suppliers placed their initials on the order form & in due course delivered the goods, retaining the order form in their own possession :—Held : the initialled order form was a written warranty within sect. 29 (1), notwithstanding that it did not come into the possession of applts. until after the prosecution had been instituted.—WOOLWORTH (F. 261a. —— Proceedings against previous seller—Previous analysis before proceedings against retailer.]—An inspector appointed under the Sale of Food & Drugs Acts bought a sample of ground ginger from a retail shop. He complied with the provisions of Food & Drugs (Adulteration) Act, 1928 (c. 31), s. 18, with regard to the division of the sample into three parts, delivering one part to the seller & having an analysis made. Upon analysis the ground ginger was found to contain an added preservative, contrary to the provisions of the Public Health (Preservatives, etc., in Food) Regulations, 1925. The retailer was convicted upon an information charging him with the sale of the ground ginger to the prejudice of the purchaser under Food & Drugs (Adulteration) Act, 1928 (c. 31), s. 2. Subsequently, proceedings were commenced against the previous seller of the ground ginger for wilfully neglecting to obey the Public Health (Preservatives, etc., in Food) Regulations, 1925, by selling the ground ginger to the retailer. No further sample was taken of the ground ginger & no further analysis made. No part of the sample that was taken in the first instance was sent to the previous seller of the ground ginger. The magistrate refused to convict on the ground that the provisions of sect. 18 of 1928 Act had not been complied with:—Held: the magistrate was wrong in holding that compliance with the formalities prescribed by sect. 18 of 1928 Act was a condition precedent to the institution of proceedings against the previous seller for a sale to which art. 7 of the Regulations of 1925 applied. When the formalities prescribed by sect. 18 of 1928 Act with regard to taking of sample, division & analysis had been complied with in proceedings as between the purchaser & the retailer, there was no necessity for those formalities to be repeated when proceedings were subsequently taken against the previous seller under art. 7 of the Regulations of 1925.—TWYNHAM v. BADCOCK, [1932] 2 K. 439a. Protection of employer under Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63)—When applicable.]—(1) Held: the language of Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), s. 12 (2), has no relation & does not apply to a case where a defect of deft.'s machinery or a default of an employee under deft.'s control is the cause of the deficiency. This sub-sect. deals with the case where the deficiency is due to a bonâ fide mistake or accident or other causes beyond deft.'s control, that is to say, not with negligence or other conduct of deft.'s servants or other persons under his control. In such a case deft. may avail himself of the provisions of sect. 12 (5) if he satisfies the provisions of that sub-sect., by having any other person, including an employee, whom he charges as the actual offender, brought before the ct.

(2) On the question whether proceedings against defts. for contravening this sub-sect. were " proceedings under this Act in respect of an alleged deficiency of weight " within sect. 12 (2), whilst LORD HEWART, C.J., did not express a decided opinion, one way or the other, AVORY, J., expressed the view that proceedings under sect. 6 (2) of the Act were in respect of an alleged deficiency of weight, & TALBOT, J., expressed an opinion to the contrary.

(3) On proceedings against bakers under sect. 6 (2) of the Act defts. duly laid an information against one of their employees under sect. 12 (5); having him brought before the ct. as the actual offender & tendering evidence in order to prove that they had used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act, & that their employee had committed the offence without their consent, connivance, or wilful default. At petty sessions, the information against the employee was dismissed, but defts. were convicted. Defts. appealed to Quarter Sessions:—Held: the Ct. of Quarter Sessions had no power to exempt defts. from any penalty under sect. 12 (5) on the ground (per LORD HEWART, C.J., & TALBOT, J.) that having regard to the fact that the employee had been acquitted at petty sessions, it was not open to defts. to contend at Quarter Sessions that the employee was wrongly acquitted, & on the ground (per AVORY, J.) that in any case on the facts the employee charged was not the actual offender within the sub-sect.—WALKLING, LTD. v. ROBINSON (1930), 99 L. 439b. —— —— Exercise of due diligence by employer—Question of fact.]—(1) Where an employer who is charged with an offence against the Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), brings another person before the ct. under sect. 12 (5), as being the actual offender, the question whether the employer has used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act is one of fact & not of law. (2) The result of compliance with sect. 12 (5) is that both the employer & the other person are convicted, but that the latter alone is liable to any penalty. (3) Qu.: whether in a case where the justices have convicted the employer & have refused to convict the actual offender, the employer may not appeal to quarter sessions. Walkling, Ltd. v. Robinson, No. 439a, is no authority to the contrary, since in that case the employee was found as a fact not to be the actual offender, & an appeal would have involved the allegation that he was wrongly acquitted.—HAMMETT (R. They brought before the ct. as the actual offender one P., a salesman employed at the shop. Applts. were convicted, & the summons against P. was dismissed. On appeal quarter sessions found that B.. the manager of the branch, had not exercised due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act, but that in all other respects applts. had exercised due diligence. They held that the manager's failure was the failure of applts., & dismissed the appeal:—Held: quarter sessions were entitled so to hold.

439j. Comparison with other loaves—Reasonable number to be weighed.]—Two informations under Sale of Food (Weights & Measures) Act, 1926 (c. 63), s. 6 (2), were preferred against defts. (i.) for having in their possession for sale thirty-seven loaves of bread, the net weight of each loaf not being one pound or an integral number of pounds; (ii.) for selling a loaf of bread the net weight of which was not one pound or an integral number of pounds. Under the supervision of an inspector of weights & measures fifty-six loaves, purporting to be 2-lb. loaves, were taken from a considerably larger number in a cart from which defts.' vanman was delivering bread, & weighed. Nineteen proved to be either of correct weight or of a weight in excess of 2 lb., but thirty-seven were deficient in weight, & in the case of one loaf the deficiency amounted to 2 ozs. 4 drams. That loaf was purchased by the inspector. The justices dismissed both informations, on the ground that defts. were in each case protected by sect. 12 (1):—Held: on the first charge, with respect to each of the thirty-seven loaves, the justices were entitled to look at the average weight of a number of other loaves offered for the sale on the same occasion, but it was not possible for them to hold that thirty-six was not a reasonable number; but on the second charge, the variation from the proper weight in the case of the single article being clearly considerable, they ought not to have had regard to the average weight of other loaves sold, as that inquiry arose only where the variation was inconsiderable.—CAVE v. DUDLEY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY (1934), 103 L. It was contended that as the packages were correct in weight at the time of making up, four days earlier, they were "made up for sale" in the prescribed quantities, & that the offence of having in their possession for sale pre-packed articles of food not being made up in the quantities prescribed by the above sub-sect., had not been committed:—Held: "made up for sale" does not refer to the moment of making up only but to the moment of having in possession for sale, & resps. were guilty of the offence charged.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. ROYAL ARSENAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD., [1936] 1 K. decessor from the register of purveyors of milk in respect of the premises on the ground that they were satisfied that by default of the latter the premises were not in a fit condition for the purposes of a dairy. On May 13, 1930, resps., after hearing applt., decided to remove his predecessor from the register on that ground, & thereupon gave applt. notice that they had so decided. An appeal by applt. under the above sub-sect. against the decision of resps. was dismissed by the magistrate on the ground that applt. was not a "person aggrieved" by the decision within the sub-sect. 476e. Sale of pasteurised milk at several shops in area—Necessity for licence for each shop.]—Milk (Special Designations) Order, 1923, made by the Minister of Health under Milk & Dairies (Amendment) Act, 1922 (c. 54), which provides for the grant of licences to sell milk under special designations, including pasteurised milk, in Sched. IV., sets out the following table of fees payable for licences : "Licence in respect of the establishment in which the process of pasteurising is carried on, & of any shop or other premises in the area of the same licensing authority from which the milk is sold—£1 1*s*." "Licence in respect of any other shop or other premises at or from which the milk is sold—5*s*." Pltfs., who carried on the sale of pasteurised milk at fourteen establishments in the area of the same licensing authority, claimed against the licensing authority a declaration that on the true construction of the above Order they were entitled to receive from the authority, on payment of the sum of 5*s*., a licence for the sale of pasteurised milk within the area :—Held : on the construction of the Order, a dealer's licence at a fee of 5*s*. must be obtained for each shop or premises at which the pasteurised milk is to be sold. The local authority is not authorised by the Order to grant a dealer in return for payment of one sum of 5*s*. a licence to sell at & from as many places as he may choose within the area.

Semble : if a preliminary objection had been taken in limine to the action on the grounds that a person aggrieved by the Order is confined, as regards his remedy, to an appeal to the Minister of Health under clause 9 (2) of the Order, & that the Minister of Health was not a party to the action, that objection would have succeeded, & the action would not have been maintainable.—UNITED DAIRIES (LONDON), LTD. v. HACKNEY BOROUGH COUNCIL (1934), 151 L. 476g i. Milk Marketing Board—Right to accounts.]—A distributor of milk entered into contracts for the supply of milk by registered producers, under which he agreed to make payments direct to the producers for the milk supplied. In an action against him by the Board, established by the Scottish Milk Marketing Scheme, 1931, made under Agricultural Marketing Act, 1931 (c. 44), concluding for an accounting of the milk purchased by him & the payment of the sum due by him as the balance of his intromissions, he maintained that, as a distributor, he was under no obligation to count & reckon with the Board :—Held : the Board, in virtue of their statutory monopoly right to market milk, were entitled to an accounting from a distributor in respect of milk purchased by him from registered producers.—SCOTTISH MILK MARKETING BOARD v. FERGUSON, [1935] S. under the Milk Marketing Scheme (Approval) Order, 1933, empowers the Milk Marketing Board to impose fines on registered producers who sell milk under contracts not in the form prescribed in the Scheme. The Scheme further provides by para. 38 that the Board shall keep a register of producers, & by para. 40 (a) that producers who have in their possession not more than four milch cows, & who do not sell by retail shall be exempt from registration. By para. 41, the Board, on being satisfied that a person who is registered has ceased to be a producer or is exempt from registration, shall remove his name from the register, provided that the name of a person shall not, by reason only that he is exempt from registration, be removed from the register without his consent.

Deft., a farmer, was registered as a producer in 1933, at which time he possessed six milch cows. Later in that year he disposed of two of them, & thereafter never had in his possession more than four milch cows. In 1934 he entered into a contract for the sale of milk, not by retail, which contract was not in the prescribed form :—Held : the Board had power to impose a fine on deft., notwithstanding that at the date of the alleged offence he possessed not more than four milch cows, since he remained a registered producer until his name was removed from the register with his consent.—MILK MARKETING BOARD v. WILLIAMS (1935), 153 L. 476j. —— Right to recover costs of operating scheme—What amounts to.]—Applt. was liable as a registered producer & retailer of milk to contribute to the costs of operating the scheme contained in the Scottish Milk Marketing Scheme (Approval) Order, 1933, made under & in terms of Agricultural Marketing Act, 1931 (c. 42), s. 1 (8), & administered by resps. Under the scheme, which came into operation on Dec. 1, 1933, resps. fixed a price for the sale of milk & realised the unmarketable surplus of milk by selling it in a cheaper market. In computing the costs of operating the scheme resps. included as a cost of operation the difference between the lower price received by them for the surplus milk & the price in the liquid market, upon which basis resps. sought to recover rateably from all registered members of the scheme, including applt., a charge or levy calculated at so much per gallon of milk disposed of by each member. Applt., when called upon to pay this charge or levy for each of the months of Dec. 1933, to July, 1934, inclusive, declined to do so, &, without disputing the arithmetical correctness of the sum claimed, contended that resps. had wrongly & illegally included in their computation of costs the amount of the alleged loss relating to the said sale of surplus milk, & that, as their method of computation & disposal of contributions provided a benefit to ordinary producers to the detriment of producers & retailers, they had acted ultra vires & contrary to the provisions of the scheme. Resps.' basis of computation was in accordance with a previous decision of the Second Division of the Ct. of Session in a recent special case to which applt. was not a party :—Held : the difference between the lower price received by resps. & the price in the liquid market was not a " cost " of operating the scheme ; & the contributions claimed from applt. being unauthorised by the scheme, resps. had acted ultra vires in respect that the disposal of the said contributions conferred a benefit upon the class of ordinary producers at the expense of the class of producers & retailers including applt. —FERRIER v. SCOTTISH MILK MARKETING BOARD, [1937] A. 476l. —— Explanatory leaflet—Whether warranty.] —The Milk Marketing Board was established under the Agricultural Marketing Act, 1931 (c. 42), s. 6, & regulated by a scheme which was one of the Statutory Rules & Orders. The Board also issued an explanatory leaflet which contained (inter alia) the following : " In various parts of the country at the present time the producer-retailer is feeling the pinch of severe undercutting, & the stabilisation of the industry which will result from the operation of the scheme will end all his anxiety under this head since undercutting will be impossible." In an action to enforce certain levies under the scheme deft. set up that the above passage was a representation that undercutting would be stopped by the operation of the scheme & that the Board had failed to stop undercutting. He set this up as a defence upon the footing that the above statement was a warranty or agreement, & also as the basis of a counterclaim claiming damages for breach of duty :— Held : (1) if the passage amounted to a representation at all, it applied wholly to the future, & there was no representation as to any present fact that could be relied upon in law ; (2) there was no duty upon the Board to stop undercutting ; (3) upon the facts the Board had taken all reasonable steps to prevent undercutting.—MILK MARKETING BOARD v. WARMAN & SONS, [1937] 3 All E. PART V. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 3.

508 iii. —— —— —— ——.]—A dairyman was convicted of selling sweet milk which was not genuine, in respect that it contained less than 3 per cent. of milk fat. The alleged deficiency in fat was established, but it was also proved that the milk had not been tampered with in any way, the deficiency being due to the milk having stood for some time in the can, & to the sample having been drawn from a tap at the bottom after the cream had risen. No evidence was led as to the possibility or impossibility of redistributing the constituents of the milk in the can by stirring or otherwise : —Held : accused had failed to rebut the statutory presumption that the milk was not genuine, & the conviction was right.—M'CALLUM v. BROOKS, [1926] S. C. (J.) 39.—SCOT.

k i. —— Price of milk varying with quality supplied—Genuine milk to be supplied.]—Deft. was a shareholder in a certain co-operative dairy society, & she & the other suppliers of milk to the creamery of the said society delivered daily to the creamery quantities of milk. The quantity of milk delivered by each supplier was recorded by weight in pounds, dependent on the number of gallons, & the manager or other official of the creamery took a sample of each delivery, tested it, & ascertained its contents of butter-fats. In return for the said milk delivered by her, deft. received from the creamery : (a) at the end of every month a cash payment per pound of milk delivered, calculated on the average percentage of butter-fats contained in the milk delivered during the month—the greater the content of the butter-fats, the higher the price paid; & (b) each day a quantity of separated milk, which was determined in accordance with the rules of the society & was proportionate to the quantity of milk delivered by deft. to the creamery, or, instead, a cash payment. A sample of deft.'s milk taken by an Inspector of Food & Drugs when the milk was in the course of delivery to the creamery was found on analysis to be inferior to the standard prescribed by regs. 1 & 2 of Sale of Milk (Ir.) Regulations, 1901, & deft. was charged for selling to the creamery, to the prejudice of the purchaser, i.e. the said creamery, within Sale of Food & Drugs Act, 1875 (c. 63), as amended by Sale of Food & Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879 (c. 30), s. 3, an article of food, to wit, milk, which was not of the nature, substance, & quality demanded by the purchaser. No evidence was given by deft. to rebut the presumption of abstraction or adulteration which applied to the said sample by reason of the said regulations. The district justice dismissed the summons :—Held : the district justice was wrong in law in dismissing the summons, as although the price paid by the creamery varied with the quality of the milk supplied, the contract contemplated the supply of genuine milk, & the milk of which the sample was taken was not genuine milk as defined by Sale of Milk (Ir.) Regulations, 1901. —MURPHY v. NICHOLSON, [1931] I. R. 582.—IR.

204 ii. —— Partition by father on remarriage—Allegation by settlor that conveyance in fraud of creditors—Onus of proof.]—In 1904 a Burman executed on his remarriage a deed of partition by which he purported to convey to his daughter, the only child of his first marriage & then eight years of age, immovable property as her one-quarter share of the joint property of that marriage, & he appointed his own mother to take care of it. He remained in possession, but contributed to the support of his daughter, who resided with her maternal grandmother. At the time of the conveyance the father was considerably indebted, & his creditors, finding that they could not attach the property, settled with him upon easy terms. In 1915 the father promised his daughter & her maternal uncle that the property would be restored to her. In 1925 the daughter sued for possession. The father pleaded that the conveyance was in fraud of his creditors, & that the suit was barred by limitation :—Held : upon the whole facts the father had failed to discharge the burden, which was heavily upon him of proving that the conveyance was in fraud of his creditors, & not a genuine conveyance of his daughter's share, possibly liberally calculated; & consequently his possession was not adverse to his daughter, but on her behalf.—MA NGWE NAING v. MAUNG THA MAUNG (1928), I. p iv. —— & illiterate.]—Conveyances set aside on grounds of improvidence, & want of proper professional advice.—

presumption that the donee [illegible] gift unless the donee establishes was the spontaneous act of the donor acting in circumstances which enabled him to exercise an independent will, & which justified the ct. in holding that it was the result of a free exercise of the donor's will. If the evidence establishes the fact above stated it should not be disregarded merely because the donor did not receive independent legal advise. On the other hand, the receipt of independent legal advice may rebut the presumption although it is not acted upon. But to have that effect it must be given with a knowledge of all the relevant circumstances, & be such as a competent & honest adviser would give if acting solely in the interest of the donor.

A Malay woman, who was a great age & wholly illiterate, executed a deed of gift of landed property in Singapore in favour of her nephew, who had the management of all her affairs. Before executing the deed the donor had independent advice from a lawyer who acted in good faith. He was unaware, however, that the gift constituted practically the whole of the donor's property, & did not bring home to her mind that she could more prudently, & equally effectively, benefit the donee by bestowing the property upon him by will:—Held: the gift should be set aside, as the presumption which arose was not rebutted.—INCHE NORIAH v. SHAIK ALLIE BIN OMAR, [1929] A. 889a. —— Independent adviser unaware of extent of property.]—Applt., a medical practitioner & an intimate friend of resp., an elderly widow, attended her professionally during two illnesses in the years 1928 & 1930. He made no charge for his professional services or for the medicines supplied, & had stated that he did not regard her as a paying patient. After her recovery from the second illness, resp. in 1931 executed a deed by which she purported to convey to applt. certain freehold land, together with the building thereon, for the sum of £1,500, but it was not in dispute that no consideration money was paid. Subsequently resp. instituted proceedings to have the conveyance set aside & a reconveyance of the property made to her, alleging that the deed was executed by her under the influence of applt., her medical attendant, & without independent advice. The deed was explained to the patient by her solr., but he was unaware of the proportion the property conveyed bore to her whole estate. Both parties were alive at the date of the trial, & gave evidence:—Held: (1) the relationship of doctor & patient existed between the parties; (2) a person giving independent advice must be aware of the total amount of the donor's property & the proportion the part given bears to the whole; (3) the onus, which lay upon applt., to prove that the gift was the result of the free exercise of resp.'s independent will having been discharged to the trial judge's satisfaction, the ct. in the circumstances of this case could reverse such finding only if there was no evidence at all to support it.—WILLIAMS v. JOHNSON, [1937] 4 All E. 142 1. Necessity for insurable interest.]—A woman, C., on the suggestion of the agent of a friendly society, agreed to take out a policy of industrial assurance on the life of her stepmother, T., & she left it to the agent to take the necessary steps to effect the insurance. She signed no proposal for a policy in favour of T., nor was such a proposal signed by T., who was unaware of the transaction, & there was no evidence to show by whom the proposal, which bore to be signed by T., was in fact signed; but a policy in favour of T. was issued by the society & handed to C., who retained it, & paid premiums on it. C. had no insurable interest in the life of T., & she had no intention of benefiting T., C. having claimed repayment from the society of the premiums paid by her:—Held: C. was entitled to repayment, as, owing to the absence of consensus ad idem, no concluded contract was disclosed either between C. & the society, or between T. & the society.

Opinions, that, on the assumption that a policy on the life of T. for the benefit of C. had been entered into, it was an illegal policy within Life Assurance Act, 1774 (c. 48), & C. was, on that ground also, entitled to repayment of the premiums under Life Assurance Act, 1774 (c. 48), s. 5.—CAME v. CITY OF GLASGOW FRIENDLY SOCIETY, [1933] S. on the death of the life assured varying in amount according to age & the time the policy had been in force; it also contained the following statement: "Twopence per week will assure double the above sums provided that in any case where the amount secured by the larger premium would exceed the limits of assurance prescribed by Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (c. 25), viz., £6 for children under five years of age, & £10 for children under ten years of age, the sum assured shall be limited to £6 or £10 as the case may require." In the policy of 1925 was a statement that the amount payable under it was subject to the limitations of Friendly Societies Act, 1924 (c. 11):—Held: in view of the statements in the two policies limiting the amount insured in each case to the statutory maximum, neither policy contravened the provisions of the Friendly Societies Acts, 1896 & 1924, & was valid.

In 1925 C. signed a proposal for a whole life assurance on the life of her son, then aged one year next birthday, at a weekly premium of one penny for a sum to be assured increasing as per scale up to £15. On the same day she signed a proposal for an endowment assurance on the same life at a weekly premium of threepence for a "sum to be assured £7 14*s.* payable on attainment of age fifteen or in the event of previous death as per scale." Two policies were issued on the basis of these proposals. On the whole-life policy there was this memorandum: "This life is also assured under [the endowment] policy. Accordingly, the full sum assured printed in the schedule will not come into operation until the attainment of the age of ten. The combined amount payable in the event of earlier death shall not exceed £6 on death under age three, £10 under age six, & £15 under age ten":—Held: as the above quoted memorandum cut down the sums payable under the combined policies to the statutory limit, the policies did not contravene the Friendly Societies Act, 1924 (c. 11), & were valid.—Re HIRST & LIVERPOOL VICTORIA FRIENDLY SOCIETY, Re CLARK & LONDON & MANCHESTER ASSURANCE CO., [1930] 2 K. 175c. —— ——.]—Applt. insured her child, who was born on May 2, 1927, a month after its birth, the premium to be 2*d.* a week. Friendly Societies Act, 1924 (c. 11), s. 2 (1), stated that Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (c. 25), s. 62, should have effect "as if for that section the following section were substituted," & provided that a society should not insure or pay on the death of a child under three years of age any sum of money which exceeded or which, when added to any amount payable on the death of that child by any other society or branch or by any trade union, exceeded £6. By Industrial Assurance Act, 1923 (c. 8), s. 21, it was required that any such policy of insurance should set out in distinctive type a statement of the effect of sect. 62. Applt. claimed from resp. co. the return of her premiums on the grounds that (a) under sect. 62 as amended by sect. 2 (1) of the Act of 1924 the sum insured exceeded the amount allowed, & (b) under sect. 21 of the Act of 1923 the policy did not set out a statement of the effect of sect. 62 as amended. Sect. 62 of the Act of 1896 was left unamended & unrepealed by the Act of 1924, but under the latter Act was to be read as provided by the Act of 1924. The policy was issued for a penny premium, & that was altered to twopence premium, & it was then stated that the amount payable on death was ascertainable from Sched. B., but that, the premium in this case being twopence, the amounts stated in Sched. B were increased in proportion. That would bring the amounts over what was allowed by sect. 62 as amended, but to the above statement was added "subject to the conditions of the Friendly Societies Act." In a second proviso on the face of the policy it was stated that the policy was issued "subject to the provisions of sect. 62 of Friendly Societies Act, 1896 (c. 25), as amended by the Industrial Assurance Act, 1923 (c. 8)—the provisions of which would, it was argued, make it illegal." Then followed the effect of sect. 62 without the express language introduced by the Act of 1924:—Held: the child had not been insured for sums in excess of the amounts permitted by sect. 62 of the Act of 1896 as amended by sect. 2 (1) of the Act of 1924, having regard to the effect of the statements in the policy, & particularly the proviso, & to the fact that sect. 62 of the Act of 1896 still existed, not having been repealed, though the amendment of it in the Act of 1923 had been repealed, & though sect. 62 had now to be read as if it had the effect set out in sect. 2 (1) of the Act of 1924. The co. had not committed an offence against sect. 21 of the Act of 1923, as it used the very language in its policy which had been used by the Legislature from 1896 to 1924, & did introduce the effect of sect. 62, & it was immaterial that the Act of 1924 was not specifically mentioned.—Re SMITH & BRITANNIC ASSURANCE CO.'S ARBITRATION, [1933] 1 K. Part VIII.—Licences.

375a. —— Coursing—What amounts to.]—Resp. was charged with having killed a hare when he had no licence to kill game, as required by sect. 4 of Game Licences Act, 1860 (c. 90). Resp. owned three greyhounds, which he kept for coursing & sport. On the day of the alleged offence he was riding his horse in a field, with the permission of the owner, & had with him two of his greyhounds. There were no other persons or dogs present. The two greyhounds chased a hare, overtook & killed it. Thereupon resp. galloped across the field to where the greyhounds were, picked up the hare, put it in a bag, & placed the bag in the bottom of a hedge:—Held: these facts constituted the killing of a hare by coursing with greyhounds within the meaning of the third exception in Game Licences Act, 1860 (c. 90), s. 5, which excepted from the duties & provisions of that Act: "(3) the pursuing & killing of hares . . . by coursing with greyhounds, . . ."; therefore, the justices were right in acquitting resp. The exception is not restricted to any organized sport of coursing hares.—DOLBY v. HALMSHAW, [1937] 1 K. B. 196; [1936] 3 All E. R. 229; 106 L. J. K. B. 169; 155 L. T. 533; 100 J. P. 486; 53 T. L. 393 1. Defences—Coursing hare.]—Deft. was prosecuted for pursuing a hare with a greyhound without having a game certificate, contrary to Game Certificates (Ireland) Act, 1842, ss. 2, 5. Deft. had coursed a hare with a single greyhound on certain lands, but produced a written permission from the owner of the lands to do so. The resident magistrate held that failure to take out a licence under Game Licences Act, 1860, formed the basis of the charge, & deft. was exempted on sect. 5, exception 3, of that Act, in respect of coursing a hare with his greyhound, & dismissed the summons. On a case stated:—Held: the resident magistrate was wrong in deciding that deft. came within Game Licences Act, 1860, s. 5, exception 3.—R. (NEVIN) v. CLARKE, [1930] N. I. 174.—IR.

The horse did not run in either race. In an action by E. on behalf of himself & the other members of the Club, the trustees of the Club & W. & Sons as stakeholders, to enforce payment by the deft. of the entrance fees or the part of them agreed to be forfeited :—Held : the contracts for the two races, which were between the Club & deft. & not between the various entrants inter se, were in neither case by way of gaming or wagering within Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 18, & the Club were entitled to recover from deft. the amount of the fees agreed to be forfeited in the two races.

1 ii. ——.]—Every forward contract is to some extent speculative, but is not necessarily a wagering contract. The parties agreed to refer the question to Tattersall's Committee. The Committee decided that the amount payable was £1,000, & that it was to be paid within seven days. In an action to recover the £1,000 pltf. alleged that deft. had agreed to abide by the decision of the Committee :—Held : as the parties only referred to Tattersall's Committee the question whether the bet was at 100 to 1 or at 33 to 1, & as there was no further agreement by deft. for good consideration to pay such sum as the Committee might find to be payable, the action failed.—HYDE v. TYLER (1926), 42 T. a number of bookmakers. On settling day, being unable to pay, he consulted a solr., whose managing clerk, W., happened to be a member of the Committee of Tattersall's Club. After a general discussion of the position W. was sent to Tattersall's Club to inform some, or all, of the bookmakers concerned, including pltf., that deft. could not pay at that time, but would pay them when he could. It was alleged that W., as deft.'s agent, entered into an agreement with pltf. to the effect that if pltf. did not " post " deft. as a defaulter at Tattersall's Club, he would pay what he owed in full within a reasonable time, & that thereby a legal obligation to pay the debt was created :—Held : W. had no authority from deft. to enter into any such contract on his behalf.—O'MALLEY v. GORMAN, [1935] W. PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

252 i. —— Prizes provided out of admission money.]—A person hired a hall for one night, & another hall for two nights, & advertised that whist drives, open to the public on payment of one shilling for admission, would be held in the halls on those nights. A large number of people attended, & prizes were awarded to the successful players. The purchase of the prizes was defrayed out of the admission money, any balance over being retained by the promoter :—Held : (1) the playing of progressive whist was gaming, in view of the facts that the element of chance predominated in the game, & that the prizes were derived from the admission money, & it was immaterial whether the proceedings were or were not detrimental to the morals of the community ; (2) accused had managed, conducted, or carried on gaming in the premises, although his operations had been restricted to three isolated occasions.—BUNTON v. MILLER, [1926] S. On a prosecution under sect. 3 of Gaming & Betting Act, 1912, charging M. with being the keeper of a common gaming house the police gave evidence that they saw people playing poker with both money & counters, & heard expressions used which indicated that gambling was in progress. It was proved that the club was open every day of the week to a very late hour, & that it was competent for any member of the public to join the club upon paying 2*s.* entrance fee & having his name approved. M. was convicted :—Held : poker is not an unlawful game ; however, there was evidence upon which the magistrate could find that the club tended to cause a public mischief & was, accordingly, a common gaming house & the rule nisi, therefore, should be discharged with costs.—Re LISLE, Ex p. MCCROHON (1936), 53 N. 276 i. Whether dominant element of skill.]—Deft. kept for use by the public on his premises a number of machines, known by the name of " Diddler." Any one wishing to use one of these machines purchased from deft. discs at the price of seven for 6*d.* He inserted one disc in a slot & pulled a handle, which caused three rollers to revolve. On each roller was printed a number of devices, such as cherries, roses, etc. If certain combinations of these devices stopped opposite a pointer on the face of the machine, the player won a certain number of discs. With these he could purchase on the premises certain goods. The winning combinations & the odds for each were printed on the front of the machine in view of the player. If none of these combinations stopped opposite the pointer, the player lost his disc. The machine was fitted with a control, by which the player could stop the rollers, one at a time, & so endeavour to obtain a winning combination. There were 15 machines on the premises. Deft. was prosecuted under Gaming Houses Act, 1854, s. 4, that he, being the occupier of the premises, did use them for the purpose of unlawful gaming. The justice was satisfied on the evidence that the majority of the persons who used the machine would be players of less than average skill, &, therefore, held that the game was one in which the chances were not favourable alike to all players, including the owner of the machine, & accordingly convicted the deft. :—Held : the conviction was right.—

Order for destruction of machines—Proceedings under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38).]—Applt. was convicted before petty sessions of unlawfully gaming with automatic machines, & a number of machines in his possession were ordered by the justices to be destroyed:—Held: the proceedings being taken under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), the justices had no jurisdiction to order the destruction of the machines, such jurisdiction being conferred only by Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 8, & in cases brought before them by a warrant issued under that Act.—EYRE v. BRUMFIELD, [1936] 2 All E. 284a. House used for game where chances not alike favourable to all players.]—The committee of management of a members' club installed in the club certain machines for the use of members only & for the purpose of giving additional pleasure to the members. The machines were operated by means of pennies inserted in a slot. The player, having first inserted a penny, depressed a handle, causing three cylinders to revolve on which were depicted bells, bars & fruits. On the cylinders ceasing to revolve the player either lost his penny or received winnings up to twenty pennies, according to the combination of fruits &/or bells &/or bars opposite a pointer. The machine automatically filled a jack pot from its winnings, & the pennies in the jack pot were returned to the player who obtained the combination of three bars. The machines were similar in type to other machines for the user of which persons had been convicted under the Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), where the persons had used the machines in shops or places of public entertainment or in proprietary clubs. Four members of the committee of management of the club in question were charged under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), s. 4, for being persons having the care & management of certain premises, to wit, the club, which were then being used for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein. The contention of the members of the committee of management was that the position of a members' club was analogous to that of a private house, & that gaming upon the machines in a members' club was therefore not unlawful gaming:—Held: in order that a house should be a common gaming house within s. 2 of the Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 2, it was not necessary that some person should be keeping the house for his gain, lucre or living; it was sufficient that it was a house kept or used for playing at any game where the chances of the game being played therein are not alike favourable to all the players; the chances of the game played on the machines in this club were not alike favour- club members' club did not prevent the club premises being kept or used for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein, & therefore the members of the committee of management of the club could be convicted of the offence charged under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), s. 4.—DANIELS v. PINKS, [1931] 1 K. The fence along its western side ran at the foot of a railway embankment, which was admittedly not a public place within Street Betting Act, 1906, s. 1 (4). Between the northern end of this fence & the fence bounding the northern side of the ground was a gateway, 3 feet wide, giving access to the ground. The gateposts were in position, but the gate had been missing for some time. The portion of the field adjoining the gateway was not used for cricket, & the public had unrestricted access to that portion & gathered there in numbers every day. 358a. Totalisator—Greyhound racing track.]—The words " such owner, occupier, keeper, or person as aforesaid " in the latter part of Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 1, are not to be read as limited to the class of persons who come within the ambit of the earlier part of the sect.—namely, persons who themselves are parties to bets or to transactions of the nature of bets. A person, therefore, such as the proprietor of a totalisator on a greyhound racecourse, who merely provides facilities for other persons to bet, & is not himself a party to any bet, may be guilty of an offence under the latter part of the sect.

o i. —— Sale of totalisator vouchers.]—A co. occupying a greyhound racecourse on which a totalisator was erected, & the manager of the totalisator, were charged with contravening Betting Act, 1853, s. 1. It was proved that persons betting through the totalisator purchased vouchers costing 2*s*. each, which were marked with the name of the dog on which the purchaser desired to bet. These vouchers represented the stakes, & after the race the whole money staked was divided among the backers of the winning dog, under deduction of 10 per cent. to cover expenses:—Held: the purchasers of vouchers entered into the betting transactions with each other, & not with the co. or the manager; & the fact that a charge was made for the use of the totalisator & for the service of operating it did not involve the co. or the manager in a contravention of the sects. libelled.—STRATHERN v. SCOTTISH GREYHOUND RACING CO., [1930] S. o ii. —— ——.]—The tenant of certain premises in which a totalisator was installed, & his assistants, were charged with a contravention of sect. 407 of Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. It was proved that members of the public resorted to the premises in large numbers for the purpose of betting through the totalisator on the results of dog races. Those betting purchased vouchers costing 1*s*. each, which were marked with the number of the dog selected for backing. The money thus paid represented the stakes, &, after each race, the whole money staked was divided among the backers of the winning dog, under deduction of 10 per cent. which was retained by the tenant of the premises for himself & his assistants:—Held: sect. 407 of Burgh Police Act, applied only to the same class of premises as that to which Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 1, applied, namely, premises where the betting carried on took place between the management & persons resorting thereto, &, as the premises were not of this description, the conviction fell to be quashed.—GIBSON v. LAIRD, [1933] S. o iii. —— ——.]—A co. occupying a greyhound racecourse on which a totalisator was erected were charged with a contravention of Betting Act, 1853, s. 1. It was admitted that members of the public betting through the totalisator purchased vouchers costing 1*s*. each, which were marked with the number of the dog on which the purchaser desired to bet. The money paid for these vouchers represented the stakes, & after the race the whole money staked was divided among the backers of the winning dog, under deduction of 10 per cent., which was retained by the co.

Persons concerned in the management of premises in which totalisators were erected were charged with a contravention of sect. 15 of Glasgow Police (Further Powers) Act, 1892, which imposes a penalty on the owner or manager of a gaming or betting house. It was proved that the public were admitted to the premises which were designated as a club, on payment of a nominal membership fee. Betting on the result of horse races & dog races run elsewhere was carried on through the totalisators in the same way as in the case of the co. referred to above:—Held: the accused in each case were guilty of a contravention of the sections.—STRATHERN v. ALBION GREYHOUNDS (GLASGOW), LTD.; STRATHERN v. RUSSELL, [1933] S. o iv. —— Keeping means of betting.]Appeal from a conviction for keeping a common betting house at a certain hotel. Accused, who was a roomer at the hotel, was found in the rotunda looking at a copy of "The Morning Digest," a turf publication, which was spread out on a desk, & writing on a small pad of paper. One or two men were with him, also looking at the publication. A copy of another turf publication was also on the desk, but behind a glass case. Certain letters & figures on the pad were written by the accused in the sight of a constable, unnoticed by the accused. The sheet contained 15 other entries of the same class & in the same handwriting. Figures in pencil were written after the name of each of the horses listed in the publications, & a witness, who was a bookmaker, testified that the figures were such as would be put there by one intending to take bets. He also gave the opinion that the entries on the pad, except the last two items, showed bets on horses. The last item was that which the constable saw the accused write. With respect to those two items the witness said that they might be entries of a bet but that if he had been making the entries he would have made them in another way:—Held: the evidence was not sufficient to sustain the conviction.—R. v. MCCANN, [1936] 3 W. mitted a social club to occupy the premises for carrying out its objects as such. That club made an arrangement with a bookmaker to act for its members & open an account with them. Telephones were installed connecting the club premises with the bookmaker's office, & the members of the club thereby communicated their proposed bets to the bookmaker for his acceptance. The bookmaker supplied to the club premises information as to races which was published there. A commission was paid by the bookmaker to the club on all bets made with its members through him. 408a. Receipt of whole stake—Whether " deposit."]—The charge against applt. was that being the occupier of a place used for a betting game he unlawfully did receive money as a deposit on certain bets, contrary to the Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 4. The date in the information was " between May 30, 1936, & June 1, 1936." Persons taking part in the game paid 1*d.* It was found as a fact that on May 30, 1936, pennies were laid on the table by the players & taken by applt. or his assistants before the game was decided. On May 31 & June 1, 1936, the pennies paid by the players were paid after the game was decided. Applt. contended (i) that the information was bad for duplicity, & (ii) that what was paid by the players could not properly be called a deposit on any bet :—Held : (1) the information charged only one offence, & the fact that three days were comprised in the period named in the information did not make it bad ; (2) although the players paid the whole stake payable in respect of the game this was none the less a " deposit " within Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 4.—JOEL v. BARCLAY, [1937] 1 All E. 415a. —— ——.]—Applts. were the responsible proprietors of a four-page weekly newspaper, which was sold at 6*d.* a copy, & which had in winter a weekly circulation of over 32,000 copies. The newspaper contained what was called a " Free Football Competition " with a coupon giving particulars of future football matches & a column for the competitors to fill in their forecast of the results, a prize of £150 being offered for a correct forecast of all the results & a prize of £100 for a correct forecast of nine results, but no money was to be sent with the coupons. Applts. were summoned for unlawfully publishing a coupon of a ready-money football betting business contrary to sect. 1 of the above Act. The justices found that the majority of the persons who bought the newspaper did so for the sake of the coupon, & that applts. had circulated coupons of a ready-money football betting business, & they convicted applts. :—Held : the case was typical of the mischief aimed at by the Act, & the justices' decision must be affirmed.—SUTTLE v. CRESSWELL, [1926] 1 K. One collector sometimes accepted money at the time of investment without resp.'s knowledge, but did not send the money to resp. until after the results of the matches were known. The words "credit only" were printed on every coupon in bold type. In consequence of the said collector's conduct, resp. was charged with publishing coupons of two ready money football betting businesses, contrary to the Ready Money Football Betting Act, 1920 (c. 52), s. 1:—Held: as resp. published coupons of a credit business & gave most careful instructions to his collectors not to take money at the time of investment, he was innocent of the offences with which he was charged.—WILSON v. MURPHY, [1937] 1 All E. 433a. —— Provision for commission without control over sales.]—A co., having bought a quantity of note cases at a price of less than 1*s.* 6*d.* each, devised a scheme for selling them at a profit, & issued to the public a leaflet in accordance with the terms of which the scheme was conducted. The leaflet informed a person desirous of participating in the scheme that on filling up & sending in an attached order form together with £1 there would be sent to him a note case & a supply of the leaflets, the order forms of which would be marked with a number allotted to him; that he should get other persons to give orders for note cases, using these forms; that he would be entitled to no benefit from the first three of these orders, but would be paid a commission of 10*s.* on every other order received on his forms & on sales made as a result of these orders; that whenever an order was received on one of his forms, after the first three, a supply of forms also marked with his number would be sent to the buyer, & that the participant would be paid a commission of 10*s.* on each of the first three sales made by every one to whom one of the forms so numbered was sent; & that there was no time limit to the scheme, but that the maximum commission payable to a participant was £20,000:—Held: inasmuch as, with the exception of commissions resulting from orders directly obtained by the participant himself, all the commissions which he received would result from orders given by persons over whom he had no control & would depend so far as he was concerned not upon his skill or work but upon pure chance, the scheme was a "lottery" within Lotteries Act, 1823 (c. 60), s. 41.—PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS DIRECTOR v. PHILLIPS, [1935] 1 K. n i. —— Bonds in series—Payment not dependent on knowledge or skill.]—In a prosecution for a contravention of Lotteries Act, 1823, it was established that the promoters had formed & put into execution a scheme for the sale of bonds, each of which entitled the holder on certain conditions to £150. To qualify for this sum a participant had first to obtain a bond at the cost of 1*s.* either from the promoters or from a friend. This was the parent of a family of bonds which was brought into existence by a process of sub-sales. The holder of the parent bond had to buy from the promoters four bonds for 3*s.* & to sell them to four friends for 1*s.* each. These four bonds were the first generation, & each of the four holders of them had to repeat the same process, thus bringing the second generation of sixteen bonds into existence. The process had to be repeated until the sixth generation of 4096 bonds had come into existence, making, for the complete series, 5461 bonds. On the occurrence of this event the holder of the parent bond became entitled to £150. Not only was each individual bond a member of a family of bonds, but it could itself become the parent of a new family, & the holder of it was entitled to £150 as soon as its sixth generation was completed:—Held: the scheme was a lottery, in respect that the occurrence of the event upon which payment fell to be made could neither be approximately predicted nor materially influenced by the exercise of any knowledge, experience, art, or skill on the part of the holder of the parent bond.—BARNES v. STRATHERN, [1929] S. b (p. 454) ix. —— Picture competition.]—A. was the manager of a certain co. which conducted & advertised the holding of certain competitions known as the " Bran Tub Competition." The scheme of the competition was to take a sentence from an Australian newspaper & reproduce it in puzzle form. The competitors were invited to interpret in words the pictorial rendering of the sentence. The prize was awarded to the person who reproduced the precise words of the sentence chosen or who got nearest to that particular collection of words :—Held : the competition was a matter of chance &, therefore, a lottery within sect. 3 (6) of Lotteries & Art Unions Act, 1901-1929.—Re CHRISTENSEN, Ex p. ATMORE (1936), 53 N. b (p. 454) x. ———.]—A. published an advertisement in a newspaper setting out the terms of a " competition " of which he was the promoter & controller. The nature of the competition was as follows :—A " frame " was set out in the advertisement consisting of a number of vertical rows of squares, each row containing a different number of squares. In each row one of the squares contained a letter of the alphabet. To each row was allotted a " clue " & to each letter a number. The competitor was asked to fill in the blank squares with letters so as to make each row contain a word of as many letters as there were squares in the row, the word filled in being " suitable to the clue " allotted to the particular row. Each letter in the word was then given its numerical value & the competitor who supplied words the total numerical value of which was the highest won the competition. The advertisement stated that the " missing words " were " ordinary everyday words " & that they must be " recognised words suitable to the clues " & must be found in Chambers's dictionary. In the conduct of the competition unusual & obsolete words used were accepted :—Held : the magistrate was entitled to find that the conduct of the competition was such as to preclude the fair consideration of the answers & the competition was a lottery within Lotteries & Art Unions Act, 1901-1929.—Re CHRISTENSEN, Ex p. ATMORE (1936), 53 N. 464b. —— —— Distribution of circulars advertising lottery.]—Resp. employed canvassers to call from house to house, inviting persons to undertake to buy tea from her regularly. Each week the canvassers carried with them handbills which declared that: "To advertise our famous tea we will distribute among our customers cash gifts of £3 and £6," as the purchaser bought one or two packets of tea per week. The circular continued: "Each customer's name is entered in rotation in our ledger and cash gifts are paid out accordingly." The names & addresses of new customers were entered in the ledger in the exact order in which they had been obtained, the list of one canvasser's customers on his return to the office being completely entered before that of the next was begun. Resp. awarded her bonus each week to the next customer whose name was on the list after that of the customer last to receive a bonus, provided that the customer was still regularly buying the tea. The names of customers who ceased to buy the tea weekly were struck out of the list, thus advancing the names of customers below them. It was stated in one of the circulars that during the twenty-four weeks ending in June, 1928, resp. had paid out £1,920 by way of bonus gifts. Applt., a superintendent of police, preferred an information against resp., charging her with publishing a proposal or scheme for the sale of chances in a lottery not authorised by Act of Parliament, contrary to above Act. In the years 1929 to 1933 inclusive the Board had entered into a series of agreements with two cos., in order to procure the collection of bets from persons not on the racecourse on race days, & the placing of such bets on the totalisator on the course. The Board agreed to pay commission at certain rates dependent on the amount of money placed by means of such bets, & also the expenses of its agents in collecting & telephoning the bets to the course, such commission & expenses being paid by the Board out of the totalisator fund. The Board also agreed with one of the cos. to provide at its own expense all reasonable facilities required by the co. for the purpose of its business on the authorised racecourses & to make contributions towards the initial expenses of that co. In an action brought at the relation of the secretary of a bookmakers' organisation, asking for a declaration that such agreements & payments were invalid & ultra vires the Board:—Held: (1) the action of the Board in agreeing to pay the commission & the expenses of providing facilities on the authorised racecourses was reasonably incidental to the power conferred on the Board by Racecourse Betting Act, 1928 (c. 41), & was therefore not ultra vires. In so doing the Board was only taking steps to increase the bets placed on the totalisators on the courses; (2) in contributing towards the preliminary expenses of one of the cos. the Board was acting ultra vires, as it was thereby assisting in the general business of the co. which as between itself & its customers was carrying on "off-the-course" betting.—A.-G. v. RACECOURSE BETTING CONTROL BOARD, [1935] Ch. 34; 104 L. Readers were thereby invited to fill in coupons relating to any one or more of a series of football matches to be played on the following Saturday, with their respective forecasts of the results, including the score, & to stake a named sum thereon. Under the rules of the pool entrants were required on the day before the matches were played to remit the coupons they had filled up to the co. with a promise in writing, duly signed, to pay the amount they were staking in case they lost, on the Tuesday following. The total amount received from entrants, less 10 per cent., was distributed by the co. among those whose forecasts turned out to be correct, or most nearly correct. On a motion by pltf., a director of deft. co., for an injunction to restrain them from so conducting the pool :—Held : the pool was not a " competition in which prizes are offered for forecasts of the result . . . of a future event " within the prohibition contained in Betting & Lotteries Act, 1934 (c. 58), s. 26, but a pari-mutuel or pool betting operation conducted by a bookmaker, & therefore lawful within sect. 3 & the proviso to sect. 26 of the Act.—ELDERTON v. UNITED KINGDOM TOTALISATOR CO., LTD., [1935] Ch. 373 ; 104 L. d i. —— —— Receipt of money with coupons—Whether offence under Street Betting Act.]—In a complaint under Street Betting Act, 1906, it was proved that accused received in the street from various persons a large number of slips accompanied by sums of money. The slips were odd pieces of paper, upon each of which were written the names of at least one group of eight football teams, to which was added a name, number or other symbol, for identifying the sender of the slip. Accused did not submit lists of football teams for the purpose of selection, the names of such teams being selected by the senders of the slips from lists of teams advertised or reported in the public press to play on the Saturday following the date on which the slips were received by accused. The teams selected were those which the senders of the slips predicted would be winning teams on that Saturday. Along with each slip was sent 1*s.*, the understanding being that, after the results of the matches were published, accused would examine the forecasts made, & thereafter would deduct from the money received a sum in name of commission, & hand over the balance to the person sending in the correct forecast if only one forecast was correct, or, if more than one forecast was correct, an equal share of such balance to each of the senders of correct forecasts. If no correct selection was sent in there was no distribution, & the whole contributions were carried forward to the next week ; which procedure was repeated until a correct forecast was made, or until the end of the football season arrived, when if there had been no correct selection received, the money in hand, less a commission to the accused, was distributed among those who had sent it :—Held : accused was engaged in betting transactions & was guilty of an offence under Street Betting Act, 1906.—YEUDALL v. [illegible], [1928] S. 504a. —— Determination of order of popularity of specified articles.]—The proprietors of a number of commodities organised, for advertisement purposes, a competition in which customers were asked to place thirteen named articles in the order of their popularity as shown by the actual voting of the entrants themselves. A number of money & other prizes were offered to those whose lists most nearly agreed with that shown by the voting as a whole. No entrance fee was charged, but each entrance form had to be accompanied by part of a bag or wrapper from one of the named articles :—Held : since the competitors were not asked to judge the real merits of the articles but to guess how other people would guess at their popularity, there was material on which a magistrate was justified in finding that the result depended entirely on chance & in convicting the advertising manager of the promoters of an offence under Lotteries Act, 1823 (c. 60), s. 41, —HOBBS v. WARD (1929), 93 J. 504b. —— Determination of order of popularity of theatrical rôles.]—Resps. sent to members of the theatrical profession & to persons whose names appeared in " Who's Who " books of 10*s.* tickets in a " Grand National Mutual Subscription Fund in aid of the Ellen Terry Memorial Museum " with a request to sell the tickets among their friends & return the counterfoils & money by a certain date. An accompanying circular explained that 25 per cent. of the money subscribed would be devoted to the museum & that the remaining 75 per cent. would be distributed " in such manner as the organisers in their absolute discretion shall think fit," but that £20,000 would be distributed in prizes. It was apparently originally contemplated that the money should be used for a sweepstake on the Grand National horse race, but owing to a communication from the police there was substituted a scheme whereby subscribers were invited to place in order of popularity, as shown by the general votes of the competitors, ten rôles played by the late Dame Ellen Terry :—Held : the scheme was a lottery. The fact that the original books of tickets were sent only to members of the theatrical profession & persons in " Who's Who " did not so limit the class of competitors as to render it possible by any element of skill to arrive at a reasonable forecast of how they would vote ; especially as they might be expected to sell many tickets to persons outside those two categories, so that the competition was in effect open to the public.—CHALLIS v. WARRENDER (1930), 144 L. 506a. —— Picture puzzle competition.]—A competition was advertised in a newspaper in which a money prize was offered to the reader sending in the best solution of a picture puzzle illustrated in the same issue. The puzzle consisted of a set of nine small sketches each intended to depict the name, as spelt or pronounced, of some place in the United Kingdom. A list of names providing clues was given. Competitors were required to fill in blank forms with their solutions & send them in to the editor with entrance fees. The artist who drew the sketches was instructed to make some of them capable of representing one or other of two or three different places. In an action brought to test the legality of the competition :—Held : (1) success in the competition depended on the exercise of a substantial degree of skill, there being no predetermined solution of the puzzle, & therefore it did not come within the prohibition contained in Betting & Lotteries Act, 1934 (c. 58), s. 26 (1) (b) ; (2) the competition was not a " game " within the prohibition of Betting Act, 1853 (c. 119), s. 1.—WITTY v. WORLD SERVICE, LTD., [1936] Ch. 303 ; 105 L. 51a. Duration of agreement to supply—Power to terminate.]—In 1906 a co. was incorporated by statute to supply gas in a certain area in the place of a limited co., & by sect. 7 the statutory co. took the benefit of all contracts & engagements of the limited co. which had been supplying gas to the defts., an urban council, for public lighting. In 1909 the co. entered into an agreement under seal with the council in which it was recited that before the passing of the Act "it was agreed by & between the predecessors of the gas co. & the council that the agreement then in force for public lighting should continue to remain in force & be binding on both parties until the council should determine the same," & that "it has been deemed desirable by the said parties hereto that the terms of the said agreement for the public lighting shall be set out as hereinafter mentioned." By the operative part of the agreement the co. agreed to light all the public lamps within the district "from & after the first day in Sept. in every year up to the following first day of May inclusive" on certain terms ; & provisions were made for increasing the number of lamps. There was no provision as to the period for which the agreement was to run or giving either party a right to determine it. By a supplemental agreement dated June 30, 1921, the times of lighting & the charges were varied, & clause 1 (c) provided that new lanterns supplied by the co. should become the property of the council without payment after fifteen years if the agreements continued for so long, "& if the said agreements be determined before the expiration of such period" the council were to pay for them. On Apr. 30, 1927, the council gave notice to determine the agreement on Aug. 31, 1927 :—Held : having regard to the recitals in the original agreement & clause 1 (c) of the supplementary agreement & to the nature of the contracts they were determinable by notice.—CREDITON GAS CO. v. CREDITON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1928] Ch. 447 ; 97 L. (the conditions being fulfilled or waived) a valid & perpetual franchise, not subject to repeal, applying to the geographical territory which at the date of the bye-law was comprised in the township. Upon parts of that territory being annexed to an adjacent city, under provisions of the above Act as amended & Municipal Act, 1913 (Ont.), the franchise remains effective in & applicable to the annexed areas. 80a. Excavation by local authority—Failure of gas company to inspect operations.]—A hotel belonging to & insured by resps. respectively was destroyed by fire caused by the escape & ignition of natural gas which percolated through the soil & penetrated into the hotel basement from a fractured welded joint in a 12-in. intermediate pressure main, 3 ft. 6 ins. below the street level, belonging to applts., a public utility co. who supplied natural gas to consumers in the City of Edmonton, Alberta. The cause of the break in the welded joint through which the gas leaked was found to be the operations of the City of Edmonton in constructing a storm sewer, involving underground work immediately beneath applts.' main. On a claim for damages by resps. against applts. :—Held : that the words "locate & construct" in Alberta Water, Gas, Electric & Telephone Cos. Act, 1922, s. 13, refer only to the initial location or construction of the works, & do not include "maintain," & applts. were not subject to the rule of strict or absolute liability, but were entitled to the protection accorded to persons acting under statutory authority; but as applts. were carrying gas at high pressure which was very dangerous, if it should escape, they owed a duty to the owners of the hotel, to exercise reasonable care & skill that the owners should not be damaged. The degree of care which that duty involved must be proportioned to the degree of risk involved. The City might at any time be conducting operations in connection with their sewers in the vicinity of applts.' mains, & it was the duty of applts. to watch such operations. The operations in question were, from their public nature & conspicuous character & from the time during which they went on, such that a failure by applts. to know of them was plainly not consistent with due care on their part in the interests of members of the public likely to be

The city corpn. constructed an underground drain, &, by reason of a subsidence of the drain, the gas main was broken. The co. opened the street & repaired the gas main & the corpn. reinstated the drain & roadway. In an action by which the corpn. sought to recover from the co. the cost of such reinstatement, the co. by counterclaim sought to recover from the corpn. the cost of repairing the gas main :—Held : the liability of the corpn. for the damage to the gas main depended upon negligence in the exercise of its statutory powers causing unnecessary damage to the co., & the onus of proving such negligence had not been discharged by the co.—METROPOLITAN GAS CO. v. MELBOURNE CORPN., [1925] V. q i. —— Liability of city.]—A provision in a city charter imposing on the city the duty of constructing all public works & apparatus appertaining thereto so as not to endanger the public health or safety includes the duty to keep said works & apparatus in such repair as will effect the same object. In the present case :—Held : deft. city had not met the obligation of this provision with respect to a service pipe connecting a natural gas main with pltf.'s premises; the gradual development & enlargement of a leak in the stopcock in said service pipe was not a "breaking" of the pipe or attachments within a section of the charter giving the city immunity for damages caused by "breaking."—REID v. MEDICINE HAT CITY, [1933] 1 W. sp. Escape of gas—Act of stranger.]—An action for damages for an injury to pltf.'s health caused by an escape of gas owing to the breaking of deft.'s service pipe in premises in which pltf. resided. Pltf. lived with her mother, who was the householder & who apparently, had contracted for the supply of gas. No contractual relation between pltf. & deft. was established, & no negligence was proven against deft. The pipes had been properly laid & were in sound condition when the break occurred. The cause of the break was the action of an occupant of the front part of the lot in so altering his premises that additional weight was thrown laterally against the sunken pipe until it broke at a joint, permitting gas to escape & pass under ground to the basement, whence it reached pltf.'s bedroom. Deft.'s charter required it "so to construct & locate their works & all apparatus & appurtenances thereto appertaining or therewith connected & wheresoever situated as in no wise to endanger the public health, convenience, or safety." The sect. then goes on to provide for inspection at all reasonable times by the municipal authorities of the co.'s works, apparatus & appurtenances, & the obeying by the co. of all reasonable orders & directions following such inspection with penalties for disobedience of the same :—Held : deft. was not liable.—DARBEY v. WINNI-

Deft. proceeded to the locality where the seals were & found that pltf. had taken some of them on board his vessel, had counted others of the patch, & was in the act of taking on board his vessel the remainder, his crew being then in charge. In an action by pltf. for the seals so taken the jury found for pltf.; on a rule nisi to set aside the verdict :—Held : there was a valid gift from W. to deft. such as would cause a legal transfer of property; &, further, it was in the power of W. to transfer property floating on the sea which he had himself the power to secure.—DOYLE v. BARTLETT (1872), 5 Nfld. sv. —— .]—A father purchased land, the transfer of which was taken in the name of his daughter. The price paid was £700, of which the daughter contributed £286 10*s.*, the father providing the balance. The title, when issued, was held by the father. Rents & outgoings were shared equally by the father & daughter during the father's life. At the request of the father the daughter signed an acknowledgment that the father owned "one equal half part of 'the house' in her name," being the property purchased. The father died leaving his widow a life interest in his residuary estate & until her death she received one-half of the nett rents of the property. There were statements by the father contemporaneous with the gift showing that he might give his daughter the whole of the property, but he had never done so:—Held: on these facts, any presumption of advancement of the whole property to the deft. was rebutted.—MILLARD v. LUCAS, [1936] S. A. S. R. 166.—AUS.

sw. —— .]—In 1920 deft. S. had an account with a savings bank the amount of which exceeded the amount permitted to bear interest. Acting on a suggestion made either by his own banker or an employee of the savings bank, & desiring to keep his money at call & earning interest, S. opened at various times three trust accounts, signing on each occasion the declaration of trust required by the bank whereby he constituted himself trustee for each of his three infant daughters of all moneys standing at any time to his credit in each of the three accounts. By these declarations he declared that the moneys should be the exclusive property of the respective daughters & that he would not own or be interested (otherwise than as trustee) in any of the moneys. It was clear on the evidence of deft. that he always regarded & treated the moneys as his own, & thought of the declarations as formalities designed to overcome a technical obstacle, & that he never had any intention of disposing of the beneficial interest in any of the moneys deposited:—Held: deft. had not constituted himself a trustee of any of the moneys, & was entitled thereto as beneficial owner.—STARR v. STARR, [1935] S. He frequently took out sums & redeposited in the same terms. In an action by P. against A.'s exors. claiming that the sums in the joint names of A. & P. did not form part of A.'s estate:—Held: pltf. had failed to rebut the implication of a resulting trust which arose in favour of A. & his representatives, pltf. having failed to prove any intention on the part of A. to part with his property in the deposited money during his life, & a disposition to take effect only upon his death, if he should not previously have disposed of the money, could only be effected by a declaration of trust, which was admitted not to have been made by him.—OWENS v. GREEN, [1932] I. L. T. 125.—IR.

124 x. —— ——.]—Money was deposited in a bank by X. in the joint names of X. & an infant X. kept possession of the bank-book:—Held: on X.'s death the remainder of the account did not pass to the infant, since the gift was testamentary & void.—MCKNIGHT v. TITUS (1933), 6 M. P. R. 282.—CAN.

124 xi. —— ——.]—An elderly lady & her nephew opened a joint account in the Commonwealth Savings Bank by the transfer of a large sum from an account in the lady's name. The nephew, who assisted his aunt in all her matters of business, did not contribute to the account, which was kept in funds by payments from the aunt's investments. The account was used solely for the purpose of supplying the aunt's needs. Moneys for this purpose were withdrawn by the nephew as required, the withdrawal slips being signed by both the aunt & the nephew. When the account was opened the aunt told the nephew & others that any balance remaining in the account at her death would belong to the nephew. Upon his aunt's death the nephew claimed the balance of the account:—Held: (1) the presumption of a resulting trust in favour of the aunt & her estate was rebutted by the evidence of her intention to benefit the nephew; consequently, his legal right to the balance by survivorship prevailed; (2) the gift thus conferred upon the nephew was not a testamentary disposition.—RUSSELL v. SCOTT (1936), 55 C. 127a. —— ——.]—J. M., being in failing health & expecting death in a short time, deposited a sum of £10,000 with the B. Bank & received from the Bank a deposit receipt in this form: "£10,000 . . . Received from J. M. & J. D. M. (a minor)," the son of J. M., . . . "the sum of ten thousand pounds sterling for credit in deposit account. Not transferable. . . . Payable to either or the survivor. . . . This receipt must be produced when payment of either principal or interest is desired." By his will, after giving certain legacies, J. M. directed his exors. to hold the rest of his property in trust for J. D. M. until he should attain the age of twenty-five years, &, on his attaining that age, for him absolutely. Until J. D. M. attained that age the business of testator was to be carried on by the exors. There were other dispositions in case J. D. M. died under that age, an event which did not happen. On the death of J. M. the exors. withdrew & redeposited the sum of £10,000 & obtained a new deposit receipt for that sum in their own names. The business of testator was carried on at a loss. The business account kept by the exors. with the B. Bank was continually overdrawn. The exors. repeatedly paid the overdrafts out of the £10,000 & in so doing finally exhausted the whole sum. Both before & after he came of age J. D. M. took part in the management of the business. Soon after attaining the age of twenty-five J. D. M. claimed that he was entitled to the £10,000 deposited by J. M., & brought an action against the B. Bank to recover that sum as having been wrongfully & without his authority paid by the Bank to the exors.:—Held: by LORD WARRINGTON & LORD MACMILLAN, the exors. were entitled to receive the money & to apply it in due course of administration as directed by the will of J. M.; LORD THANKERTON agreeing on the ground that on the evidence as a whole J. M. did not purport to act as agent for J. D. M. in making the contract with the Bank, so as to make J. D. M. a contracting party, but that he alone contracted with the Bank, though for the benefit of J. D. M. as a third party; by LORD ATKIN, the contract was made by J. M. on behalf of himself & J. D. M., & if J. D. M. had ratified the act done on his behalf he would have made himself a party to the contract; but by his conduct he had represented to the Bank that he did not intend to ratify the act done on his behalf, having so acted he could not afterwards ratify it, & consequently he had never become a party to the contract.—MCEVOY v. BELFAST BANKING CO., LTD., [1935] A. 356a. Gift made in contemplation of death from incurable disease—Death from different illness—Gift valid.]—A donatio mortis causâ is not generally conditioned upon the donor dying from the same disorder as that from which he is suffering, & contemplates the probability of death, at the time it is made.

By a mtge. made in 1922 the widow of J., who was tenant for life under his will, mortgaged a farm to W., a brother of J., to secure £1,000 & interest at 5 per cent. The widow died in 1923, having appointed her two daughters, E. & X., exors. of her will. The mtge. contained no personal covenant for payment of the principal, & the mtgee. accepted interest at 3½ per cent., reduced in 1924 to 3 per cent. In 1924 W., who was on very friendly terms with his brother's family, gave the deeds relating to the farm, other than the mtge. deed, to E. & X., to retain in their custody. On Dec. 11, 1927, W., who had since 1922 been suffering from an incurable disease & knew that he could not possibly live long, called upon his nieces, who were aware of his state of health, & gave them an envelope indorsed in his own handwriting: "Deeds relating to X. farm to be given up at death. W.," saying: "I have brought this down for you; put it away." After he had left the house the envelope was opened, & was found to contain the mtge., which the nieces placed in their safe. On Jan. 23, 1928, W. died of pneumonia following a chill. In an action by his exors. for a declaration that the mtge. was a subsisting security & to enforce it:—Held: there was a valid donatio mortis causâ by W., & a release of the mtge. to the two daughters of J. for the benefit of his estate.—WILKES v. ALLINGTON, [1931] 2 Ch. 104; 100 L. 386a. Instructions to use power of attorney.]—A testatrix had given her son a power of attorney in very wide terms over certain shares & money standing in her name at a bank abroad. When about to undergo an operation she told the son to get such shares & money transferred into his own name, as she wanted him to have them if anything should happen to her. 311 xxiv. —— ——.]—A woman, engaged in domestic service & without a home of her own, placed her savings in deposit-receipt in 1900 in name of herself & her sister to be drawn by either of them or the survivor. The receipt was then handed to the sister, who kept it at her home, but periodically the deposit was uplifted by the depositor & redeposited with interest & further savings added to it. The depositor had a niece & nephew, her sister's children, &, on the sister's death in 1921, the name of the niece was substituted as the second name in the receipt, the receipt being thereupon handed by her to him. The depositor regarded her sister's family as her only relatives & their home as her own, &, on several occasions, she had stated to third persons that the sum on deposit was to go to the survivor of the persons named in the receipt. The depositor having died in 1930, survived by the nephew:—Held: the terms of the deposit-receipt, taken in conjunction with the depositor's expressions of intention, were sufficient to instruct a donation mortis causâ of the sum on deposit in favour of the nephew.—MACPHERSON'S EXECUTRIX v. MACKAY, [1932] S. as her agent under the power of attorney, instructed the bank to transfer the shares & money into his name. Testatrix died a few days later. The question arose as to whether there had been a good donatio mortis causâ of the shares & money or whether they formed part of the estate of testatrix. By her will testatrix gave her trustees a power of advancement in favour of the son, inter alia, for " the purchase of a business or a share in a business " :—Held: (1) the mere giving of the power of attorney was not in itself a sufficient parting by testatrix with her dominion over the shares & money to make it a donatio mortis causâ, but when testatrix instructed her son to transfer the shares & money into his own name, she parted with her dominion over the property, & there was a good donatio mortis causâ; (2) the question was one which arose in the administration of the estate, &, as the estate was being administered in England according to English law, it was a question which ought to be determined according to the law of England, subject to the condition that, the property being situated abroad, that which was said to constitute the parting with dominion ought to be something which would be an effective parting with dominion in the place abroad where the property was situated; (3) the power of advancement did not extend to an advance of a sum to be applied & invested with the trustees of Lloyd's as a fund which would be available to meet the son's liabilities, so as to enable him to become an underwriter at Lloyd's; (4) as such an advance would not be expedient for the trust as a whole, the ct. could not sanction it under Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 57 (1).—Re CRAVEN'S ESTATE, LLOYDS BANK, LTD. v. COCKBURN (No. 1), [1937] Ch. 423; [1937] 3 All E. The servant was instructed to tell A. D. that what was in the box was for her. The box was not delivered until after the death of deceased, &, on being opened, it was found to contain a post office savings bank-book, which showed a certain sum standing to the credit of deceased. It was not disputed that there was an intention to make a donatio mortis causâ:—Held: the intended donatio mortis causâ failed, as there was no delivery, actual or constructive, to A. D., since the mere instructions by deceased to her servant, & the obedience to these instructions, were not sufficient to make the servant an agent of the intended donee.—Re THOMPSON'S ESTATE, [1928] I. The agreement was executed some months after pltf. had taken up shares. Pltf. alleged that the agreement was made in pursuance of an agreement made antecedent to his purchase of the shares. Deft. denied the antecedent agreement & claimed that the guarantee having been given for a past consideration, was not enforceable :—Held : on the facts, although the question of a guarantee had been raised between the parties prior to pltf.'s taking up the shares, there had been no animus contrahendi on the part of deft. to give the guarantee before the shares were acquired & the guarantee being therefore given for a past consideration was a nudum pactum & unenforceable.—POWER v. AHERN (1935), 29 Q. In an action on the bills deft. contended that as they had never been negotiated he did not incur the liabilities of an indorser & that his agreement, if any, was a guarantee & was not in writing, & he pleaded the Statute of Frauds :—Held : in the above circumstances pltfs. had authority under Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 20, to complete the bills by adding their indorsement, & that even if deft.'s agreement was a contract of guarantee the Statute of Frauds was no answer to a claim on the bills, & therefore the action succeeded.—MCCALL BROS., LTD. v. HARGREAVES, [1932] 2 K. The acceptor not having paid the bills at maturity, the drawer brought an action upon them against the third party as indorser :—Held : he was entitled to recover, inasmuch as the fact that his signature instead of being above was below that of the third party on the backs of the bills was a mere inadvertence which did not nullify the intentions of the parties or alter the rights which they would otherwise have had.—NATIONAL SALES CORPN., LTD. v. BERNARDI, BERNARDI v. NATIONAL SALES CORPN., LTD., [1931] 2 K. Guarantee of payments to contractor—Subject to due execution of work.]—A limited co. employed a building contractor to execute certain repairs & decorations to a building by an agreement under seal made between the co., one T. therein called the guarantor, & a bank, & the contractor. The agreement provided that the contractor should do the work for the sum of £1,500, to be paid in four equal instalments on named dates "subject to the said works being duly executed in accordance with this agreement." By clause 11 of the agreement the guarantor agreed with the contractor & with the bank, & undertook, that the co. should, subject to the said works being duly executed in accordance with the agreement duly & punctually make to the contractor the payments mentioned above, & that upon any default for three days on the part of the co. (written notice of which should be given by the contractor to the bank within six days of the default) in making any payment on the prescribed date, the guarantor would himself immediately make the payment so in default to the contractor. By clause 12 the bank agreed with the contractor & undertook, that upon any default for three days or more (written notice of which should be given to the bank by the contractor within three days of the default) on the part of the guarantor in making any payment under clause 11 the bank would immediately make the payment so in default to the contractor. The co. did not pay the first instalment. The contractor gave no notice either to the guarantor or to the bank. The contractor then issued a specially indorsed writ against the bank claiming the first instalment. The case was heard by an Official Referee, who found that at the date of the writ it was necessary to spend £80 in order to complete the work in accordance with the agreement. He deducted this sum from the amount claimed, & gave judgment for pltf. for the balance :—Held : the defts. were not liable.

By SCRUTTON & SLESSER, L.JJ., because it was a condition precedent to their liability that the works should be duly executed in accordance with the agreement, & the works were not so executed. By GREER & SLESSER, L.JJ., because the liability of defts. depended upon that of T., & he was never liable, because it was a condition precedent to his liability that pltf. should have given him notice of the co.'s default, & this notice had never been given.—ESHELBY v. FEDERATED EUROPEAN BANK, LTD., [1932] 1 K. f i. —— ——.]—By an agreement in writing pltf. let a house & shop to a tenant to hold the same as a monthly tenant at a certain monthly rent, the said rent to be paid regularly on the first of each month. There was a proviso that either party should have the right at any time to determine the tenancy by giving to the other one month's notice in writing of his intention so to do, the said notice to determine on any gale day. The following guarantee for the payment of the rent was endorsed on the agreement & signed by deft. : "I hereby guarantee the full & punctual payment of the rent reserved by the within agreement." Eight months' rent being in arrear pltf. sued deft. on his guarantee to recover the amount. Deft. admitted liability for the first month's rent but denied liability in respect of the seven other months, contending that he offered to guarantee payment of the rent on the implied condition that he should receive notice of any default by the tenant in making full & punctual payment, & that no notice was given to him, & accordingly he was unable to exercise his right to revoke his offer :—Held : deft.'s contention was unsustainable & pltf. was entitled to judgment for the amount claimed.—O'CONNOR v. SORAHAN, [1933] I. 561a. Guarantee of secured loan—Whether security for loan condition precedent.]—By a deed of guarantee for the repayment of a loan of £250,000 & interest, which recited that the lenders had at the request of the guarantors advanced to the borrowers £250,000 upon security of a charge on certain shares, the guarantors covenanted, in the event of the borrowers failing to make the repayments provided for, forthwith to repay to the lenders the said sum of £250,000 with interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. The deed further provided that whatever the position between the lenders & the borrowers, the guarantors should be liable for all moneys due as principal debtors & they were not to be released from liability by reason of time being given by the lenders or by their taking no steps to protect their securities. The shares above mentioned were at no time secured & had not in fact been issued. Upon default in repayment of part of the loan the liquidator of the guarantors rejected the proof by the liquidators of the lenders, contending that the security of the charge on the shares was a condition precedent to the guarantee :—Held : (1) upon a proper construction of the deed of guarantee, the contention of the liquidator of the guarantors was correct, & the guarantors were not bound by the guarantee. The existence of the shares was the basis of the contract of guarantee & this was not affected by the clause making the guarantors liable as principal debtors ; (2) the guarantors were not bound by the recital in the deed & were not estopped from setting up the facts relating to the shares.—Re PARENT TRUST & FINANCE CO., LTD., [1936] 3 All E. 608a. —— Claim for repayment of income tax—Whether maintainable.]—Where the payment of a sum advanced by a bank to a customer together with interest due or to become due thereon is guaranteed, & subsequently the whole sum due is paid by the guarantor, that is not a payment of interest by the guarantor but is a payment by him of a debt under the guarantee, not of a debt in respect of an advance made to him. He cannot, therefore, claim repayment of tax on " interest " on an advance from a bank under the provision of Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), s. 36 (1). The question whether, where the interest on such an advance is added to capital each half-year in accordance with the custom of bankers & that is acquiesced in by the customer, the payment of the whole sum by the guarantor was only a payment of capital, was not necessary to be decided.—HOLDER v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1932] A. Defts. agreed to do so up to a specified amount if pltfs. would sign a guarantee protecting defts. against loss through M.L. failing to meet their liabilities. In the events which happened M.L. received advances from the New York branch of defts. which they were unable to repay. Defts. had in their custody cash & securities belonging to pltfs. & refused to deliver them to pltfs. on demand, on the ground that the indebtedness of M.L. exceeded the value of the cash & securities. Pltfs. brought this action to recover possession of the cash & securities, together with interest, & defts. counterclaimed for, inter alia, a declaration that they were entitled to retain the cash & realise the securities & retain the proceeds in part satisfaction of the indebtedness of M.L. :—Held : the indebtedness of M.L. to the New York branch of defts. was covered by the guarantee given to defts. by M.T., & the total amount of that indebtedness exceeded the value of the cash & securities of pltfs. which were in the possession of defts. ; & defts, were therefore entitled to retain the cash & securities in part satisfaction of their claim under the guarantee.—MANN, TAYLOR & Co., LTD. v. ROYAL BANK OF CANADA (1935), 40 Com. 792a. As between themselves it was agreed that the husband should be primarily liable, but the bank did not recognise any such primary liability. The husband was adjudicated bkpt. & his property was sold by the trustee in bkpcy., with the bank's consent, the purchase price of the property charged to the bank being duly paid over to the bank. The bank also realised the stocks deposited by deft. Deft. claimed that the agreement between herself & her husband that the husband was to be primarily liable on the guarantee had the effect of creating an equitable charge in her favour on the husband's property & she alleged that the trustee in bkpcy. wrongfully sold the property charged to the bank by her husband for less than he could have obtained for it, & she claimed from the trustee in bkpcy. the difference between the purchase price obtained & the price which she alleged ought to have been obtained :—Held : the agreement between deft. & her husband did not have the effect of creating an equitable charge upon the husband's property, & deft. had no cause of action against the trustee in bkpcy.—PRATT'S TRUSTEE v. PRATT, [1936] 3 All E. Moneys of the estate were stolen by the solr. through the use of blank cheques which E. had left with him after E. had signed them. In an action by a beneficiary of the estate judgment was given against E. as administrator & against the co. as surety. By third party notice the co. claimed to be entitled to be indemnified by E. This claim was dismissed & the co. appealed :—Held : the co. by requiring the estate moneys to be so deposited & by requiring the cheques to be countersigned by the solr. as its agent did not clothe him with such authority to intermeddle in the administration of the estate that it must now be said that in stealing the moneys the solr. was acting as agent for the co. ; the extent of his authority as agent for the co. was to countersign cheques, & the loss to the estate was not caused by the countersigning but by the use of the cheques, over which the administrator had full control, after they had been so signed ; & in handling the cheques so signed & the proceeds thereof the solr. was acting as solr. for the administrator & not as agent for the co. The appeal was, therefore, allowed.—RAMSDELL v. ELLIOTT & UNITED STATES FIDELITY & GUARANTY CO., [1937] 1 W. W. R. 37 ; 1 D. L. R. 269 ; 6 L. Jo. 259.—CAN.

1200a. —— —— —— Hire-purchase agreement.] —Pltfs. were the assignees of the rights of the R. Co. under a hire-purchase agreement dated July 6, 1927, whereby the co., "the owners," agreed to let to one T., "the principal," a motor car on the terms that he should be at liberty to purchase the car at a fixed price, paying as a first payment £22 0*s.* 8*d.*, & thereafter monthly payments of £14 3*s.* 4*d.*, until the whole was paid. The payments by the principal under this agreement were guaranteed by deft. as surety under a document signed by her on July 6, 1927. The principal afterwards fell in arrears in payment of the monthly instalments, & on Feb. 3, 1928, he wrote to the owners offering a cheque for £20 drawn by a friend in part payment. On Feb. 4 the owners wrote accepting this cheque & stipulating that the rest of the arrears should be paid within one month. The cheque was sent to the owners, but the arrears, which amounted to £79, were not paid within one month, & the owners then took back the car, acting upon their powers under the hire-purchase agreement. On Sept. 18, 1928, the owners assigned their rights under that agreement to pltfs., who claimed £122 in all from deft. as surety:—Held: (1) there was a binding contract by the owners to give time to the principal debtor; (2) the liability for payments under the hire-purchase agreement was one & indivisible, & deft. was entirely discharged from her suretyship.—MIDLAND MOTOR SHOWROOMS v. NEWMAN, [1929] 2 K. from S. & Co. Applt., at the request of C., one of the twelve persons, allowed her to take the deeds deposited by her away for the purpose of raising a loan. S. & Co. having gone into liquidation, the bank called upon applt. to make good his guarantee. Thereupon resps. brought an action claiming that they were entitled to have all the deeds deposited by them under the terms of the charge discharged from the debt to which they were made liable to contribute under the charge, on the ground that, by applt. allowing C. to withdraw the deeds deposited by her, their risk had been increased :—Held : (1) there had been an alteration made in the position of those whose properties remained deposited as securities under the charge by reason of applt. allowing the withdrawal by C. of the deeds deposited by her, & they not having consented to the alteration, their properties, the deeds of which they had deposited, were discharged from all claims under the charge ; their right of marshalling had been affected by the withdrawal of the deeds of one of the parties, & the materiality of the alteration was a question to be decided by them ; (2) the same reasoning was applicable, whether what was contributed were securities or personal liability.—SMITH v. WOOD [1929], 1 Ch. 14 ; 98 L. 1224a. Guarantee of call on shares—Forfeiture of shares—Discharge of surety.]—On Dec. 29, 1920, D. & P., who afterwards became bkpt., joined with others in entering into an agreement with a co., whereby they guaranteed to them the payment of all the instalments then owing upon the shares in the co. specified in the schedule to the agreement, the amount of D. & P.'s liability being limited to the sum therein mentioned. The shareholders having been served with notice calling upon them to pay the instalments due on their respective shares on pain of forfeiture, & D. & P. also having been required to pay the same on or before Feb. 17, 1925, in case of non-compliance by the shareholders with the notice, & default in payment having been made by both the shareholders & by D. & P., the co. forfeited the bulk of the shares in pursuance of the power conferred upon them by their arts. of assocn. Art. 31 was as follows : "Any member whose shares have been forfeited shall, notwithstanding such forfeiture, be liable to pay to the co. all calls or other moneys, interest & expenses, whether presently payable or not, owing in respect of such shares at the time of forfeiture, together with interest thereon from the time of forfeiture until payment at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum or such less rate as may be fixed by the Board." On Sept. 9, 1925, a receiving order in bkpcy. was made against D. & P., & on Apr. 10 the co. lodged their proof for the amount claimed to be due on the guarantee. Upon a motion by the co. for the reversal of the decision of the trustee in rejecting their proof :—Held : (1) the right created by art. 31 was a new right which arose upon the forfeiture of the shares & one which placed a more onerous obligation upon the shareholders than if the shares had not been forfeited. The forfeiture, therefore, was an interference with the rights of the sureties as against the principal debtor ; (2) the co. had by exercising their option to forfeit the shares deprived the sureties of their lien on the shares which they would have been entitled to, had the co., in lieu of forfeiture, compelled them to pay the calls ; with the result that, upon the principles stated in Polak v. Everett, No. 1222, ante, D. & P. were discharged from their liability as sureties under the guarantee & the decision of the trustee in their bkpcy. in rejecting the proof of the co. was right.—Re DARWEN & PEARCE, [1927] 1 Ch. 176 ; 95 L. The lessee of certain premises was adjudicated a bkpt., & his trustee, acting in pursuance of the powers conferred on him by 1914 Act, s. 54, disclaimed the lease. Prior to the bkpcy., the lessee had sublet a portion of the premises. Deft. had guaranteed the payment of the rent, & the lessors obtained from him sums equal to the rent which would have accrued if the lease had still been in existence :—Held : the disclaimer discharged the surety, on the ground that if the surety were called on to pay he would have a right of proof against the bkpt.'s estate, whereas the intention of sect. 54 was that the bkpt. & his property should be released from all liability.—MORRIS (D.) & SONS, LTD. v. JEFFREYS (1932), 148 L. 1574a. —— Creditor member of trade association.]—The Liverpool Corn Trade Assocn., Ltd., is an organisation for promoting & protecting the interests of those engaged in the corn trade. Membership is confined to individuals, but cos., either public or private, engaged in the trade can have the advantages of membership by nominating, in the case of a private co., one representative, on condition that a guarantee by the directors is given to the assocn. that the co. will duly discharge its liabilities to members, & for the conduct of its representative. Deft. in 1931 had joined with S. & two other directors of S. & Co., Ltd., a private co., in a joint & several guarantee to the assocn., given in accordance with this provision. This action was brought by pltfs. claiming a declaration that they were entitled as trustees for ten firms & cos. who were creditors of S. & Co., Ltd., to enforce the guarantee in question. S. & Co., Ltd., got into financial difficulties & in 1935 S. executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors under which he was released from all " debts, claims, & demands whatsoever " which the other parties to the deed might have against him with the usual reservation of rights against sureties. Pltfs. & the ten firms & cos. whose debts made up the sum claimed were parties amongst others, to the deed of assignment :—Held : (1) the release in the deed of assignment operated to release all the joint guarantors & the position was in no way affected by the reservation of rights against sureties ; (2) " members of the assocn." meant members of the assocn. or any incorporated co. whose nominee or nominees is or are members of the assocn. ; (3) the assocn. was entitled to sue for the benefit of the members entitled & as trustee for them ; (4) " liabilities " in the guarantee meant all liabilities to individual members or to cos. whose nominees were members.—LIVERPOOL CORN TRADE ASSOCN., LTD. v. HURST, [1936] 2 All E. Part X.—Avoidance of the Guarantee.

1656a. —— Power to contract out of duty to disclose.]—A Harbour & Dock Board, having resolved to enlarge their dock, invited tenders for the work from numerous contractors, informing them where the contract for the work might be inspected & instructing them that they must make local & independent inquiries as to the nature of the surface, strata, soil & sub-soil or ground to be excavated, & the nature & height of the tides, & generally must obtain their own information on all matters affecting the construction, completion & maintenance of the works, & as to all matters which might influence them in making their tender & fixing the rates & prices therein, & that the Board would not be responsible for any information the contractors might obtain except such as was given in reply to a written inquiry addressed to the clerk or manager of the Board. Of several tenders received that of a co., K. & R., Ltd., was by far the lowest. The Board informed K. & R., Ltd., that they were not prepared to accept that tender unless K. & R., Ltd., procured a guarantee to the amount of £50,000 for the due performance of the contract. In compliance with this demand K. & R., Ltd., procured a joint & several bond from an insurance co. whereby that co. & K. & R., Ltd., jointly & severally bound themselves to the Board for the due performance of the contract by K. & R., Ltd. The Board accepted this guarantee, & K. & R., Ltd., entered upon the work in pursuance of the contract, which made the final certificate of the Board's engineers final & binding between the parties. In the course of the work the contractors encountered an unexpected quantity of water in the soil, & the expense of pumping was such that they could not continue the work without further funds. Thereupon the Board advanced them two sums of £20,000 & £25,000 to be repaid upon certain terms; but, notwithstanding these loans, the contractors failed to complete the contract & went into liquidation, & the Board's engineers made a final certificate showing over £78,000 due from the contractors to the Board. This sum included so much of the £45,000 lent to the contractors as remained unpaid at the date of their default. The Board sued the insurance co. on the joint bond :—Held : (1) the bond was a contract of guarantee & not a contract of insurance; (2) there was no such misrepresentation or non-disclosure of material facts by the Board as to invalidate the bond; (3) the loans of £20,000 & £25,000 being outside & independent of the contract, the amount due thereon ought not to have been included in the engineers' final certificate; inasmuch as the amount due & unpaid on the loans was unascertained, the amount due on the bond being equally undefined, the Board could not recover upon it.—TRADE INDEMNITY CO., LTD. v. WORKINGTON HARBOUR & DOCK BOARD, [1937] A. PART X. SECT. 2.

d i. ——.]—There is no universal obligation on a creditor entering into a contract of suretyship to make disclosure to the surety of all the facts relative to the dealings between the creditor & the principal. There must, however, be no undue concealment, which consists not merely in the omission to disclose such facts as need be mentioned in answer to the surety's questions, but also in the non-disclosure of those facts which the creditor must spontaneously disclose to him. The omission by the creditor to reveal to the surety every fact which under the circumstances the surety would expect not to exist amounts to an implied representation that it does not exist: & it depends upon the nature of the transaction in each case whether the fact not disclosed is so impliedly represented. Where a guarantee was given for the payment of "all moneys which are now or at any time hereafter may be due or owing to the co. from . . . on the general balance of his account with the co." there could not be at the time of its making any implied representation by the co. arising from the co.'s non-communication to the surety of the state of the account that there was no indebtedness to which the guarantee could apply.—NATIONAL MORTGAGE & AGENCY CO. by the co. reported on, both defts. at the request of pltfs. returned the unfavourable reports.

Pltfs., an action for libel having been brought against them in the K. B. Div., commenced proceedings against both defts. for an injunction to restrain disclosure of the unfavourable reports which had been furnished, & a declaration that they were liable to indemnify pltfs., against any loss or damage arising from this disclosure. They also claimed damages:—Held: (1) deft. co. did not disclose the report to any person other than its own solrs. & that this did not constitute a breach of contract with pltfs. within the meaning of the agreements; (2) deft. M. became a subscriber to pltfs.' confidential reports for the purpose of obtaining a report on the X. The action against deft. co. therefore failed; (4) the agreement entered into by M. not to disclose the confidential information furnished to him & to indemnify pltfs. for any loss or damage which they might suffer from a breach by a subscriber of the conditions upon which reports were furnished, was not void as being against public policy; (5) the disclosure by deft. M., although a breach of this contract, did not create the liability of pltfs. to be sued for libel; this liability did not arise directly or indirectly out of any act of the deft. M. & was not therefore within the scope of the express indemnity contained in pltfs.' agreement with M. ag. Supply of information—Indemnity against loss.]—Resp. carried on a business of financing motor car dealers. Applt. carried on a business of obtaining & giving information as to credit, character, etc., & including the checking of cars in dealers' hands & reporting thereon. Applt. made an agreement to supply its service to resp. Resp. signed an "indemnity agreement," agreeing to treat in confidence the information furnished, to hold applt. harmless on account of any damages arising from publication or dissemination of information or careless handling of reports, & agreeing, "in consideration of receiving this service, & as a condition of its rendition," that neither applt. nor its employees should be responsible "for any loss that may occur to resp. through the use of the information furnished." Through careless car-checking reports, made without personally checking over the cars, in respect of a dealer, made by a local inspection agent of applt. & passed on to resp., resp. was misled, to its loss, & sued applt. for damages. Applt. claimed that it had not bound itself for more than reasonable care in the selection of its inspection agents, &, further, that, in any case, it was relieved from liability by the concluding clause of the indemnity agreement:—Held: resp. should recover. The concluding clause of the indemnity agreement did not, on proper construction of that agreement, relate to car-checking reports.—RETAIL CREDIT CO., INCORPORATED v. COMMERCIAL FINANCE CORPN., LTD. & MERCHANT'S CASUALTY INSURANCE CO., RETAIL CREDIT CO., INCORPORATED v. COMMERCIAL FINANCE CORPN., LTD. & WESTERN ASSURANCE CO., [1932] S. for any interruption, accident, damage, loss or injury of, or to any person, property or rights, whether public or private, & any loss of life caused in connection with the works." On Dec. 20, 1929, a train was dispatched by resps.' servants from London, & as it approached the bridge one of the carriage doors, which had swung open, struck two of applts.' workmen, killing one & seriously injuring the other. Resps. were adjudged to pay the representatives of deceased workman & the injured workman £3,614 1*s*. Resps. claimed indemnity in respect of that liability from applts. The trial judge found that the railway carriage door swung open by reason of its having been insecurely fastened at Fenchurch Street Station, owing to the negligence of resps.' servants, but held that under clause 34 (a) applts. were liable to indemnify resps. The Ct. of Appeal affirmed that decision :—Held : the accident arose in connection with the bridge where the men were working, & the contractors, therefore, under clause 34 (a), must indemnify resps. in respect of the accident.—FURNESS SHIPBUILDING CO. v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. 1908a. —— —— Indemnity against loss on debentures—Sale of debentures by party indemnified.]—Deft. was the chairman of the S. Co., which at the end of 1921 was seeking to issue £15,000 First Lien Debentures to rank pari passu with a previous issue of first lien debentures of the same amount ; & deft., having interested pltf. in the matter, sent him a letter of indemnity, dated Feb. 17, 1922, in these terms : "Regarding the issue of £15,000 First Lien Debentures of the S. Co. at the price of £80 per £100 . . . I understand you are subscribing for £3,000 of the same at a cost to you of £2,400. In consideration of your giving me one-fourth of any profit you may receive on such investment, I hereby indemnify you against any loss thereon. The expression 'any profit' only refers to the redemption price of £100 per £80, which, when received, will show a profit of £20 per bond & the bonus out of the proceeds of any royalties on oil sales from the co.'s properties during the currency of the debentures. . . . The interest you will be entitled to receive from the co. is excluded from the consideration of profits." The debentures were redeemable on July 1, 1925, but they were secured by two debenture trust deeds which gave power to extend the due date, & in Apr. 1925, steps were taken which resulted in its extension to July 1, 1930. In May & June, 1925, a correspondence took place between pltf. & deft. in which pltf. announced his intention of selling the debentures, & deft. protested against this, claiming that they must be kept till their due date. On July 16, 1925, pltf. put the debentures up for sale, & in the absence of other bidders sold them to his son for £25. He then commenced proceedings to recover the amount of his loss, but the House of Lords decided that nothing was payable under the indemnity until the due date arrived. On July 18, 1928, the co. went into liquidation & pltf., having repurchased the debentures from his son, brought these proceedings to recover his loss :—Held : in selling the debentures pltf. had committed a breach of an implied term of the contract, & having failed to maintain the position essential to enable deft. to receive the consideration for the indemnity, he had committed a breach of a term going to the root of the contract. Deft. had elected by his pleadings in the previous action to treat the contract as at an end & pltf. could not therefore maintain the present action.—GUY-PELL v. FOSTER, [1930] 2 Ch. 169 ; 99 L. J. 9a. —— Land flooded at spring tides.]—In 1928 pltf. purchased a large strip of foreshore & let part of it for caravans & bungalows. She erected a fence round the land side, with gates at three places at which persons other than local inhabitants were charged 1*d.* toll. Deft., the proprietor of a tea shop at the Western end of pltf.'s land, claimed that the fence obstructed five public or customary rights of way. Four of the alleged public ways were over land flooded at spring tides. For the purpose of asserting these rights, deft. pulled down some of pltf.'s fence, & did not absolve himself from association with a mob which also pulled down another part of the fence. Deft., without joining the A.-G., counterclaimed for a declaration that the five ways were public, alleging that his tea shop gave him an interest in their remaining open which was not possessed by the general public & that therefore the fiat of the A.-G. was not necessary :—Held : (1) there was a public right of way over three of the ways claimed ; (2) the damage done by deft. was excessive ; (3) the fiat of the A.-G. was necessary.—SEATON v. SLAMA (1932), 77 Sol. 52a. Road leading to the sea.]—Pltf. claimed damages against several defts. for trespassing over his land, & asked for an injunction. Defts. alleged that they were lawfully exercising public rights of way. Evidence was given of public user by five different classes of persons, extending over the whole period of living memory, of two defined ways over pltf.'s land from a public high road to the sea at high-water mark. It was also proved that pltf.'s land was in strict settlement from 1856 to 1908, & that during that period there was never an owner capable of dedication. The county ct. judge held that there being no owner capable of dedication during the period of proved public user, he was not entitled to infer dedication from such user. He held also that the ways claimed by defts. had no sufficient terminus ad quem. On appeal :—Held : (1) although the public have only limited rights over the foreshore, the sea may be a sufficient terminus ad quem for a public way, which may now be proved, even though it does not lead to a public place ; (2) where there is evidence of public user of a way throughout the period of living memory, but there has been no owner of the land capable of dedication during that period, the tribunal of fact which has to decide the issue of dedication or no dedication may infer a dedication at some date anterior to the earliest proved user by an owner capable of dedication ; (3) there is no præsumptio juris to compel the tribunal to draw such an inference even from unrebutted evidence of long-continued & uninterrupted user.—WILLIAMS-ELLIS v. COBB, [1935] 1 K. 164a. Whether public highway—Claim of dedication.]—Pltfs. claimed a declaration that a way over deft.'s land was a public highway for vehicular traffic up to a certain point & for foot traffic from that point to Cockington Church on the ground that dedication should be presumed from evidence of uninterrupted use by the public throughout living memory & from evidence of reputation. The church was surrounded by deft.'s grounds, &, apart from a private path from his grounds, there was no access to the church except by the way in question. Deft. admitted that there was a church way for parishioners along the way, but he denied that there was any public right of way. Since 1774 the title to the property had been such that the owners could, if so minded, have dedicated the way to the public. The freehold of the church was in the incumbent & it had fulfilled all the functions of a parish church, but no person had a right to enter it without the permission of the vicar & churchwardens when it was not open for Divine service. The ct. found that apart from parishioners comparatively few persons had visited the church until about 1890, but since the War large numbers of persons had done so by the way in question & no one had ever been turned back. Owing to the increased use of the way notices were put up that visitors must keep to the path & not pick the flowers & that there would be no admission through the gate after 6 p.m. There was also a notice "No thoroughfare except to the church." In 1923 annoyance from visitors began & the gate was ordered to be locked after dusk, but no complaint was ever made, though some persons were actually prevented from going along the way to the church :—Held : on the evidence, the use of the way could properly be explained as having taken place by permission, & there was no reason why the ct. should presume from that use dedication to the public, & therefore the action failed.—A.-G. v. MALLOCK (1931), 146 L. sf. Track leading to foreshore.]—A proprietor, who owned the foreshore ex adverso of his lands, brought an action of declarator that there existed no right of way over a track about a quarter of a mile in length leading from a public road to the foreshore. The track was held to have been part of a road extending to the foreshore which became a public road in 1819, but which ceased to be maintained at public expense in 1836. It was proved that from 1865 to 1934, when the proprietor first attempted to close the track, it had been used by the public as an access to the foreshore for the bathing & recreation. The been at one time a public road, the foreshore at its terminus had acquired the character of a public place which it had never lost ; & further that, even if it was not established that the track had ever been part of a public road, the resort by the public to the foreshore for recreation had made the foreshore a public place prior to 1894, when the prescriptive period began ; (2) the extent of the public use of the track throughout the prescriptive period was consistent, not with tolerance by the proprietor, but with the assertion of a right by the public.

Opinion, per Lord MONCRIEFF, that a public road could not lose its character as such merely by failure on the part of the road authority to maintain it & without resort by them to the statutory procedure for closing ....—BUTE (MARQUIS) v. M'KIRDY & M'MILLAN, [1937] S. C. 93.—SCOT.

298a. —— —— —— Paths joining existing highways.]—Evidence of long public user, as of right, of a pathway or roadway for the purpose of passing from one public place to another, is not the less ground for inferring dedication because recreation may have been the sole motive of such user.

H. & W. were neighbouring freeholders, & the sites of their properties originally formed part of the D. estate. The property of H. was originally let on a long lease in 1878 to one G., together with a right of way over a rough road, of the nature of a timber road, leading up from the London Road towards the property & past the property to Box Hill. In 1916 H. acquired the freehold of the property, & took a conveyance of the roadway in 1924. W., without the consent of H., opened a small gate for pedestrians in the boundary fence. In the action H. claimed a declaration that he was the freeholder of the said roadway & an injunction to restrain W. from trespassing thereon. Evidence was given of public user between Box Hill & the London Road for purposes of pleasure:—Held: the evidence of public user led to a presumption that the land had been dedicated, & that the motive of such user was irrelevant.—HUE v. WHITELEY, [1929] 1 Ch. 440; 98 L. J. Ch. 227; 140 L. T. 531.

310a. ——.]—A local authority acquired, in 1875, an area of land under its Act, in accordance with which it laid out streets & made improvements in the area. But a plot of land included in the area was practically neglected for sixteen years, & was then handed over to the local authority's Parks Committee for use as an open space & was drained & gravelled. Later, a fountain & certain structures were erected on the plot, & the public used the plot freely & continuously. In or about 1928 the local authority wished to build a tuberculosis dispensary & offices on the plot, & the Minister of Health approved its appropriation for that purpose. In an action by the Attorney-General on relation for an injunction to restrain the local authority from building so as to interfere with the right of user & enjoyment of the plot by the public:—Held: the public had not acquired by user a public right of way over the plot; the public rights over the plot were general & to some extent precarious, & could be destroyed under Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1907 (c. 53), s. 95.—A.-G. v. MANCHESTER CORPN., [1931] 1 Ch. 254; 100 L. 311a. Footpath along sea cliff.]—Where there was evidence of the user by the public of a footpath along a sea cliff for some distance when its direction continued on a line slanting inland, & during the course of some twenty years, owing to erosion by the sea, the footpath so used had receded about twenty or thirty feet inland, though the ct. was always slow to infer the dedication of a public right of way along a sea cliff, such a dedication could be here inferred, having regard to the fact that part of the footpath did not run along the sea cliff, & no objection to its user had been made by the owner of the land over which the footpath continued after leaving the sea cliff. Pltfs. having claimed that there was no public right of way over a strip of land under a portion of a fence removed by defts.:—Held: the public had wandered from the original right of way over the land of pltfs. when it was in the hands of their predecessor in title & was derelict, but the user of the new way by the public had never been acquiesced in, & there had never been a dedication of it to the public use, & pltfs. were entitled to a declaration that there was no such public right of way.—BOULTWOOD v. PAIGNTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. 322a. —— User by sufferance.]—Deft. council claimed that there was a public footpath over pltf.'s park. On a plan attached to an inclosure award of 1816 no such public footpath was set out, & since that time down to 1901 the park had been in settlement with no one capable of dedicating a right of way to the public. The alleged footpath led from the public road over part of the carriage drive to the hall, & then turned off through the park, leading to only three farms & three or four cottages, & by its use a distance of about sixty-four yards was saved. There was no evidence of dedication, & the evidence of user was by the occupants of the farms & cottages & their friends:—Held: the proof of uninterrupted user was no more than evidence from which the ct. could infer that at some time the owner of the soil had dedicated the path to the public of which there was no evidence, & the evidence of user was user by sufferance only since 1816, before which no such public footpath was shown to exist.—FENWICK v. HUNTINGDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. Pltf. produced two tithe maps, made respectively in 1802 & 1840, in neither of which was the right of way marked :—Held : the tithe maps were made for a special purpose, & not for the purpose of showing public or private rights other than as regards tithe ; they were not, therefore, primâ facie evidence enabling pltf. to contend that the dedication was at a subsequent date, so as to shift upon deft. the onus of proving that the dedication was prior to 1782.—STONEY v. EASTBOURNE RURAL COUNCIL, [1927] 1 Ch. 367 ; 95 L. 616a. —— Trees.]—As owner of a house at C., which was bounded on the west & north by public highways known as Mill Lane & St. Andrew's Road respectively, pltf. claimed the property in certain polled lime trees, proved to be about 110 years old, standing along the edge of the footpaths on the eastern & southern sides of those two highways. Pltf. having refused to comply with defts.' notice to remove the trees on the ground that they were dangerous & obstructions to traffic & defts. having, in consequence of her refusal, themselves removed three of the trees in St. Andrew's Road, pltf. brought this action, by which she claimed an injunction to restrain defts. from removing the remaining trees & for certain other relief. She claimed that the trees had been planted before the dedication of the roads as public highways, & that there had been excepted from such dedication the portions of the roads in which the trees were planted. There was no evidence of such restricted dedication as pltf. asserted, but, on the contrary, evidence that the trees in both roads were planted in areas over which, as ancient highways, the public had rights of passage. It was proved that some of the trees were, through disease & decay, so unstable as to be an immediate danger to the public & a nuisance to the highway, that others threatened to become a similar danger at short notice, & that the rest, including the three trees which defts. had removed, were a danger to traffic & a nuisance. On Aug. 16, 1920, the boundary of the borough of New Windsor was altered so as to include the parish of C. (Without), & it was admitted that the two roads were highways repairable by the inhabitants at large :—Held : (1) the roads were ancient highways upon which, after dedication to the public use, the trees were planted ; (2) even assuming pltf. had property in the trees, defts. as to those trees which had been proved to be a nuisance to the highway, had not merely a right but a duty to remove them, & as to the remaining trees, they were entitled to remove them as being obstructions to the rights of the public over the entire width of the roads, which were not limited to the use of the carriageways ; (3) the trees, as being parts of the " streets " or as produce of the soil thereof, vested under Public Health Act, 1875, in & came under the control of defts. as the highway authority, with the result that pltf. was not in a position to complain, & her action failed.—STILLWELL v. NEW WINDSOR CORPN., [1932] 2 Ch. 155 ; 101 L. In a case where a public carriage road was built upon a raised viaduct resting upon open arches & descending to the ground level upon embankments :—Held : (1) vesting of the road included (a) the whole masonry & structure of the viaduct, together with such soil as it actually occupied, (b) the soil of the embankments ; but not (c) the soil lying beneath & between the arches of the viaduct. The local authority, however, was entitled to a right of access to the latter at all times for the purpose of inspection & maintenance ; (2) such right of access was not forfeited by laches or acquiescence on the part of the local authority where it was necessary to enable such authority to perform its statutory duties.—HERTFORDSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. LEA SAND, LTD. Applts., proprietors of motor coaches, were owners of land bounded by a wall & abutting upon a street which was partly a footpath & partly a carriage-way. The footpath ran along the wall, & the carriage-way ran along the footpath. Applts., being minded to open a passage for vehicles from their land across the footpath & so into the carriageway, submitted to resps. a plan of the proposed works in accordance with the above enactment, & applied to them to sanction the works. Resps. found no fault with the proposed works as works, but they refused to sanction them, having regard to the safety of the public & the convenience of pedestrians & vehicular traffic which might use the highway:—Held: resps. were not authorised by the above sect. to take these matters into consideration in deciding whether to give their sanction to the proposed works; for the owner of land adjoining a highway has at common law a right of access to any part of the highway unless some statute has deprived him of the right, which sect. 62 of the Blackpool Improvement Act, 1879, did not purport to do.—MARSHALL v. BLACKPOOL CORPN., [1935] A. 786a. —— —— Increased burden of traffic.]—A road was constructed by pltf. corpn. under powers conferred by a private Act of 1875, which enacted that the road should be constructed according to a certain specification & that it should thereafter be maintained at pltfs.' expense. The road was completed in 1878 as a waterbound macadamised road in accordance with the statutory requirements & was fully maintained by them for many years, but ultimately it deteriorated owing to the increase of traffic of a kind unknown in 1878, & unless resort was had to tar-spraying, or to some similar modern expedient, the existing traffic would rapidly destroy the road:—Held: (1) pltfs. were liable to maintain the road in the condition in which it was completed in 1878, & that liability still continued, notwithstanding the change of circumstances brought about by the increase of traffic; (2) the obligation to maintain the road rested on pltfs. alone.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. AUDENSHAW URBAN COUNCIL & DENTON URBAN COUNCIL, [1928] Ch. 763; 97 L. 951a. —— ——.]—Relators were trustees of two wills, & as such owned lands abutting upon a certain road in the Metropolitan Borough of W. By notices dated Feb. 14, 1928, the trustees were required to pay to defts. two sums amounting to £1,473 11*s.* 2*d.*, being the estimated expenses of making up as a new street certain portions of the road upon which their lands respectively abutted. The A.-G. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, & relators as co-pltfs. claimed a declaration that those portions of the road were not "new streets" within Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 & 1862. Defts. contended that the road in question had not been dedicated to the public before Mar. 20, 1836, & was therefore not repairable by them. Further, they said that each of the portions of the road was in fact & in law a "new street" within Metropolis Management Acts, & that neither they nor their predecessors had at any time taken into charge or assumed the maintenance of the paving or roadway of the street of which the said portions of the road formed part:—Held: (1) on the evidence there was nothing to show that the road in question was anything else than a public highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The fact that repairs had been done by private owners for their own benefit was no evidence of any liability on their part to repair ratione tenuræ; (2) neither of the portions of road in respect of which the claim arose constituted a "new street" within Metropolis Management Acts.—A.-G. & PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. WOOLWICH METROPOLITAN BOROUGH COUNCIL (1929), 93 J. 1146a. Removal of footway.]—A municipal corpn., in exercise of its powers as highway authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149, widened a narrow street in the town by entirely removing a raised & kerbed footway on one side, & throwing its site into the carriage-way without any notice to or consent of the owner of the adjoining house & premises, who was also owner of one-half of the soil of the road. The owner brought an action in the county ct. for a mandatory order to restore the footway, & for damages for injury to his property. It was proved that the access to & egress from the property through doors in a garden wall was rendered inconvenient & dangerous by the removal of the footway, & the county ct. judge granted a mandatory injunction to defts. to restore the footway to a width of 1 ft. less than before:—Held: the county ct. judge had rightly directed himself in law, & there was evidence upon which he was entitled to find that the action of defts. in removing the footway was unreasonable & arbitrary, & it was not sufficient for the action to be bonâ fide; & the order was properly made.—HOWARD-FLANDERS v. MALDON CORPN. 1191a. —— Obstruction during construction of new road.]—A corpn., in making a new road connecting two existing roads in the same straight line with a bridge across a ravine dividing them, pulled down an old wall which closed a cul de sac in which one of the roads terminated, partly constructed the new road & erected a wooden fence at the end, beyond which was the ravine. Pltf. drove his car after dark down a public road leading straight into the new road under construction, & not seeing the fence in time, which had no red lamp or other warning of danger upon it, & was not watched, drove through it & fell with his car into the ravine, sustaining serious personal injury & damage to the car:—Held: the corpn. being in occupation of the land under construction as a new road, pltf. was not a trespasser upon private property, but an invitee, to whom they owed a duty to warn of any hidden danger; the unlighted fence was in the circumstances a concealed trap, &, pltf. not being guilty of contributory negligence, defts. were liable to him in damages for negligence.—OLDHAM v. SHEFFIELD CORPN. 1191b. —— Trench dug in unfinished road.]—Defts. in execution of a housing scheme were laying out a new road running eastwards from a certain highway & closed at its eastern end by a quickset hedge. Footpaths had already been laid out & edged with kerbstones; houses were being built on the northern side & heaps of earth & building materials made the footpath on this side impassable; the footpath on the south side was still unfinished, but was traversable; it was bounded by a fence of wooden posts & bars; the middle of the road was levelled but not metalled; across it, for laying an electric cable, defts. had cut a trench which they left unfenced & by night unlighted. They did not prevent persons, whether intending occupiers of houses or others, from walking down the new road. Pltf. on a Sept. evening, while there was still daylight, walked with a companion down the highway & into the new road along the southern footpath. Through a gap in the fence they went across other land occupied by defts. to a golf course. They returned somewhat hurriedly when it was growing dark, & pltf fell into the trench & was injured:—Held: the trench being apparent to all, there was nothing in the nature of a concealed danger or trap, & defts were not liable to pltf., who was a mere licensee.—COLESHILL v. MANCHESTER CORPN., [1928] 1 K. PART VIII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 7.

o i. —— ——.]—A public road crossed a stream by a bridge. There was a fence between the road & the land adjoining it, erected by the proprietors of the latter. At a point immediately adjoining the bridge there was a gap, 15 feet wide, in the fence. A pedestrian, on a dark night, mistaking this gap for the road, walked through it & fell into the stream & was drowned. In an action of damages against the proprietors of the land adjoining the road:—Held: there was no duty on such proprietors to fence a natural, as opposed to an artificially created, danger on their lands, any such duty, where it existed, falling on the road authorities.—MORRISON v. LONDON MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. o ii. —— ——.]—Defts. constructed a bridge across a navigable stream, having in it a draw or swing to enable vessels to ply on the river. There was not any gate or other protection to guard the approaches to the bridge when swung. A horse belonging to pltf. broke away from the person in charge of him, escaped out upon the public road, & ran a distance of about two miles to the bridge, reaching it while the draw was open to allow a vessel to pass, & rushing into the gap was drowned:—Held: deft. municipality could not be made answerable for the loss of the horse.—STEINHOFF v. KENT CORPN. The place of crossing was in a dangerous condition, by reason of the tracks not being ballasted but simply resting upon exposed sleepers. The car was imprisoned there & run into by a street car, & pltfs. were injured & the car damaged:—Held: the city corpn. were liable since, although no obligation to repair existed, there was a trap or concealed danger.—JAMES v. TORONTO (1925), 57 O. It was also established that defenders had not failed in their duty with respect either to the construction & condition of the lamp, or to the precautions taken to ensure that it should remain alight during the hours of darkness:—Held: the standard of performance could not be absolute, but must be relative to the best available means of achieving exact performance, &, in the absence of evidence of any failure on the part of defenders to take every reasonable means of carrying out their statutory obligations, they fell to be assoilzied.—KEOGH v. EDINBURGH MAGISTRATES, [1926] S. 1240 xiv. —— ——.]—Sect. 730 of the Winnipeg Charter, which gives the city a right of indemnity "of & from all costs, claims, & damages" caused by any obstruction, encroaching or nuisance placed on any public road by any person, firm, or corpn. whether pursuant to permit or agreement with the city or not, does not apply to claims for damages arising out of encroachment or nuisances created by the joint act of the city & the third party.—SCHALER v. WINNIPEG (Man.), [1929] 4 D. 1252 vii. —— —— ——.]—In the absence of a statute imposing the duty to keep a sidewalk in repair :—Held : deft. municipality was not liable for injuries sustained by a pedestrian as the result of its decay, where its construction was authorised by statute & there was no evidence of original faulty construction; the fact that no bye-law authorising its construction could be found, was held immaterial since no statutory provision made a bye-law necessary for the laying of sidewalks in streets the possession of which was already vested in the municipality.—GILROY v. BURNABY CORPN., [1931] 3 W. 1260 xxv. —— ——.]—A break in a water main of deft. city having occurred about Jan. 22, the city made a cut in the granolithic sidewalk at that point & excavated the earth to the water pipe. The excavated earth & some gravel were thrown back into the hole, &, beginning about the following Apr. 10, the excavated surface was kept under observation for subsidence, but it was not until about the following July 5 that the city's department in charge of resurfacing sidewalks was requested to act, & from Apr. 10 to July 9 there was a subsidence of about 24 inches & on nine occasions refilling was found necessary. On the intervening June 5 pltf. wife tripped, in a hole in the excavation area where a subsidence of four or five inches had taken place, & was injured. She had passed over the place in question many times, the latest, earlier on the evening of the accident. The trial judge found that the delay in repairing the sidewalk was intentional & due to the awaiting of such a rainfall or rainfalls as would in the opinion of some official cause a final settlement. The expert testimony was that now the curing & placing of cement may be done in winter months at a cost but little greater than at other seasons :—Held : said testimony had not been reasonably met & could not be ignored as merely theoretical; &, aside from it, the city should be held negligent in delaying the repair work beyond Apr. or May.—BRENNAN v. WINNIPEG CITY, [1936] 2 W. g (p. 403) i. —— —— ——.]—The law does not impose an unvarying obligation on a traveller using a city or country road of remembering all the pitfalls & dangers therein which he may have seen on previous journeys. The most that can be expected of a traveller who has knowledge of dangerous conditions is that the degree of care which he exercises should be reasonably commensurate with his knowledge. Where a municipality digs, for its own purposes, a pit extending into the road allowance it is bound to make the adjoining road safe for travellers.

Although country roads cannot be expected to be perfectly safe the public have a right to be protected against excavations or obstructions on or near the travelled way which render the road unsafe for travellers using it.—KELSO v. ROBLIN RURAL MUNICIPALITY, [1930] 3 W. 1266a. —— Non-repair of traffic stud.]—Pltf. whilst cycling along a road in defts.' area reached a line of traffic studs at the same time as a motor-car. As the car passed her one of the studs which had become loose shot out & struck her bicycle with such force as to overturn it, & pltf. was thrown to the ground & injured. The studs were inserted in the road by defts. as the highway authority under the powers conferred on them by Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 48, for the purpose of regulating the traffic, & there was evidence that the particular stud had been defective for some time. In an action brought by pltf. for damages for personal injury defts. contended that the stud formed part of the highway, & that pltf. had not proved misfeasance, for which alone a highway authority could be held liable :—Held : assuming, but without deciding, that the stud was physically part of the highway, the placing therein of the stud in such a manner that it became defective amounted to the placing of a nuisance on the highway, & defts. could not take advantage of the cases which dealt with maintenance of the highway, because the stud was not brought on to the highway as part of the maintenance of the highway under the Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), but for the purposes of traffic direction under the powers conferred on defts. by Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43).—SKILTON v. EPSOM & EWELL URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1937] 1 K. owned by the driver was injured by the car running into a ditch dug by the deft. village across a street at an intersection. Over the ditch was a culvert 24 feet long, which was covered in by road material, except for a space of about two feet at each end. Deft. was under a statutory duty to keep its roads, culverts, etc., " in a reasonable state of repair, having regard to the character of the road, culvert . . . & the locality in which the same is situated," & the statute made it liable for damages sustained by reason of default in carrying out that duty. Pltf. alleged that his injuries were caused by deft.'s negligence in allowing the ditch to become filled with growing weeds & grasses which obscured it, & in not erecting signals or barriers around the ditch :—Held : the village was not negligent in constructing the ditch & maintaining it in the condition in which it was at the time of the accident.—BARTOK v. TANTALLON VILLAGE, [1937] 2 W. h (p. 404) i. —— Rocks near highway.]—Owing to the failure of the driver of pltf.'s car to follow a diversion of the highway the car, after travelling over a grass plot, hit rocks imbedded in the earth by nature :—Held : the fact that the municipality had not erected a sign or signal indicating the diversion or placed a guard rail at said point was not negligence & the presence of the rocks in question near the highway did not render it liable.—PARKINS v. COULEE, [1930] 3 W. k (p. 404) vi. —— Failure to erect substantial barricade during repairs.]—When work of excavation on a highway was begun, the contractor put up two signs on the right-hand side of the road : " Drive slowly, men at work," & " closed to traffic." These signs were at some distance from the excavation. The road-superintendent put up a barricade with a red lantern & a detour sign at a place where the roads fork. This consisted of a board extending about half-way across the travelled portion of the highway, supported at one end by a telegraph pole & at the other by an iron rod set into the road :—Held : not a " substantial barricade " within Highway Improvement Act.—RUTTAN v. R., [1931] 1 D. k (p. 404) vii. —— Safety platform.]—Pltf. while driving a motor car at night was injured by colliding with a safety island or platform which, under authority given deft. city by its charter, had been placed by it on the street for the use of persons using tram cars. The judge held that the platform was a " trap," because of the fact that it differed very little in colour, if at all, from the rest of the highway ; & he awarded pltf. damages. Deft. appealed :—Held : the appeal should be allowed, since the platform was properly placed, & there was no evidence that deft.'s failure to furnish more light at or near the platform than it did supply or to paint the platform amounted to misfeasance which left the highway in disrepair.—KNIGHT v. WINNIPEG, [1930] 1 W. q (p. 408) i. —— ——.]—Deft. municipality when in pursuance of its statutory powers it was constructing a sewer along the side of a highway erected a barricade of planks against which the earth taken from the excavation was piled up. The barricade & the pile of earth occupied so much of the sidewalk that a path only 18 inches wide was left behind the barricade for the use of pedestrians. Owing to ordinary rainfall & the moist character of the earth so piled up, there was a seepage of water carrying slimy particles of clay through the spaces between the planks resulting in the surface of the pathway becoming dangerously muddy & slippery. Pltf. while walking along the pathway slipped on said surface & was seriously injured :—Held : deft. had created & continued a nuisance which was the proximate & sole cause of pltf.'s injuries.—WATTS v. DISTRICT OF BURNABY (B. 1372a. —— —— Liability of water company.]—A water co., at the request & expense of the owner of a house, laid down a service pipe leading from their main under the street into the house, in which they placed a stop cock for the purpose of regulating the supply of water. This stop-cock was protected by a cover or guard-box let into the pavement, which was provided with a lid or flap. Owing to the hinge of the lid or flap being out of repair, it projected above the pavement, & pltf. while passing along the street tripped over it & sustained injury. The apparatus could not be repaired without being removed, or removed without breaking up the pavement. The jury found that there was negligence on the part of those who were liable for the repair of the hinge :—Held : the co., who alone had power to break up the street for the purpose of repairing the guard-box, were responsible for its repair, & liable in respect of the injuries sustained by pltf.—CHAPMAN v. FYLDE WATERWORKS CO., *[1894] 2 Q. st. Use of street as golf course.]—Part of the golf course used by deft. club was land which was shown on a registered plan of subdivision as a street. Under the governing legislation, the dedication of said land as a public street was effective forthwith on registration of the plan. The street was never graded or used as a street, & there were golf tees, greens, etc., thereon. After the street had been so used for a number of years, pltf. bought a tract of land bounded by the street & erected a small house thereon in which he lived. Pltf. complained that many golf balls were driven on to his property & that players trespassed thereon in search of the balls & that he was obstructed by said use by the club of said land in his right to use it as a public street. Pltf. asked for damages & an order for the removal of the tees, etc., as against both the golf club & the municipality & for an injunction restraining the club's members from playing on the street ;—Held : the club should be enjoined against using the street as part of its golf course & ordered to restore it to its normal state.—CHISWELL v. CHARLESWOOD & ALCREST GOLF CLUB, LTD., RURAL MUNICIPALITY (No. 2), [1937] 1 W. 1435a. Street traders—Licence—Application to renew—Duties of borough council.]—(1) The remedy by appeal to petty sessions given by London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1927 (c. xxii.), s. 35 (2), to a street trader who is aggrieved by the refusal of the renewal of his licence as a street trader is equally beneficial, convenient & effectual as mandamus would be. Mandamus will therefore not lie to a Metropolitan borough council to compel them to hear & determine a street trader's application for renewal of a licence.

(2) In deciding such applications, the council is an administrative body, not a judicial one; it may therefore properly take into account a report of a committee, & its decision will not be invalidated merely by the fact that some members taking part in it were not present at an earlier meeting when the applicant was heard.

(3) Semble: the Act does not contemplate the calling of evidence before the council on such applications; but the justices at petty sessions who hear an appeal can conveniently hear such evidence as may be necessary.—R. v. LEWISHAM CORPN., Ex p. JACKSON (1929), 93 J. He was summoned for selling goods from a barrow without a licence contrary to L.C.C. (General Powers) Act, 1927, s. 39. The magistrate dismissed the summons on the ground that the borough council having granted a licence, they could dispute its validity; & also upon the ground that the prosecution was instituted to test the system of one-day licences & was not bona fide:—Held: licences could only be granted in accordance with the provisions of the Act, & any licence issued otherwise was invalid. Part X.—Interference with Highways under Statutory Powers.

1761a. Duty of local authority—On request to exercise statutory powers.] — A local authority, requested to carry out in a "street laid out but not dedicated" constructive works under its statutory powers, need not necessarily inquire into the title of those making the request. But it must, in considering whether compliance with the request will be a lawful exercise of the powers, have regard primarily to the physical conditions obtaining in the area of the proposed operations; & those physical conditions will be one of the principal factors in determining whether relevant statutory definitions are complied with. This applies to powers conferred by either public general or private local statutes.—DAVIES v. RIPON CORPN., [1928] Ch. 884; 97 L. J. Ch. 479; 139 L. T. 636; 92 J. P. 153; 26 L. G. R. 530.

1775a. ——.]—Defts., who owned & used traction engines for the purposes of their business, drove two of these engines on a very hot day in July over a highway belonging to pltfs., who were the highway authority for the district. The highway, which had been constructed as a first class main road for the purpose of bearing traffic of all sorts, had a mexphalte surface. In passing along the most exposed part of the highway, the driving wheels of these engines sank into the road at a point where the surface was very soft, with the result that the road was damaged. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover extraordinary expenses, pursuant to Highways & Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878 (c. 77), s. 23, as amended by Locomotives Act, 1898 (c. 29), s. 12. They also claimed damages for wrongful abuse of the highway by defts. & for nuisance & negligence:—Held: as agricultural traffic, including heavy traction engines, was admittedly part of the ordinary traffic, & the weights in the present case were normal, no claim for excessive weight or for extraordinary traffic could arise under the Act of 1878; there was no excess whatever by defts. of the lawful use of the highway & no wrongful abuse of their rights of passing & repassing: the injury to the highway was due to a peculiar & unique conjunction of heat & of atmospheric & other conditions; defts.' vehicles did not constitute a nuisance, & there was no negligence on the part of defts.—EASTBOURNE COUNTY BOROUGH v. FULLER & SONS (1928), 93 J. Six months later he gave another certificate which referred to extraordinary expenses incurred partly before & partly after the date of the first certificate on a single road in one of the townships:—Held: the first certificate was good, &, with regard to expenses incurred before it was made, the period of six months limited by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11, for recovering the amount began to run from the date of the first certificate.

The co. stopped up & enclosed part of such street & formed a cul-de-sac. They constructed a warehouse abutting upon the pavement in such cul-de-sac. The warehouse had flaps which opened across the pavement, & for forty years the co. loaded & unloaded goods from such flaps across the pavement into & from vans standing in the cul-de-sac from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily. The London County Council by a private Act, which incorporated the Lands Clauses Acts, were empowered to make a new street, & they gave notice to treat for certain premises in the possession of the ry. co. The new street included the pavement above referred to. The co. claimed compensation (inter alia) for injurious affection of the above-mentioned warehouse by reason of the works of the council preventing them from delivering goods from the warehouse across the pavement to vans in the way they had therefore done :—Held : the use which the ry co. had made of the pavement an stopping up of such pavement under their statutory powers above referred to, although such pavement had not been enclosed the council were bound to acquire an easement over such pavement for the purpose of making the new street, & the co. were entitled to compensation for injurious affection of the warehouse.—Re GREAT EASTERN RY. 1988a. On liability to repair.]—A part of an old footpath, repairable by the inhabitants at large, was diverted & the substituted highway was a road 60 feet wide. All the usual steps were taken under Highways Act, 1835 (c. 50), in respect of the diversion, except that at no time did the justices view the new highway in accordance with sect. 91 of the Act. From 1911 the old highway had been built over and the new highway continuously used. Two frontagers claimed a declaration that the new highway was repairable by the inhabitants at large :—Held : (1) the proper proceedings to test this question were proceedings in a ct. of summary jurisdiction under the Private Streets Works Act, 1892 (c. 57) ; (2) this was not a proper case for the ct. in the exercise of its discretion to make a declaration ; (3) the Attorney-General was not a necessary party to the action ; (4) the substituted highway would not be repairable by the inhabitants at large until Highways Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 91, had been complied with ; (5) it could not be assumed in a recent case that all formalities had been complied 2178a. Proceedings for removal—Whether restrained by injunction.]—Pltf., having purchased certain premises in the metropolis, erected buttresses for the purpose of improving the wall abutting on the highway. The local authority took out a summons before a magistrate against pltf. under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 119, to compel pltf. to remove the buttresses, on the ground that they were an encroachment on the highway. Pltf., alleging that the site of the buttresses was not part of the highway, then brought an action against the local authority & moved for an injunction to restrain them from interfering with the buttresses & from going on with the proceedings before the magistrate to determine any questions to be determined in the action:—Held: though the ct. had jurisdiction to restrain proceedings before a magistrate if it was satisfied that he had no jurisdiction or that owing to the special circumstances the proceedings before the magistrate ought not to be allowed, yet in the present case, as the magistrate had jurisdiction, & as there were no special circumstances, the motion must be dismissed.—WILLIAMS v. DEPTFORD URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1924), 41 T. Therefore a charge, framed under sect. 75 of the Act of 1817, of setting up dead shores in a public street without a licence, failed, the same offence, with different penalties & procedure, being dealt with in sects. 122 & 123 of the later Act.

The amount not having been paid, the council on Jan. 1, 1926, applied to a magistrate under sect. 116 (1) of the above Act of 1894 to fix the amount of the expenses & to make an order that no part of the structure should be let for occupation until after payment thereof. The magistrate dismissed the complaint on the ground that more than the period of six months limited by sect. 11 of the above Act of 1848 had elapsed between the time when the matter of the complaint arose & the date when the complaint was made :—Held : the six months' limitation of time applied to proceedings under sect. 116 (1) of the Act of 1894, & the time ran from the date of the demand, & the magistrate's decision must be affirmed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. OWNER OF 14, LEE-STREET STEPNEY (1926), 135 L. In 1904 her husband became the tenant of a field to the south of & adjoining the house & land. The field fronted on E. road. In 1907 deft. purchased the field, but entered into a tenancy agreement letting it to her husband, & from that time the field & the house & land had been separately assessed by the local authority though in fact the tenancy agreement between deft. & her husband ceased to exist about 1918. In 1920 E. road was made up, the usual course being followed under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 150 & 257, with the result that pltfs. claimed a charge, for the admitted proportion due from deft. of the expenses incurred in making up E. road, on the whole of deft.'s property, including her house & grounds as well as the field, as fronting, adjoining or abutting on E. road :—Held : the house & grounds & the field must be considered as being one close, & as such the whole was liable to a charge for making up E. road as fronting, adjoining or abutting thereon. — ALTRINCHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. O'BRIEN (1927), 91 J. 2279a. —— Asphalt in place of flags.]—The predecessors of resp. corpn. by notice adopted H. Road under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 152. In accordance with the provisions of Public Health Act, 1925 (c. 71), resps. prepared a list of roads repairable by the inhabitants at large. H. Road was therein stated to be repairable by the local authority as to the carriageway, but not as to the footway. There was some evidence that the road had never been made up. Resps. were empowered by a local Act to serve notice upon the frontagers to make, curb, flag, & complete the footway, & if through the frontagers' default, they executed the work themselves, to apportion the whole cost on the frontagers in the case of a road not repairable by the inhabitants at large, & half the cost in the case of a road repairable by the inhabitants at large. Such notice was served in respect of H. Road &, resps. having done the work, apportioned the whole cost on the frontagers. The notices required the frontagers to make, flag & complete, but in fact the resps. did not flag the road, but asphalted it :—Held : (1) H. Road was a road repairable by the inhabitants at large &, in any event, resps. could only recover half the cost ; (2) the work specified in the notice must be carried out & the use of asphalt in place of flags was not a proper compliance with the notice, & resps. could not recover the cost of the work done.—FINNEY v. BIRKENHEAD CORPN., [1936] 2 All E. 2322a. —— Under local Act.]—By the C. Corpn. Act, 1884, s. 39, it is provided that whenever the corpn. put in force the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, "they may before themselves executing any works as therein provided recover in a summary manner the amount of the estimated cost thereof from the owners in default." On June 27, 1935, the local authority served a notice, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, upon resp., the owner of premises fronting on a certain road, requiring him to do certain street works. On June 28, 1935, resp. conveyed the premises to a third person. On Oct. 4, 1935, the local authority served a notice upon resp., under C. Corpn. Act, 1884, s. 39, demanding payment of certain sums in respect of the estimated cost of the works, which works had not then been executed. Resp. refused to pay any part of the amount claimed & the local authority thereupon on Dec. 20, 1935, lodged a complaint claiming payment. The magistrates were of opinion that there could be no default until the expiration of the time given in the notice to repair, & that as at the expiration of that time resp. was no longer the owner of the premises, resp. was not the "owner in default" within C. Corpn. Act, 1884, s. 39, & they held that he was not liable to pay the amount claimed. The local authority appealed :—Held : "owner" in the C. Corpn. Act, 1884, s. 39, referred to the owner at the time of the service of the notice to execute the street works, & if such owner failed to execute the works, he became & remained for the purposes of that sect. the "owner in default," notwithstanding a conveyance of the property to a third person. Resp. was therefore liable to pay the amount claimed by the local authority.—CROYDON CORPN. v. OLDAKER, [1937] 1 K. B. 337 ; [1936] 3 All E. R. 360 ; 106 L. J. K. B. 190 ; 155 L. T. 557 ; 100 J. The arbitrator in his award varied the surveyor's apportionment by abating the amount payable by resp. by the sum attributable to his contribution to the cost of the footpath :—Held : the umpire had no authority to go behind the certificate of the amount expended or to inquire into the reasonableness of the amount apportioned or to apportion it on the basis of the proportionate benefit derived from the works by each owner. 2386a. —— Outside area of authority—Validity of order.]—Deft. co. made an application to the local authority under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), stating that it had made up a street to the satisfaction of the surveyor & asking that this street should be taken over by the authority as a street repairable by the inhabitants at large. The local authority thereupon made the order asked. The street was described both in the application & in the order as: 1–15 inclusive, Front Newbottle Row. It was proved in evidence that the street in question so far as Nos. 1–5 abutted upon it was not within the area of the local authority:—Held: as part of the street was outside the area of the local authority & the order referred to the whole street, the order was ultra vires & invalid. It was impossible to sever the application & the order & treat the order as valid so far as the street was within the area of the local authority.—NEWTON v. LAMBTON HETTON & JOICEY COLLIERIES, LTD., [1937] 2 All E. 2401a. —— Used for deposit of ashes.]—By Carlisle Corpn. Act, 1887, s. 192, it was provided that "No ry. co. shall be deemed to be an owner or occupier in respect of any land of such co. upon which any street shall wholly or partially front or abut & which shall be used by such co. solely as part of their line of railway or sidings & shall have communication with such street & the expenses incurred by the corpn. under the powers of the Public Health Acts . . . shall be paid by the other owners having frontages abutting on such street . . .":—Held: land used by a ry. co. for the purpose of depositing ashes thereon did not fall within the exemption contained in that sect.

I am of opinion Mr. Macmorran's argument cannot prevail. Indeed, had it been addressed to me upon sect. 22 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892, I should have doubted much whether this land had been used by the ry. co. solely for the purposes of their line of railway, sidings, station or works (PHILLIMORE, J.).—Re CARLISLE CORPN. & SAUL'S EXORS. 2405b. Vacant land adjoining chapel.]—An objection was made by the trustees of a chapel to the inclusion in a provisional apportionment under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), of certain vacant land adjoining the chapel, on the ground that the land was exempt from expenses under sect. 16 of that Act & Poor Rate Exemption Act, 1833 (c. 30), s. 1. The trustees were owners of the land, & at the time of the provisional apportionment it was their intention to erect a Sunday school thereon communicating by a corridor with the chapel:—Held: the land was not exempt from expenses as a "place" or "premises" exclusively appropriated to religious worship within the above Acts, as the words "place" & "premises" refer to buildings only, & cannot include a piece of vacant land; & there was no evidence on which it could be held that the land was within the curtilage of or formed part of the site of the chapel.—ILFORD CORPN. v. MALLINSON (1932), 147 L. 2439a. —— Sale by owner—Necessity for demand on purchaser—Limitation of action.]—Defts. being a local authority having duly made a final apportionment under Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), s. 12, of the expenses of certain private street works, demanded in 1910 the amount thus apportioned from an owner of land abutting on the street thus made up. In 1927 the latter sold the land in question to pltf. without having satisfied defts.' demand, & pltf. then proceeded to erect houses on the land in respect of which he became entitled to a subsidy. Defts. thereupon claimed to set off against the subsidy the amount of their claim against the owners for the time being of the land in respect of the apportioned expenses, together with interest thereon :—Held : (1) although defts. might have lost their right to sue the original owner for the expenses they were not prevented from suing pltf. as a subsequent owner for the time being. A demand on such owner was necessary to complete the cause of action for such expenses & Stat. Limitations did not begin to run until such demand had been made; (2) on the footing that Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, was applicable, that sect. did not apply to defeat a claim against pltf., the owner for the time being, because defts. had no present right to receive the sum set off from pltf. until he became owner & twelve years from that date had not elapsed.—DENNERLEY v. PRESTWICH URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1930] 1 K. 2447a. —— ——.]—An urban sanitary authority, acting under the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), resolved to execute certain private street works in a street in their district, & to contribute a certain portion of the expenses thereof, & that in settling the apportionment of the balance of the expenses thereof, regard should be had to the greater or less degree of benefit to be derived from the works, by the premises of the frontagers, & they approved provisional apportionments on the frontagers which were duly served & deposited in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Two of the frontagers objected to the provisional apportionments on their premises, before justices, who expressed the opinion that the proposed works were not unnecessary; that the estimated expenses were not excessive; that the premises of the objectors should not be excluded from the apportionment; but they stated that they considered the proposed works were unreasonable in that it was not reasonable that the objectors should bear the whole of the amounts shown in their provisional apportionments. Accordingly they approved the plans, sections, specifications, & estimates of the urban sanitary authority, but quashed in part the apportionments on the objectors' premises, by reducing each of these two apportionments by £100. They confirmed the apportionments on the other frontagers: —Held : the justices had sought to compel the urban sanitary authority to increase their contribution at the risk alternatively of sacrificing the scheme as a whole. It was not within the province of the justices, directly or indirectly, to compel the urban sanitary authority to make a larger contribution than that which they had already agreed to grant.

Upon the further consideration of the case, the justices must adopt one of three courses: increase the apportionments on the other frontagers to satisfy the balance of £200; quash the whole of the apportionment; or adjourn the matter, giving the urban sanitary authority the opportunity of considering whether they would pass a new resolution increasing their contribution by the £200 (per CUR.).—CHATHAM CORPN. v. WRIGHT (1929), 142 L. 2449a. Time fixed by order—Reasonable time—What must be considered.]—Under sects. 33, 34 of Cardiff Corpn. Act, 1884, the corpn. made an order that a street, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, should be paved, kerbed, etc., within two months. The estimate & plan deposited in accordance with sect. 33 of the Act showed that under part of the street a sewer was to be laid by the corpn. while the work was being done, & the order showed that some of the frontagers were required to connect the works which they were required to do with the new sewer. Certain frontagers did not comply with the order, & the work was done by the corpn., &, after service of notice of apportionment of the expense of the demand for payment, the corpn. applied to the ct. by originating summons, for a declaration that the proper proportion of the costs of the work, with interest to date of payment, was a charge upon the premises of those frontagers, in accordance with sect. 54 of the Act:—Held: the time fixed by the order was not, in the circumstances, unreasonable; nor was there any evidence to establish that if the frontagers had done the work themselves the corpn. would have hampered them by laying the sewer simultaneously with their work. The frontagers were entitled to comply with the order & to restrain any interference with them in doing so, but not having so complied, they were liable for the expense of the work being done for them & the corpn. were entitled to the relief claimed.—CARDIFF CORPN. v. CARDIFF PURE ICE & COLD STORAGE CO., LTD. 2466a. —— Powers of magistrate.]—B. Corpn. proposed to execute certain private street works under Birmingham Corpn. (Consolidation) Act, 1883, ss. 46-50, which were substantially identical with Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57). The corpn. duly complied with the formalities required & made a provisional apportionment on resps., the frontagers on the street, according to their respective frontages. Resps. objected that the works were unnecessary. On the hearing of this objection resps. called no evidence. The stipendiary magistrate held that some works were necessary, but was of opinion that the estimated expenses were too heavy. He reduced the estimate & ordered that one resp. should pay one-half & each other resp. two-thirds of the respective sums named in the provisional apportionment:—Held: inasmuch as the corpn. had not resolved that the apportionment should be on any basis other than frontage, the stipendiary magistrate could not direct an apportionment on any other basis. Subject to that limitation, he must consider & determine, upon evidence, whether the proposed works were in any, & what, respect unnecessary, & must have regard to any alternative proposals, if resps. made any & supported them by evidence, & to the cost thereof.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. MOTHER-GENERAL OF CONVENT OF SISTERS OF CHARITY OF ST. 2471a. —— Insufficient particulars.]—By the Birkenhead Improvement Act, 1884, Sched. II, it is provided that, when certain works for the improvement of private streets are undertaken by the corpn., the estimated expenses of executing the works shall be provisionally apportioned among the premises fronting or adjoining or abutting on such street, & that the provisional apportionment "shall also state whether the apportionment is made according to the frontage of the respective premises, or not, & the measurements of the frontages & the other considerations (if any) on which the apportionment is based." The corpn. proposed to carry out certain works, & made a general provisional apportionment which purported to be "principally according to the frontage of the respective premises & having regard to all the circumstances of the case & the amount & value of the work already executed by or on behalf of certain frontagers," but which did not specify the particular "circumstances of the case" or particulars of the "value of the work already executed," with the result that it was not possible for the correctness of the amount of the apportionment to be checked by each individual frontager, including applt., who took the preliminary objection that the requirements of the statute

Street, in a township thereby annexed to the City, but later statutes postponed until May, 1925, the date for completing the work. In 1910 the City had no power to charge the cost of paving streets against the frontagers, but statutes of 1911 & 1914 gave the City that power in the case of permanent paving. In July, 1925, the City passed a resolution that S. Street, which had not been macadamised, should be permanently paved & that the frontagers thereon should be taxed in respect of the cost. Accordingly, S. Street was permanently paved with asphalt. In 1928 resps., as frontagers, were assessed to tax under a statute of that year, which provided that the cost of all pavings laid since Jan. 1, 1919, should be charged to the frontagers at a specified rate. All the statutes above mentioned were enacted as amendments of the City's statutory charter of 1899:—Held: having regard to the specific terms of the statute of 1928 it applied to S. 2580a. —— Conversion of two shops into Defts., who had purchased two houses with the shops on the ground floors projecting towards the street on which the premises fronted a few feet beyond the exterior walls of the two upper floors, submitted to the local authority plans of some proposed alterations. These consisted in the main in the conversion of the two shops into one continuous shop with a single entrance from the street in a new position. The local authority took the view that the proposed alterations amounted to taking down the front of the premises for the purpose of rebuilding, so as to entitle them to prescribe a new building line under the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 155. They therefore refused to approve the plans & called on defts. to set the ground floor front back to the existing exterior walls of the floors above. Defts. having refused to comply, this action was brought on the relation of the local authority & pltf. moved for a declaration that defts. were not entitled to build beyond the prescribed line & for an order on them to remove so much of the new front of the shop as projected beyond that line:—Held: the local authority had no power to prescribe a new building line under sect. 155, because (1) on the true construction of the sect. "the front" included the exterior walls of the two upper floors as well as the exterior wall of the ground floor, & (2) in any case the alterations made to the premises did not amount to taking down the front of the ground floor.—A.-G. v. PRICES' TAILORS (1928), LTD., [1930] 2 Ch. 316; 99 L. obligations, carried the road over the canal by means of a bridge. The canal subsequently became vested in a railway co., who were required under sect. 17 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873 (c. 48), to keep the canal open & navigable. At a later date the railway co. entered into an agreement with the county council having jurisdiction in the locality under which the council agreed to remove the bridge & to construct a new bridge in substitution therefor; & the council covenanted that they would "from time to time & at all times thereafter well & sufficiently maintain & repair the new bridge & the roadway & footpaths upon the same & the approaches thereto." The agreement provided for a headway of six feet between the arch of the new bridge & the towing-path passing under it. The bridge & the neighbouring part of the canal for considerable distances on both sides of the bridge were in a mining area which had been subsiding for a long time prior to the agreement; & within sixteen years thereafter, owing to further subsidences, there was a general sinking of the bridge & the towing path. As, however, the water level remained the same, the railway co. found it necessary, in order to avoid flooding, to raise the towing path, the resulting effect being that the headway between the bridge & the towing path was reduced to four feet six inches, which was insufficient for the convenient working of the canal:—Held: the covenant on the part of defts. to "maintain" the bridge did not impose upon them an obligation to raise the bridge so as to obtain the six feet of clearance for the use of the water way, even although pltfs. had found it necessary to raise the towing path.—GREAT WESTERN RY. v. MONMOUTHSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1929), 94 J. 2708a. Dock swing bridge—Liability for maintenance.]—Pltf. was injured by tripping over a nail projecting from the footway of a swing bridge which defts., the Port of London Authority, were under a statutory duty to maintain in repair, & which the public had a right to use only when it was not required to be swung open for dock traffic. The cause of the accident was the failure of defts. to maintain the footway in good condition. In an action for damages:—Held: the swing bridge was not a highway & were not in the position of a surveyor of highways, & therefore defts. could not avoid liability on the ground of nonfeasance or on the ground that a surveyor of highways is not liable to pay damages to persons injured by his neglect of duty, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—GUILFOYLE v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1932] 1 K. These streets subsequently became highways repairable by the inhabitants at large. An action was commenced by the A.-G. against the local authority for a declaration that they were liable to repair & keep in repair these seven bridges:—Held: having regard to the fact that the word "street," as defined by the above sect., includes, if this is not inconsistent with the context, any bridge, not being a county bridge, pltf. was entitled to the declaration.—A.-G. v. HORNSEY BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1927] 1 Ch. 331; 96 L. sr. Effect of Jewish betrothal.]—Among Jews the betrothal ceremony "Kaseph Kiddushim," if it is a valid ceremony, is something more than a betrothal between Christians. It is not a mere contract which the parties can set aside at will, but confers some of the rights & obligations of the married state. If the betrothal is upon certain conditions & the conditions are not fulfilled, the betrothal becomes void. m i. —— Agreement to marry after obtaining divorce.]—L. alleged that in Apr. 1928, she & D. verbally agreed to marry one another as soon as she could obtain a divorce & that D. also agreed to pay the costs of obtaining it. She was then a married woman who had been deserted by her husband for upwards of twenty years. She obtained her decree absolute, but D. then refused to marry her or to pay the costs of the divorce. She brought an action against him for damages for alleged breach of promise, & for special damages to the amount of the costs of the divorce proceedings. The following questions of law were argued before trial : (a) whether the alleged promise to marry as soon as pltf. could obtain a divorce was actionable in view of the fact that pltf. was a married woman at the time of the alleged promise ; & (b) whether the alleged promise to pay the costs of obtaining the divorce was a valid promise in view of the above facts. It was contended for pltf. that, as in New Zealand the law recognises as a ground for divorce a mere agreement for separation subsisting for three years, the fact that pltf. had been deserted by her husband for upwards of twenty years at the time of the alleged promise was sufficient to relax the rigidity of the rule of public policy :—Held : (1) it would be contrary to public policy to allow an action to be maintained on a promise such as was alleged by pltf., as, in principle, there is no distinction between a promise to marry after the wife's death & one to marry after a divorce is obtained, & it is immaterial that no harm resulted or that the possibility of harm is remote ; (2) although in New Zealand the law recognises an agreement for separation subsisting for three years as a ground for divorce, the argument that there should on that ground be a relaxation of the rule of public policy disregards the principle that it is the tendency, not the actual result, of the recognition of contracts such as sued on in this case that affords the ground for the rigidity of the rule ; & on that test pltf. must fail ; (3) the agreement as to the costs of the divorce is covered by the principle applicable to the promise to marry.—LAMBERT v. DILLON, [1933] N. t i. —— ——.]—In Dec. 1928, a woman brought an action of declaratory of marriage against the representatives of a man who had died in Sept. of that year, averring that a marriage had been entered into between them by declaration de praesenti in Dec. 1922. It was proved that the parties had for many years prior to that date been on terms of intimate friendship, & that deceased had more than once proposed marriage to the pursuer. On Dec. 28, 1922, at an hotel at which the parties were staying, they stated in the presence of three witnesses that they accepted one another as husband & wife. A document attesting the marriage was signed by the parties & by the witnesses. The pursuer & the three witnesses to the document deponed that the interchange of consent was serious, & was intended to constitute marriage, & that no other person was present at the ceremony. On the other hand, a witness B. deponed that she was present during part of the ceremony, & that the proceedings were of the nature of a joke. At the date of this ceremony the deceased was seventy-six & the pursuer was about forty. The pursuer & one witness deponed that the parties occupied the same bedroom after the ceremony. The witness B. gave evidence to the contrary effect.

The parties did not take up residence together. The pursuer continued to carry on her profession as a teacher under her maiden name. Several witnesses deponed that deceased had subsequently introduced the pursuer to them as his wife. Other witnesses gave evidence that deceased had denied that he was married to the pursuer. Deceased died on Sept. 2, 1928, leaving about £20,000. In his will, made two days before his death, he left the pursuer a legacy of £200 under her maiden name :—Held : the exchange of serious matrimonial consent had been clearly established by the document & the evidence of the pursuer & the three witnesses thereto, & the subsequent conduct of the parties did not displace this conclusion.—DUNN v. DUNN'S TRUSTEES, [1930] S. 453a. —— ——.]—The detail & strictness of proof of a marriage required in a criminal prosecution for bigamy is of a totally different standard from that required before a magistrate who is dealing with the question of the maintenance of a wife alleged to have been deserted. In civil cases, where there is evidence of the fact of a ceremony of marriage, followed by cohabitation of the parties, everything necessary for the validity of the marriage will be presumed in the absence of decisive evidence to the contrary, even though it may be necessary to presume the grant of a special licence. The burden of impeaching the factum of a marriage & the presumption of law semper præsumitur pro matrimonio, lies upon the impeaching party.

on remarriage except as to the one-fifth, to the income of which she would still be entitled & without prejudice to any appointment she might previously have made otherwise than by precluding her from exercising on remarriage any power of revocation reserved to her so far as regarded that part of the two-thirds in which her interest then ceased. If she survived & remarried, the power to appoint new trustees conferred on her by the deed was to cease. There were four children of the marriage, all born before the execution of the deed. In 1919 the marriage was dissolved, & by a deed poll in 1922 the wife appointed the two-thirds to the four children of the marriage, reserving a power of revocation & new appointment. Shortly after she remarried. On a summons taken out by the trustees asking whether as from the remarriage they should pay her the income of the two-thirds or of one-fifth thereof, whether she was entitled to exercise the power of revocation & new appointment reserved by the deed poll, & whether she still retained the power to appoint new trustees: —Held: except in so far as the wife's power of appointment in future was concerned, her position under the deed was wholly unaffected by the remarriage she had contracted. —Re PILKINGTON'S SETTLEMENT, PILKINGTON v. WRIGHT (1923), 129 L. 755b. —— Trust for wife after husband's death "until she shall marry again"—Not applicable to remarriage during first husband's lifetime.]—By a marriage settlement property therein called "the husband's fund" was assigned to the trustees on trusts which provided that from & after the husband's death the trustees should pay the income of the husband's fund to the wife, if she should survive the husband, "during her life or until she shall marry again. . . ." The settlement provided also that from & after the husband's death & the wife's death or re-marriage the trustees should stand possessed of the husband's fund & the income of it in trust for the issue of the marriage as the husband & wife should by deed jointly appoint, or in default of & subject to any such appointment as the survivor of them should by deed or will appoint, & in default of & subject to any such appointment by the survivor in trust for the child or children of the marriage as therein mentioned. The marriage was dissolved in 1916 upon the wife's petition. The wife married again in 1930. In 1932 the husband died:—Held: the words "until she shall marry again" must be construed to mean a marriage entered into by the wife after the husband's death, & the wife was therefore entitled to the income of the husband's fund (until she should marry again) & could still exercise the power of appointment over the husband's fund given to her as survivor of the husband & herself.—Re MONRO'S SETTLEMENT, MONRO v. HILL, [1933] Ch. 82; 102 L. 807a. Accrued arrears of annuity—Payment of dividend in bankruptcy.]—A marriage having been dissolved by a decree absolute in 1925, the wife remarried shortly afterwards. Immediately before the remarriage the former husband executed a settlement on his former wife in consideration of her release of any claim to alimony or maintenance from him. By the settlement the husband covenanted with his former wife & as a separate covenant with the trustees to pay her, during their joint lives, an annuity of such an amount as after deduction of income tax would yield the clear sum of £3,000 a year for her separate use without power of anticipation whilst under coverture. In 1929 the former husband was adjudicated bkpt. Pltfs., as trustees of the settlement, & deft., the former wife, jointly proved in the bkpcy. for a large sum made up of several items, of which £41,723 represented the capital value of the annuity of £3,000. The proof was admitted, & in Dec. 1931, a dividend of 6*d.* in the pound was paid to pltfs. This amounted to £2,322, of which £1,043 1*s.* 6*d.* was the proportion attributable to the annuity. On a summons taken out by pltfs. to determine the question whether they ought to pay to deft. the dividend so far as it was attributable to the annuity, notwithstanding the restraint upon anticipation, or whether they ought to invest the same, as being capital, in purchasing an annuity for the life of deft.:—Held: the trustees could properly pay the whole dividend to deft.—Re HORNE'S SETTLEMENT, COUTTS & CO. v. DUSMET DE SMOURS (DUCHESSA), [1932] 2 Ch. 180; 101 L. Before the trial of the action she remarried. At the trial judgment was given for deft. with costs :—Held : (1) the liability to pay costs was one wholly arising at a date when pltf. was a married woman, & was therefore payable out of her separate estate & not otherwise; (2) there was jurisdiction under Married Women's Property Act, 1893 (c. 63), s. 2, to order & enforce the payment of costs out of that separate estate whether subject to a restraint on anticipation or not; (3) such an order ought to be made having regard to the circumstances in which the action had been commenced & prosecuted.—TOWNSHEND v. CHILD, [1933] 1 K. 1223a. —— Necessity for survivorship of wife.]—In the year 1876 a husband during the lifetime of his wife took out a policy on his life with an assurance co., whereby, after a recital that the assured " for the benefit of his wife " in pursuance of Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), had proposed to the co. to effect an assurance on his own life for £500, in consideration of the payment of the premiums during the life of the assured, the co. covenanted that the property of the co. should be liable to pay to the exors. administrators & assigns of the assured the sum of £500. In 1918 the wife died, & in 1929 the husband died without having married again. In 1891 the husband was adjudicated bkpt. & obtained his discharge as from Apr. 14, 1899 :—Held : upon the true construction of the policy & Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), s. 10, the interest in the policy moneys vested in the husband & upon his adjudication in the trustee in his bankruptcy subject to the trust in favour of his wife which enured for her benefit only if she survived her husband with the result that as she died before her husband & before the fund fell into possession, the policy moneys belonged & were payable to the trustee in bkpcy.

Semble : Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), s. 10, does not enable a husband to confer the benefit of the policy upon any wife who does not by surviving him become his widow.—Re COLLIER, [1930] 2 Ch. 37 ; 143 L. 1226a. —— —— If living at his death—Cash value of policy sought to be taken by insured during life.]—A husband took out an insurance policy for £500 on his life, & by the terms of the policy the co. agreed to pay that sum to insured's wife, if she were living at his death, or in the event of her prior death to pay it to insured's exors., administrators & assigns. The policy contained a proviso that, if at the end of twenty years insured was still living, he should have the right to exercise any of six specified options. Insured being then still living, he exercised an option to receive the entire cash value of the policy with its share of accumulated profits & to discontinue the policy. A sum of £288 thus became payable. The co. were unwilling to pay over this sum except on the joint receipt of the husband & wife, & ultimatelypaid it into ct. : —Held : (1) the policy came within sect. 11 of the above Act, & created a trust in favour of the wife in certain events ; (2) insured must be taken to have exercised the option for the benefit of the trust ; (3) unless the husband & wife came to an agreement, the fund must be accumulated in ct. until it could be ascertained by the death of either party who was entitled to it.—Re FLEETWOOD'S POLICY, [1926] Ch. 48 ; 95 L. 1226c. —— —— Lien of husband for premiums paid.]—A husband took out a policy of life assurance for £1,000 payable after ten years or upon his earlier death & expressed to be for the benefit of his wife, therein named, under Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75). Two years later, & before the policy possessed any surrender value, the wife died. The husband kept the policy on foot, paying the premiums, until it matured, when the insurance co. paid the policy moneys into a deposit account in the joint names of the husband & another as personal representatives of the deceased wife. The husband having died, his widow, as his administratrix, claimed a lien on the policy moneys for the amount of the premiums paid after his first wife's death :—Held : while the policy moneys belonged to the first wife's estate, in accordance with the decision in Cousins v. Sun Life Assurance Society, [1933] Ch. 126, the estate of the husband was entitled to a lien thereon for the amount of the premiums paid by him since his first wife's death, as being money expended by him as a trustee to preserve property of a cestui que trust.—Re SMITH'S ESTATE, BILHAM v. SMITH, [1937] Ch. 636; [1937] 3 All E. The daughter was an adopted child, & there had been no legal adoption under Adoption of Children Act, 1926 (c. 29) :—Held : (1) there was no effective trust for the adopted child by virtue of Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 11, & the infant was outside the scope of that sect.; (2) the adopted child had no legal right to claim the policy moneys from the insurance co. The assured died as the result of an accident within the policy, his wife surviving him :—Held : (1) the policy was one effected by the assured on his own life within Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75); (2) it was expressed to be for the benefit of his wife within the same sect.; (3) accordingly, his wife was solely & beneficially entitled to the moneys payable thereunder.—Re GLADITZ, GUARANTY EXECUTOR & TRUSTEE CO., LTD. v. GLADITZ, [1937] Ch. 588; [1937] 3 All E. In Aug. 1931, the " E." car, by arrangements to which applt. was a party, was traded in for a " N." car, applt. paying a deposit & also the balance of the price, after allowing for the value of the " E." The prescribed documents showing that the " N." car had been disposed of to & acquired by the wife, were signed by the vendor & the wife. The car was kept in a garage at the matrimonial home, to which both husband & wife had keys, but the wife, although able to drive, did not drive the " N." car. There was evidence to show that applt. put the car into the wife's name to avoid financial liabilities in case of accident, & as a safeguard against creditors. It is an offence under Motor Vehicles Act to make a false statement in an application & by that Act a certificate relating to the ownership of a car is primâ facie evidence of the truth of its contents. In proceedings by applt. to establish his ownership & right to possession :—Held : the evidence disclosed a purchase by applt. in the name of resp. ; the presumption was that of a gift by applt. to resp. ; &, therefore, the covinous arrangement alleged by applt. could not be permitted to rebut the presumption of ownership, which arose from the acts of the parties as well as under the Statute.—MUSMAN v. MUSMAN, [1933] S. On the trial the husband stated that when he made the conveyance to his wife he did so on her undertaking that the members of her family would vacate the house, & this was never carried out :—Held : plff. could not succeed, as the only claim he could set up would be that he had made a conveyance for a consideration that had failed, & his action would be either for specific performance or damages.—BODY v. BODY (1924), 34 B. 1489a. —— Settlement of insurance policies on life of husband.]—By a post-nuptial settlement made in pursuance of ante-nuptial articles, certain policies of insurance on the life of the husband were assigned to trustees upon trust to receive the money & pay the income to the wife during her life for her separate use, independently of any future husband whom she might marry. There was no restraint on anticipation. During the life of her first husband the wife made promissory notes in favour of pltf., & pltf., the first husband being still alive, brought an action claiming a charge on the policies :—Held : the trust for separate use did not arise till after the death of the husband, & as the contracts of a married woman can only be enforced against property which formed part of her separate estate at the date of the contract, the action could not be maintained. —KING v. LUCAS (1883), 23 Ch. 1800a. —— —— —— Proceedings instituted against wife.]—A husband took divorce proceedings against his wife on the ground of her adultery. She consulted a solr., who upon her instructions put in a defence denying the charge & briefed counsel to appear for her. At the hearing the wife failed to appear, & a decree was made against her dissolving the marriage on the grounds alleged in the petition. The wife's counsel applied for costs, but as no security for her costs had been obtained, no costs were granted. The wife's solr. brought an action in the K. B. Div. to recover the costs from the husband, on the ground of his wife's agency of necessity at common law. The judge found as a fact that the solr. had acted without negligence, honestly believing that the wife was innocent & that she would be successful in her defence : —Held : in those circumstances the wife had no authority to bind her husband, so as to make him liable for the costs of her defence to his petition for divorce.—ARNOLD & WEAVER v. AMARI, [1928] 1 K. 1852b. Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors' Act, 1935 (c. 30), s. 3—Whether retrospective.]—By a writ dated Aug. 16, 1935 (after the coming into operation on Aug. 2, 1935, of Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30)), pltf., a married woman, sued defts., husband & wife, claiming damages in respect of slanders alleged to have been uttered by the female deft. on divers dates in 1931 & in the early months of 1935, the claim as against the male deft. being that he authorised or caused the female deft. to utter the words complained of. Defts. denied the publication, & the male deft. denied that he authorised or caused the female deft. to utter the alleged defamatory words. At the trial the judge left the case against both defts. to the jury without directing them that if they found for pltf. they should return a separate verdict with separate damages in respect of each publication. No objection was taken to this direction at the time. The jury found a single verdict against both defts. & judgment was entered against them accordingly. On appeal :—Held : (1) there was evidence entitling the jury to find that the female deft. uttered the slanders complained of & therefore that the verdict & judgment against her must stand; (2) there was no evidence that the male deft. authorised or caused the female deft. to utter the words complained of; (3) Law Reform (Married Women & Tortfeasors) Act, 1935 (c. 30), has a retrospective operation, & by virtue of its provisions the male deft. was not liable for his wife's tort; (4) as no objection was taken at the trial to the jury being asked to consider the different publications as a whole instead of separately, or not being asked to assess separate damages in respect of each publication, the female deft. could not be heard to say that the verdict was a nullity.

Per SCOTT, L.J. There is nothing in the Judicature Acts or in the Rules of the Supreme Ct. that separate verdicts & judgments are invariably necessary in respect of separate causes of action contained in the same writ. The question whether one or more causes of action can be included in one verdict or judgment depends upon the exercise of the trial judge's judicial discretion upon all the circumstances of the case.

Per SCOTT, L.J. The canon against giving a retrospective interpretation to a statute, in the absence of specific provision, expresses no rigid or absolute rule. It does not apply to a statute dealing with procedure, nor, semble, does it apply to a statute abolishing old legal fictions.—BARBER v. PIGDEN, [1937] 1 K. B. 664; [1937] 1 All E. R. 115; 106 L. The statement of claim averred that pltf. was & always had been ready & willing to join her husband. The husband sailed for New Zealand, & weekly payments were made for a period of about one year, &, upon deft. then ceasing to make them, pltf. sought to enforce the agreement. Deft. pleaded that the agreement was against public policy, & this question was argued as a preliminary point of law :—Held : the contract was not void as against public policy. The issue had to be tried upon the facts set out in the statement of claim, &, as it did not appear therefrom that there was anything immoral in the contract, it was not illegal as against public policy ; but it might be otherwise when all the facts were before the ct.—DAVIES v. ELMSLIE, [1937] 4 All E. 2039a. —— —— ——.]—By a deed of separation reciting that differences had arisen between a husband & a wife, it was agreed that the wife should during the life of the husband live separate & apart from him & free from his marital control & authority as if she were unmarried, & that the wife should retain as her separate property certain articles which, if she should die in the lifetime of the husband without having disposed of them, should devolve as if she had died possessed thereof intestate & a widow. The husband covenanted that he would during the life of the wife pay to her an annual sum of £600. The wife was also to be entitled to certain furniture & effects for the use of herself during her life. Throughout the deed the parties were referred to as "the husband" & "the wife" respectively. It was provided that if the husband & the wife should be reconciled to each other & return to cohabitation the deed should become void. The husband subsequently committed adultery & the wife obtained a decree dissolving the marriage. He then made default in paying the full annual sum provided for by the deed, & she brought an action to recover the arrears:—Held: the deed was not subject to any implied term that it should only operate so long as the marriage relation continued to exist between the parties, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—MAY v. MAY, [1929] 2 K. 2291a. Claim by husband against wife—Interpleader proceedings.]—A wife deposited certain furniture & other goods with warehousemen for safe storage. Her husband claimed that the furniture & other goods were his property, & issued a writ in detinue against the warehousemen claiming the delivery up of the goods. The wife also claimed the goods as being her property. The warehousemen disclaimed any interest in the goods except for storage charges, & took out an interpleader summons in the action, making the wife the claimant. An order was made by a master directing the trial of an issue in the King's Bench Division to determine whether the goods were the property of the husband or the wife, & directing that in that issue the husband was to be pltf. & the wife was to be deft. The judge in chambers affirmed the order. Upon an appeal by the wife on the ground that such an order could not be made as between a husband & a wife :—Held : the interpleader issue which was directed was not an action by the husband against the wife but a proceeding in the action by the husband against the warehousemen, & the order for interpleader was necessary in order to give relief to the warehousemen, who had two claimants making claims against them in respect of the property, & there was jurisdiction under R. S. C., Ord. LVII, r. 7, to make the order directing an interpleader issue to be tried, & the husband was properly directed to be in the position of pltf. in the issue, & the wife in the position of deft., because the deposit of the property with the warehousemen had been made by the wife, & the husband had to make out his case.—DE LA RUE v. HERNU, PERON & STOCKWELL, LTD., [1936] 2 K. S. B. C., 1924, a prior conveyance made by him to his daughter :

2293a. —— ——.]—(1) Pltf. married deft. in 1893. In 1899 the parties separated under a deed of separation & thenceforward lived apart. By the deed of separation deft. covenanted to pay an annuity to pltf., & the deed also contained a covenant for further assurance. After the separation pltf. set up in business as a garage proprietor, & she subsequently converted this business into a private limited co. in which she held the majority of the shares & also was the chairman & managing director. In 1929 she saw in a churchyard near her husband's residence a tombstone on which was the following inscription: "In loving memory of Jennie the dearly beloved wife of W. R. Crawshay Ralston of the Bungalow, Valley. Died 20th May, 1916." Deft. was the W. R. Crawshay Ralston mentioned in the inscription & he had caused the inscription to be made. Pltf. brought an action against her husband for libel & also for a declaration that she was the lawful wife of deft.:—Held: though the inscription was capable of a defamatory meaning, pltf., by reason of Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 12, could not sue her husband on it, the action being for a tort & not for the protection & security of her separate property.

(2) If there were any doubt as to the validity of the marriage, in my opinion, an action at law in the K. B. Div. of the High Ct. is not the proper proceeding in which to have that matter determined. I think it would be necessary, if there were any doubt as to the validity of the marriage, to take proceedings under the Legitimacy Declaration Act, 1858 (c. 93) (MACNAUGHTEN, J.).—RALSTON v. RALSTON, [1930] 2 K. 2294a. —— For negligence—Injury sustained before marriage.]—Although by Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 12, a married woman has the same civil remedies for the protection & security of her own separate property as if it belonged to her as a feme sole, & by sect. 24 "property" includes a thing in action, nevertheless a right of action for a pure tort which accrued before the marriage of the parties is not a thing in action within sect. 24, & consequently such right is not part of the wife's separate property.

An unmarried woman sustained injuries through a man's negligent driving, & issued a writ against him claiming damages in respect thereof. Before the trial of the action she married him:—Held: her right of action was not such a thing in action as would become her separate property within the meaning of the Act, but was barred by the general disability of husband & wife to sue each other for a tort.—GOTTLIFFE v. EDELSTON, [1930] 2 K. st. What must be proved.]—Before a decree of dissolution of marriage can be made on the ground set out in sect. 10 (f) of Divorce & Matrimonial Causes Act, 1928, which is as follows: "That resp. is a person of unsound mind & is unlikely to recover, & has been confined as such in New Zealand in an institution within Mental Defectives Act, 1911, or in a like institution in any other country of the British dominions, for a period or periods not less in the aggregate than seven years within the period of ten years immediately preceding the filing of the petition." Petitioner has to establish not merely that resp. is a person of unsound mind & is unlikely to recover, but also that resp. has been confined as such in an institution for the required period—i.e., confined as a person afflicted with unsoundness of mind to a degree that warrants the making of a committal order. Consequently, it is not permissible under the above-quoted para. (f) to count any period of detention as a voluntary boarder in a mental institution which resulted in relief & temporary cure & discharge merely because the person ultimately became a person of so unsound a mind as to warrant & result in committal, or to treat a voluntary boarder as having been actually confined as a person of unsound mind merely because it is established by evidence that such resp. could have been lawfully confined as a person of unsound mind.—G. v. G., [1936] N. 2518a. ——.]—A husband & wife intermarried in Feb. 1922, & continued to cohabit until July, 1927, when the wife left the husband. On Nov. 2, 1927, the wife petitioned for a divorce founded upon an act of sodomy alleged to have been committed on her by the husband in Mar. 1922, & alleged acts of cruelty consisting of (a) acts of shameless uncleanness & invitations to repeat them, & (b) ordinary acts of cruelty, such as acts of ill-temper & abuse.

At the trial the judge in summing up to the jury did not warn the jury against finding that the sodomy alleged had been committed on the uncorroborated evidence of the wife, who was an accomplice; nor did he clearly point out that before it could be held that there was cruelty as regards the sexual malpractices it must be shown that they caused danger to life, limb or health, bodily or mental, or a reasonable expectation of it. The jury's verdict was that sodomy had been committed as alleged; that the husband had been guilty of cruelty of the class (a), & that he had not been guilty of cruelty of class (b). The judge then made a decree nisi for dissolution of the marriage. On appeal:—Held: (1) the judge ought to have warned the jury that cogent evidence was required to overcome the presumption of innocence of sodomy, & that they should not convict on the wife's uncorroborated evidence; (2) the ct. must take notice of the fact that there had been condonation of the offence, even though the husband did not plead it; (3) the judge had misdirected the jury by saying that the sexual malpractices were cruelty in themselves, as there could not be legal cruelty without danger to life, limb, or health, physical or mental, or reasonable apprehension of it; & (4) instead of directing a new trial the ct. should dismiss the wife's petition.

(5) The wife having on the evidence been a consenting party to the act of sodomy alleged to have been committed it would be impossible for her to obtain a decree of divorce based solely on that act.

(6) The rules with regard to condonation & connivance as a bar to a decree for divorce were well established in the practice of the Ecclesiastical Cts. before the Act of 1857. In my judgment these rules apply to cases in which the ground alleged for divorce is sodomy (GREER, L.J.).—STATHAM v. STATHAM, [1929] P. 131; 98 L. J. P. 113; 140 L. T. 292; 45 T. L. 2751a. —— —— Nullity suit.]—On a petition by the man for nullity of a marriage celebrated in Apr. 1933, the ct. found on the facts, subject to the admissibility of evidence, that the marriage had never been consummated by reason of the woman being frigida quoad hunc & that she had given birth to a child in Aug. 1935, after leaving the man in Sept. 1933, & had confessed intercourse with another man to whom she ascribed paternity. On these findings the ct. held that the evidence tendered was not rendered inadmissible in a case of nullity by the rule in Russell v. Russell, [1924] A. C. 687. The exclusion by that rule of the evidence of a spouse negativing the legitimacy of offspring does not extend to the exclusion of evidence negativing the existence of married intercourse. The right of the man to prove that the woman is unable to consummate the marriage with him cannot be destroyed by reason of her having given birth to a child who is from the nature of the case illegitimate.

In a suit for nullity of marriage for want of consummation there is no issue as to adultery; non-consummation once established, adultery becomes an irrelevant though necessary inference, as also bastardisation, when the birth of a child has occurred.—FARNHAM v. FARNHAM (OTHERWISE DANIELS), [1937] P. 49; [1936] 3 All E. 2770 i. Admission of adultery by wife—Sufficiency of.]—In July, 1923, petitioner & resp. entered into a separation agreement, & thereafter lived separate & apart. During the separation resp., in May, 1924, gave birth to a child. The husband petitioned for divorce. The evidence of adultery consisted of admissions by resp.:—Held: this evidence was admissible.—HENLEY v. HENLEY, [1927] S. A. S. R. 364.—AUS.

sm. Admissions by respondent.]—Admissions, whether written or verbal, made by resp. in a suit for dissolution of marriage are not in themselves sufficient proof of adultery; but when other facts, tending to establish such adultery, have been adduced, the admissions are corroborated evidence of her husband, the evidence was that the husband passed two nights in a bedroom at an hotel with a woman. He then informed his wife of the fact, but disclosed no name or address of the woman in question either to his wife or to her solrs. or to the King's Proctor to whom the papers in the case had been sent by the ct., although both the solrs. & the King's Proctor applied to him for these particulars. As the result of inquiries by the King's Proctor there was no evidence of any association of the husband with a woman other than his wife, still less of illicit association :—Held : the appeal must be allowed & a decree nisi granted on the ground that if evidence were tendered in good faith which under all usual circumstances clearly pointed to adultery, it was the duty of the ct. to act upon it, unless the King's Proctor could adduce cogent evidence to rebut the obvious conclusion, & in the present case there were circumstances on which the ct. ought to be satisfied in accordance with what had hitherto been the practice that adultery had been established.—WOOLF v. WOOLF, [1931] P. 134 ; 100 L. 2771a. Discretion statement in former suit.]—In Dec. 1932, a husband presented a petition for divorce against his wife on the ground of her alleged adultery in which he prayed the ct. to exercise its discretion in his favour & filed the usual discretion statement. The petition was dismissed & it became therefore unnecessary to have recourse to the discretion statement. In Dec. 1933, the wife presented a petition for divorce against the husband at the hearing of which he did not appear. The wife then sought to use the admissions in the husband's discretion statement as evidence against him of his adultery : —Held : (1) inasmuch as it was not the practice of the Divorce Ct. to reserve discretion statements solely for the use of the ct. but to permit access to them by to the suits, they were analogous to depositions under Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 214, & the evidence obtained by an inspection of them might be treated as admissions & used, if necessary, in other proceedings. Therefore, the wife was entitled to rely on the husband's discretion statement as evidence of his adultery ; (2) this decision was based on the practice as it existed before Jan. 1, 1934, when the Matrimonial Causes (Amendment) Rules, 1934, came into force, & would apply only to divorce proceedings which had been commenced before that date.—BEVIS v. BEVIS, [1935] P. 86 ; 104 L. Defender, who denied adultery, pleaded that pursuer's averments relative to the letter & envelope were irrelevant, & should not be remitted to probation :—Held : the mere facts that the letter in question had not been dispatched, or that it had been torn up were not sufficient to render it inadmissible as evidence, if it might be directly relevant to the issue under trial ; &, further, it might be so relevant as showing defender's state of mind at the time when it was written, & the relationship which existed between defender & co-defender.—WATSON v. WATSON, [1934] S. The judge, following his usual custom, asked petitioner why she prayed for judicial separation & not dissolution of the marriage. Petitioner stated that she did not wish her husband to marry the woman who had ruined her home :—Held : permanent maintenance & custody being, at any rate, a part of the purpose for which the suit was brought, petitioner had a right to a decree of judicial separation. The ct. had a discretion to refuse such a decree, but not an unlimited discretion, & that discretion must be exercised upon some legal ground, such as the absolute & discretionary bars & the ground that the suit was not brought bonâ fide, but only for some collateral purpose. 2973a. Separation based on mistaken belief of invalidity of marriage—Revival of right to cohabitation by proceedings for maintenance.] —The parties were married in England in 1912. In 1913 the husband left the wife & they formally separated in 1914 by consent under an agreement which at the time both believed to be valid, the wife receiving a sum of money in full satisfaction of all claims on the husband. Thereafter there was no change in the marital relations of the parties inter se & they remained apart & the husband later went through a form of marriage with another woman. The agreement was based upon the mistake of law that the marriage had been invalid by reason of it not complying with the law of the foreign domicil of the husband, & in 1929, in proceedings in which an order for maintenance of the wife made by a ct. of summary jurisdiction was upheld by a Divisional Ct., the agreement was held to be illegal. In 1934 the wife, relying on this decision & on the footing of her resulting right to cohabitation, sued the husband, who had returned to England, for judicial separation on the ground of desertion. In discussing the definition of desertion in Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald (1869), L. R. 1 P. & M. 694, 698, & similar cases & with reference to the necessary cessation of an existing state of cohabitation to constitute desertion, the ct. doubted whether time had ever ceased to run for the purpose of two years' desertion from 1913 onwards owing to the illegality of the agreement made in 1914, but :—Held : the wife, having reasserted her rights in 1929, the husband had now been guilty of desertion for not less than two years during the period since 1913.—

having refused to seek work & being unable to support pltf. & the children of the marriage, pltf. left the house & obtained employment in B. On Feb. 16, 1933, she signed a petition for the dissolution of her marriage on the ground of continuous desertion for five years & upwards as from Apr. 1927 :—Held : on the facts, deft.'s conduct towards pltf. was a result of mental infirmity caused by delusions consequent on his nervous breakdown, & did not amount to desertion without cause.—STEPHENSON v. STEPHENSON, [1933] S. R. (Q.) 256.—AUS.

2887 iv. ——.]—In order to legitimate a child, petitioner & resp. agreed to marry & then separate & not live together as man & wife, an agreement void as against public policy. The ground for the petition was that the deed had been in full force for not less than three years :—Held : there had been a genuine agreement made after the marriage for an immediate separation & that the parties were relying upon a post-nuptial, & not as in Brodie v. Brodie, [1917] P. 271, upon a pre-nuptial, agreement, & the petitioner was entitled to her decree.—SMITH v. SMITH, [1937] N. During part of the time when the wife was at the matrimonial home the husband paid her wages. She had told the husband & a friend on several occasions that she regarded herself as a single woman, & she went out at night against the husband's wishes & had pawned her wedding ring, but when this was done the spouses were in impecunious circumstances. During the whole of this period she refused her husband sexual intercourse :—Held : on these facts, desertion had not taken place.—TONKIN v. TONKIN, [1936] S. A. S. R. 100.—AUS.

At the end of three months she left & refused thereafter to resume cohabitation :—Held : the wife's conduct did not amount to a compliance with the decree, &, therefore, that her husband was entitled to a dissolution of marriage.—HARRIS v. HARRIS (1929), 30 S. 2958 i. Failure to obey restitution decree—What amounts to.]—Compliance with a decree for restitution of conjugal rights is the aggregate effect of a great number of acts & consists in a course of behaviour, & the acts & conduct of the spouse bound to obey must not be opposed or repugnant to the maintenance of the matrimonial relationship. Sexual intercourse is not necessary to obedience, but its refusal is a matter material to be considered.—BARTLETT v. BARTLETT (1934), 50 C. L. R. 3.—AUS.

2999a. —— —— ——.]—Under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39), justices are empowered on the application of a wife to make an order containing a provision that the applicant be no longer bound to cohabit with her husband, & this provision while in force has the effect in all respects of a decree of judicial separation on the ground of cruelty. But where the wife's application is based upon a charge of desertion only, such a clause should not be inserted in the order, inasmuch as it prevents the continuance of desertion in strict law after the date of the order. In the present case the wife was granted a separation order on the ground of desertion, & the non-cohabitation clause was inserted in the order :—Held : the justices were entitled to find as they did, but were wrong in allowing the non-cohabitation clause to be included in the order. In cases of cruelty it might be necessary for the protection of the wife, but that was not so in cases of desertion; & the non-cohabitation clause was struck out.—SAYERS v. SAYERS (1929), 93 J. In Nov. 1919, he met her accidentally & lived with her for a few days, & then he went abroad to take up an appointment. On the voyage out he wrote informing her that the appointment had been cancelled. Thereafter he never lived with his wife or communicated with her again. From Apr. 1920 till June 1923 he was in prison, & in Oct. 1923 he was again imprisoned. In Oct. 1925, after his release, he wrote to his wife's father stating that he was about to go abroad, & offering to supply material for divorce :—Held : pursuer had relevantly averred desertion commencing in Nov. 1919 & including the periods of defender's incarceration, in respect that, when liberated from prison, defender had shown no disposition to alter his intention to persist in his desertion.—PARKER v. PARKER, [1926] S. s i. —— —— ——.]—N. H. brought a petition for divorce against her husband on the ground of desertion. It appeared that subsequently to the commencement of the desertion alleged she had committed adultery. It did not appear that the resp. knew of the adultery before the commencement of the suit. He did not enter an appearance nor appear at the hearing :—Held : as the adultery was not in any way connected with the continuance by the resp. of his desertion of petitioner it did not afford him any " just cause or excuse " for continuing to desert her.—HOPKINS v. HOPKINS, [1936] V. Following on this conduct the wife left her husband in Feb. 1923, & although he repeatedly requested her to return to him, she did not do so. The husband petitioned for divorce on the ground of desertion :—Held : the husband must be presumed to have intended the consequence of his acts; by his conduct he had compelled his wife to leave him, & his petition must be dismissed.—LAWRENCE v. LAWRENCE (1929), W. 3040a. Agreement not to sue for matrimonial offences prior to separation deed—Validity.]—By a separation deed executed by spouses who were then parties to a suit for judicial separation on the ground of the cruelty of the husband, it was agreed that neither of them should sue the other for any misconduct which had theretofore taken place, & the deed further stipulated that any offence that either of them had committed should be forgiven or condoned, & that in case either of them should take proceedings against the other in respect of any complaint thereafter arising no offence antecedent to the deed should be pleaded or alleged by either or be admissible in evidence. The wife subsequently sued the husband for dissolution of marriage on the ground of his adultery alleged to have been committed since the date of the deed. The husband traversed the allegation, & by his answer countercharged the wife with adultery antecedent to the deed. The wife disputed the right of the husband to make the counter-charge, having regard to the deed. The husband contended that the provisions of the deed were against public policy, in that they provided for the withholding from the ct. matters material & necessary for its consideration by virtue of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 178 (3) :—Held : on a motion by the wife to strike out the allegation in the answer of the husband of her adultery, the deed was not against public policy, & it did not constitute any bargain between the parties to pervert the course of justice by withholding from the ct. any matter material for its consideration, & the agreement made by the deed being one honestly entered into was good, & it was no answer to it to say that if the intention of the parties had been to obtain a collusive divorce or to cloak the past, the deed could have had a dishonest & illegal operation.—L. v. L., [1931] P. 63 ; 100 L. 3069a. —— ——.]—A decree of a foreign ct. in a country where the parties were not domiciled, purporting to annul an English marriage at the instance of the wife on the sole ground of want of cohabitation, was consented to by the husband, & the wife subsequently went through a form of marriage with another man with whom she cohabited. The husband filed in this ct. a petition claiming dissolution of his marriage on the ground of the adultery constituted by cohabitation under the form of marriage last mentioned. It appeared that both the husband & the wife honestly believed at the time of the proceedings in the foreign ct. that those proceedings were competent & that their marriage was effectually dissolved :—Held : there was no guilty intention amounting to connivance on the part of the husband at the subsequent adultery of the wife, &, further, although the facts might technically raise the discretionary bar of conduct conducing on his part, the latter offence was in the circumstances present of a degree which justified the exercise of the discretion of the ct. in his favour.—CLAYTON v. CLAYTON & SHARMAN, [1932] P. 45 ; 101 L. The case was remitted from assizes to the Divorce Ct. on the question of connivance :—Held : there was a strong case for the husband being an accessory to his wife's adultery, but, though almost terrified to be under the same roof as co-resp., he resented & resisted as far as he dared the continuance of the adulterous relations. He did not encourage it. They defied him. He was not an accessory, & did not enter into the deed with the idea of consenting to his

The petition was dismissed on the ground that the suit was collusive. After the dismissal resp. & co-resp. continued to live in adultery, & petitioner, who had received the £1,750, presented a second petition against them, complaining of the adultery since the date of the former petition :—Held : petitioner had by the agreement prevented himself from complaining of any adultery whether past or future, & he had connived at the adultery of which in his second petition he complained, & the second petition must be dismissed.—GIFFORD v. GIFFORD & FREEMAN (1926), 43 T. She then filed a petition for divorce, but was induced to compromise it for an increase in the allowance, fearing that her husband might lose his employment as a result of exposure. After a further lapse of time she accepted a deed of separation with a mutual condonation of past offences & the payment of a lump sum of cash in lieu of maintenance. 3135a. ——.]—A husband & wife separated in the summer of 1935, there being no suggestion of adultery up to that time. Before parting, discussions had taken place as to a divorce based upon evidence to be provided by the husband, the wife even suggesting that, for the sake of the husband's career, he should divorce her, but this the husband refused to consider. There was some suggestion that a separation was all that was required, but subsequently the husband wrote to the wife to the effect that a divorce after a lapse of six months or a year would be better. Later the husband sent an hotel bill upon which the wife based a petition for divorce. The judge found that the wife at no time wanted a divorce & that she never really assented to the husband's proposal that, whatever the reality of the matter might be, she should present a petition on evidence which he would provide. The petition was later amended to include an additional charge of adultery

PART XIII. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 3.—C. (b) i.

3135 ii. ——.]—"Collusion" is a species of statutory fraud on the ct., &, like "fraud," is incapable of exhaustive definition, & will ever be widened to prevent the mischief which the statute was intended to prevent. Collusion is possible in a good case, i.e. although the ct. is convinced that matrimonial misconduct was proved, yet if evidence of collusion, too gross & palpable to admit of being overlooked or explained, appeared, no decree should be made.

In the present case the ct., having concluded that there was an arrangement between the parties to obtain a divorce & as to the testimony which should be offered to support the claim therefor, & that the testimony given by the resp. was in accordance with this arrangement, & largely untrue, refused the decree, holding that, aside from the admission as to the arrangement, the appearances of collusion were too gross & palpable to admit of being overlooked or explained, & that the arrangement itself was clearly collusive.—SANBORN v. SANBORN, [1928] 1 D. L. R. 881; [1928] 1 W. W. R. 78; 22 Sask. L. R. 168.—CAN.

3135 iii. ——.]—Collusion is established (a) if there be an agreement or understanding or concerted action between the parties which has the effect of deceiving the ct. either by causing untrue facts to be placed before the ct. or by suppressing facts which are material or pertinent; & (b) if there be an agreement or understanding or concerted action between the parties which, from the nature of such agreement or understanding or action may be calculated to have that effect: but where the facts to be placed before the ct. are such as to support a prayer for either of two forms of relief, it is not collusion for a petitioner, for valuable consideration, to agree with a resp. to change merely the form of relief prayed for in the petition.—DOUTREBANDE v. DOUTREBANDE (1929), 29 S. R. N. S. W. 456; 46 N. S. W. W. N. 160.—AUS.

3135 iv. ——.]—To establish collusion in an action for divorce it is necessary to show some understanding or agreement which involves some with another woman :—Held : (1) if the petition as originally presented was tainted with collusion, no kind of amendment by adding a different charge would cure the defect ; (2) the mere fact that the adultery charged is with a woman known or unknown on an isolated occasion at a hotel is not of itself evidence of collusion ; (3) the reality of the case was that the wife decided to act upon the evidence of the hotel bill, not in pursuance of any existing understanding, but because for the first time she had made up her mind that it was the proper thing to do in the circumstances. The petition was accordingly not presented as a result of collusion, & a decree nisi ought to be pronounced.—WYATT v. WYATT, [1937] 3 All E. R. 885.

3135b. —— Coercion.]—Resp., a solr., was anxious to obtain a divorce from his wife. In 1934 the wife had, with the approval of the husband, agreed to purchase a house, & found herself in the greatest straits to find £115 19*s.* 3*d.* required to complete the purchase. On Nov. 30, 1934, resp. wrote to his wife informing her of adultery at an hotel & suggesting action being taken thereon. On Jan. 28, 1935, the wife, who did not desire a divorce, instructed her solrs. to file a petition. On Feb. 4, resp. gave his solrs. a sealed envelope for transmission to his wife. Although there was nothing to prevent such solrs. sending the envelope direct to the wife, it was in fact sent to the wife's solrs. with a request that they would hand it to her on her next attending at their office. On Feb. 6 the wife attended at her solrs.' office, signed the petition for divorce, & received the sealed envelope, which was found to contain a cheque signed by resp. for £116. On Jan. 8 the wife's solrs. had written that upon all arrears due to her being paid to her account, the necessary steps " in the other matter " would be taken, & the clerk of those solrs. admitted that he deliberately withheld the envelope until the petition had been signed. The wife, petitioner, attempted throughout the proceedings to conceal from the ct. the motives for her actions :—Held : (1) it could not be held upon the facts that the collusive bargain was obtained by duress, so that, there being in law no bargain at all, there was no collusion ; (2) the facts disclosed that, as petitioner did not desire a divorce, there was no real injury to her, & amounted to collusion & an abuse of the process of the ct.—WOODS v. WOODS, [1937] 4 All E. 3317a. —— ——.]—A husband petitioner for divorce separated from his wife about eighteen years after their marriage because of her assocn. with co-resp., with whom she cohabited in adultery for about twenty years. The husband was willing to take proceedings for a divorce, but resp. & co-resp. desired their relations not to be made public & the husband was indifferent & no step was taken. Thereafter the husband maintained an adulterous connection with another woman for many years. He had since separated from this woman, but having about thirty-eight years after his marriage met another woman whom he desired to marry he now presented the present petition for the dissolution of his existing marriage. The ct., construing delay within the meaning of the statute to be culpable delay in the nature of acquiescence, held the facts of the case to amount to culpable delay, & dismissed the petition.—BINNEY v. BINNEY & HILL, [1936] P. 178; [1936] 2 All E. 3446 i. Principle on which court [illegible].]—There is nothing in Marriage Act, 1915, s. 131 (1), to indicate that the general rule is that the discretion of the ct. should be exercised against a petitioner who has himself been guilty of adultery, or that it should only be exercised in his favour in exceptional circumstances. The discretion of the ct., on the wording of the section, is quite open. If anything, the words would appear to indicate that ordinarily the decree nisi would be granted notwithstanding the adultery of the petitioner, but that in such a case the ct. is not bound to grant it. Under the section the ct. has an unfettered discretion, & it is neither desirable nor possible to lay down definite & rigid rules by which the ct. should be guided in all cases. The mere non-disclosure in his affidavit by a petitioner of the fact that he has during the marriage committed adultery is not a sufficient ground for refusing a decree nisi to which he would otherwise be entitled.—ADAMS v. ADAMS, [1928] V. 3449b. ——.]—The discretionary power of the ct. to grant a decree of divorce to a petitioner guilty of adultery is a regulated discretion which it is the duty of the ct. to reduce to method. The primary essential for the exercise of its power by the ct. is that there should be secured to it the means of knowledge of the material facts with reasonable certainty. With this end in view the fact that the exercise of the discretion is sought should appear on the face of the petition. There should be lodged along with the application for the certificate of a registrar that the proceedings are in order, preliminary to setting down, a statement of the matters in respect of which the exercise of the discretion is prayed & the grounds on which the petition in this behalf is based. The intervention of the King's Proctor following suppression of fact or presentment of falsehood by a petitioner in these matters is not the only safeguard for the observance of due procedure. A party to a divorce proceeding who is asking to have the discretion of the ct. favourably exercised & who in doing so acts in such a manner as to obstruct or divert the course of justice is guilty of a contempt of ct. & liable to its consequences. The multiplication of the tribunals in whom is vested the jurisdiction to decree divorce has rendered necessary a more precise procedure to secure the presentment to them of the facts in each case material to the exercise of the discretion &, if necessary, cases can then be adjourned for further consideration & the services of the King's Proctor made available. To late & limit with precision the grounds for the exercise of the discretion when the facts are once before the ct. is a practical impossibility ; they cannot be rigidly defined but certain broad principles can be gathered from authority. The more strict & early view that two or at most three classes of cases only called for the exercise of the discretion savoured more of estoppel than of the powers of the ct. as defined by statute. Those two classes arose either when resp. had induced petitioner to believe in the death of resp. or when a petitioning wife had been forced by a resp. husband to lead an immoral life, & the question was treated as open whether condonation of petitioner's adultery constituted a third class. To-day these may be stated as guiding principles ; a governing consideration is now the interest of the community at large in maintaining the sanctions of honest matrimony ; a strong affirmative case is still necessary to justify the ct. in departing from the discretionary prohibition of relief to a guilty petitioner ; it is manifestly contrary to law that a judicial discretion in favour of a litigant who has been guilty of adultery should be exercised when that course will probably encourage immorality : if the exercise is not unlikely to have that effect there is an argument against leniency. On the one hand condonation by a resp. of a petitioner's adultery is, though not so in the earlier time, admittedly now a ground for exercising the discretion ; on the other hand, it is now a ground for refusing to exercise the discretion that the adultery of petitioner has in some serious degree conduced to that of resp. & conversely that a resp. should not escape the consequences of his or her proved adultery by putting forward similar acts of petitioner for which resp. was in any serious degree responsible. Further matters now considered are the interests of children, the position of a mother in whose care children are, & possible conditions as regards the future of the guilty parties. All these considerations are held to affect the interest of the community at large.—APTED v. APTED & BLISS, [1930] P. 246 ; 99 L. J. P. 73 ; 143 L. T. 353 ; 46 T. L. R. 456 ; 74 Sol. Jo. 338.

It appeared from the evidence that petitioner had been guilty of an infraction of substantially all the matters set out in Divorce & Matrimonial Causes Act, s. 16, & that the wife was a very deeply injured woman without a stain on her character :—Held : although there is power to refuse petitioner a decree, the judge's discretion is left unfettered & absolute by the legislature. & it is in the best interests of the wife, in the circumstances, to be set free ; the marriage will, therefore, be dissolved on condition that petitioner gives security for the maintenance of resp. in the terms of sect. 17 of the statute.—HARNEY v. HARNEY (1926), 39 B. 5593b. —— ——.]—In this case the observations made in R. v. Willmott by CHARLES, J., apply with added force. Appct. was convicted on Jan. 20, & his notice of appeal was dated Jan. 31. The notice contained five paragraphs & was in itself a very long document. On Feb. 9 he sent in a further document of fourteen closely-written sheets which he called " further grounds of appeal." On Feb. 23 he sent in a mass of further documents & a great many pages of further grounds of appeal. This morning there have arrived a great many more documents from appct. & among them twelve or fourteen closely-written pages relating to the old & new grounds of appeal. In these circumstances, the ct. desires me to say that this case is one in which the ct. would normally adopt the course of adjourning the application, with the result that, unless leave to appeal were given, appct. would remain a longer time in prison than otherwise. Such a practice causes the greatest possible inconvenience. In this case, however, for special reasons, the ct. does not propose to take this course (HUMPHREYS, J.).—R. v. MCLAREN (1933), 24 Cr. Charles Wilmot . . . on a certain road . . . in the county of Lincoln, drove a motor car recklessly, or at a speed or in a manner which was dangerous to the public, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, condition & use of the road, & the amount of traffic which was actually at the time, or which might reasonably have been expected to be, on the said road." Applt. was represented by counsel at the trial, but no objection to the validity of the count was taken until after verdict:—Held; the point with regard to the validity of the count was one which under the old practice could have been taken on a writ of error &, although it had not been taken at the trial, the ct. were bound to allow it to be raised on appeal. The defence was that the charge was a fabrication, & that the children had been schooled by their mother, with whom applt. was on bad terms, into giving evidence against him. Applt. had some months previously been convicted of indecent assault on B. before a ct. of summary jurisdiction. Counsel for applt. put to each of the children in turn the suggestion that each of them had admitted to another person that their mother had told them what to say in evidence on that occasion, & that their evidence was not true. Each of the children denied this suggestion, & counsel for applt. sought to call the two persons to whom the alleged admissions were said to have been made. The judge refused to admit their evidence, on the ground that the above questions had been put to the children solely for the purpose of testing their credit : —Held : the questions were directed not to the credibility of the witnesses but to the very foundation of applt.'s answer to the charge, & the evidence of the two persons to whom the alleged statements had been made by the children ought to have been admitted. On four of the counts in the indictment there was no evidence against applt. beyond that of the particular girl on whom it was alleged that the offence had been committed. The judge, in his summing-up, drew no distinction between the different counts, omitted to warn the jury as to the care they should exercise in accepting the evidence of young children, & failed to direct the jury that they ought to consider in the case of each girl whether she was to be regarded as a victim or as a participant in the offence:—Held: the summing-up was so inadequate as to necessitate the quashing of the conviction.—R. v. BRAMHILL (1933), 24 Cr. having found the injury was caused "without malicious intent." The second count in the indictment was under sect. 274 which does not contain words making intent material. The judge in his charge to the jury said : "the second count charges the accused with unlawful wounding only. . . . No question of intent involved there." The jury convicted the accused under this count. On appeal, his counsel contended that intent was a fundamental factor in the offence under sect. 274, although not specified as such & that the direction to the jury was misdirection :—Held : there was no misdirection & the appeal should be dismissed.—R. v. WHITE, [1934] 2 W. sk. Murder.]—Where on the trial of a charge of murder the accused relies on provocation & drunkenness as grounds why the verdict should be manslaughter, not murder, the judge is not in error in charging the jury that, on account of the words "to deprive an ordinary person" in sect. 261 (2) of the Code, they should when determining the question of provocation make no more allowance for a man under the influence of liquor than for a sober one. But he should direct the jury's attention to those portions of the evidence which, if believed, might actually show provocation by indicating that the accused was suddenly attacked by the deceased, since under said subsection the question whether any particular wrongful act or insult amounts to provocation is expressly one of fact for the jury. He should also instruct the jury that even if provocation, sufficient to deprive an ordinary person of the power of self-control, has been established to their satisfaction, they will then have to determine whether the accused had acted in the heat of sudden passion or from premeditation, &, if satisfied that he was intoxicated, they may take into account the fact that a man in such a condition is more susceptible to passion than he otherwise would be. Moreover, in addition to telling them that the rigor of the rule as to the presumption of intent has been relaxed to the extent that when a particular intent is of the essence of the crime, as it is in murder, drunkenness is an element to be taken into consideration, so that if they found drink had made the accused incapable of the intent to kill they should return a verdict of manslaughter, he should also explicitly direct their attention to those portions of the evidence which would indicate the existence or non-existence of an intent to cause death or grievous bodily harm.—R. v. HARMS, [1936] 2 W. Since this defence was not raised at the beginning but only in course of the trial, the question of the accused's fitness to take his trial was put to the jury only at the same time as the main issue & the verdicts of fitness & guilt were read together :—Held : considering the trial judge's charge to the jury as a whole, its effect might very well have been to cause the jury not to give to the medical testimony the earnest & careful consideration which it called for. There was no evidence that the father had even been in physical possession of the property, or that he had ever seen it before the police found it in a shed occupied by him in which the son was at the time sleeping. On being questioned by the police, the father said : "My boy will tell you all about it," but there was a conflict of testimony as to what the son had said. According to his own evidence, he had given the police a detailed account of the circumstances in which the property was brought to the shed. Applts. were represented at the police ct., & neither made any statement or gave evidence. Both applts. appealed on the ground that the summing-up contained misdirection & nondirection in law :—Held : the summing-up was unsatisfactory in that (a) it drew no distinction between the cases of the two applts., though such was essential in a case of this kind ; (b) the jury were not told that they could convict the father only if they were satisfied either that he knew of the theft beforehand & that some kind of prearrangement between him & the thief, or thieves, existed, or that he subsequently adopted the receiving of the goods by his son, & at the time of such adoption had guilty knowledge ; (c) adverse comments on the silence of applts. when before the magistrate had been improperly made, & both convictions must be quashed.—R. v. SMITH (1935), 25 Cr. The third prisoner, in answer to the statutory formula, said that he did not wish to give evidence or call witnesses. At the trial he, too, put forward the defence of an alibi, & the judge, in his summing up, commented adversely on the fact that this defence, unlike that of the other two prisoners, had not been put forward in the ct. below :—Held : the judge was bound, in the interest of the other two prisoners, to point out this difference between their cases & that of the third prisoner, & no exception could, therefore, be taken to the comments.—R. v. PARKER, [1933] 1 K. 6047c. ——.]—Applt. was charged with an offence against a girl above the age of thirteen & under the age of sixteen years. When formally charged in the police ct. & when asked before being committed for trial if he desired to give evidence on his own behalf or to call witnesses, he said : "I am not guilty. I reserve my defence." At the trial at the assizes, he adduced evidence that, at the material time, he was away from the place where the offence was alleged to have been committed. The trial judge commented on the failure of the accused to disclose his defence in the police ct. & said to the jury that it was unfortunate that the accused did not then & there state where he was at the material time, so as to afford the prosecution an opportunity of making their own inquiries to test the truth of the statement :—Held : the comment did not constitute misdirection. Observations on the failure to disclose a defence at some date earlier than the trial should be made with care & with fairness to the accused person in all the circumstances of the case, but there was no general proposition of law that in no circumstances could comment be made on the failure to disclose the defence in the police ct.

Per LORD HEWART, C.J. : there is a great difference between making the comment that silence on the part of the prisoner is unfortunate & a matter to be regarded with reference to the weight of the defence, when the defence of alibi is raised, & saying that the fact that the prisoner was silent may be treated as evidence against him or as corroborating the evidence of an accomplice.—R. v. LITTLEBOY, [1934] 2 K. The complainant, a Chinaman, testified that he was followed by the accused & on being overtaken was shot & robbed. He said that three shots were fired by the accused, two after the robbery. The witnesses, two white English-speaking men, said that they saw two men fleeing from a third & when the pursuer, shouting & gesticulating, came up with the two one of them turned & fired a shot which brought the pursuer to his knees, whereupon the person who fired the shot stopped & stooping toward the pursuer fired two other shots & then continued his flight. It was proved that the accused did the shooting. The accused was convicted, & appealed on the ground of misdirection of the jury in that (inter alia) the alleged different legal consequences flowing from the differences between the two stories were not adequately put before the jury. (2) In dealing with the defence of an alibi, the ct. of trial ought to direct the jury on any part of the period of time which is relevant.

(3) Without saying that in every case it is proper to sentence an accomplice pleading guilty before he gives evidence for the Crown, it is obvious that where he is not sentenced it is more than ever necessary to warn the jury about accepting his testimony, because

In such a case, the judge should follow the rule laid down in R. v. Baskerville, No. 6056; the judge should warn the jury of the danger of convicting prisoner on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice &, in his discretion, may advise them not to convict upon such evidence, but he should point out to the jury that it is within their legal province to convict upon such unconfirmed evidence.—GOUIN v. R., [1926] S. 6177a. —— ——.]—A prisoner was convicted in Jan. 1926, of bigamy committed in 1920. He was already serving a sentence of six months' imprisonment passed in Dec. 1925, for three offences of false pretences committed in 1923. The judge took the view that as the bigamy & the false pretences arose out of the same circumstances there should be one sentence of twelve months' imprisonment to cover both offences, & accordingly sentenced the prisoner to six months' imprisonment, the term to commence at the expiration of the sentence already being served. Subsequently, however, in view of the provisions of Criminal Law Act, 1827 (c. 28), s. 10, the judge, doubting whether the bigamy, having been in fact committed at an earlier date, was a "subsequent offence" within the meaning of that section, altered the sentence to one of eleven months' imprisonment, the first five months to run concurrently with the existing sentence. The result was to lengthen the sentence originally intended by eight days. The prisoner appealed against the sentence:—Held: as the effect of the alteration of the sentence was inadvertently to compel the prisoner to serve eight days longer than the judge originally intended, the sentence ought to be reduced by that amount.—R. v. FIELDER (1926), 135 L. L. R. 51 Mad. 91.—IND.

so. Circumstances to be considered.]—To constitute an " unlawful assembly " within sect. 87 of Criminal Code there need be no intention on the part of any member of the assembly to commit an offence, but it is the manner in which the assembly conducts itself that brings it within the purview of the sect. All the circumstances, including the conditions of the time, must be considered in determining whether a particular assembly was in the beginning or had become an unlawful one. The common purpose of the members & the likelihood of a disturbance resulting from the assembly are matters which are ordinarily not determined by direct evidence but by inference from the conduct of the meeting & all the circumstances surrounding it. Therefore, the reception of evidence that on the day before the assembly in question a circular, urging the unemployed to refuse to accept relief work & to " strike," was distributed in the city was held not to afford a valid ground of appeal from a conviction on a charge of being a member of an unlawful assembly although no connection of the accused with the circular was shown.—R. v. JONES & SHEININ, R. v. THERNES, R. v. FARBY & DWORKIN, R. v. CAMPBELL, [1931] 3 W. An indictment in respect of a charge of forcibly entering upon lands is defective in charging a common law offence if he does not allege a breach of the peace; & it is defective in charging an offence under the Statute of Forcible Entry, 1381, if it does not allege an entry with the strong hand.—R. v. WAUGH (1935), 52 N. of Ecclesiastical Courts Jurisdiction Act, 1860 (c. 32), s. 2, are used in their widest sense; & the words " any divine service, rite, or office in any cathedral, church, or chapel " in the latter part of the sect. are used to cover all the services in the Church of England in these places, including the celebration of the sacraments, & the special mention immediately preceding these latter words of " any sacrament " refers to the celebration of any sacrament outside a cathedral, church, or chapel.

A parish church, at the time of the service hereinafter mentioned, contained a sanctus bell, a figure of the Madonna & Child, & a blue votive lamp, all of which had been directed to be removed by an order of the Consistory Ct. On a certain Sunday, in the absence through illness of the incumbent of the church, a clergyman in holy orders, being a canon, ministered or celebrated a service in the church in the course of which he performed the ceremony of the Asperges with the use of lighted candles although it was not prescribed or ordered by the Book of Common Prayer; celebrated the holy communion service omitting therefrom the ten commandments & the lengthy exhortation; wore during the sermon or some parts of it an amice, an alb, a maniple, a stole, a cope, & a biretta; & elevated the elements from the altar after consecration. During the service incense was used ceremonially, the sanctus bell was rung before, during, & at the end of the consecration prayer, & during that prayer one of the church bells was rung. It did not appear that any order had been made by lawful authority for the use of the service in question in so far as it differed from the form of service prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer, or for the use of any form of service other than that there prescribed, but it was stated that the service in question had the sanction of the bishop of the diocese: —Held: (1) the service in question, assuming it to be legally valid, was not a sacrament only, but a " divine service " within Ecclesiastical Cts. Jurisdiction Act, 1860 (c. 32), s. 2; (2) although the above-mentioned articles, acts & omissions were departures from the laws of the Church of England, yet such departures did not prevent the service from being a " divine service " within that sect.; &, consequently, persons who disturbed the clergymen while conducting the service disturbed a clergyman ministering or celebrating divine service within the sect. & were liable to conviction for an offence thereunder.—MATTHEWS v. KING, [1934] 1 K. 7971a. Notice in false name.]—On a prosecution for bigamy it was proved that the prisoner's first marriage had taken place in a register office by certificate after notice & that the prisoner, with the knowledge & consent of the woman, gave the notice in a false name; & that subsequently the prisoner went through a form of marriage with another woman :—Held : the giving of the notice in a false name, with the knowledge & consent of the other party, did not prevent the notice from being "due notice" within Marriage Act, 1836 (c. 85), s. 4. n i. —— Sufficiency of belief—Onus of proof.]—In Nov. 1924, M. went through a form of marriage with D. & lived with him until 1928 when they separated. In Nov. 1929, she went through a form of marriage with E., who then knew of her marriage with D. & that D. was still alive. M. & E. were prosecuted for bigamy. The defence was that D. was a married man in 1924. In May, 1915, D. married R. In Jan. 1927, she left him & disappeared & he had never since learned whether she was alive or dead.

According to his evidence, she had been continuously absent for more than seven years immediately preceding his marriage with M., & it was not proved that he knew his first wife was alive at any time during those seven years:—Held: the Crown having proved the unexplained absence of D.'s first wife for seven years immediately preceding his marriage with M., & the presumption that she was then dead arising & discharging the onus which was upon the Crown, it was for the accused to rebut it; that they had not done, & therefore were rightly convicted.—R. v. MCCRORY; R. v. EDDY (1931), 55 Can. 8079 ii. —— ——.]—The Glasgow Corpn. Order Confirmation Act, 1914, s. 21, penalises the keeping for sale of indecent or obscene prints, photographs, or other representations. In a prosecution of a shopkeeper for a contravention of the section, it was proved that the accused had kept for sale a large number of photographs of nude women, which were exhibited in the windows of his shop. The magistrate, who convicted the accused, stated that he considered that, while a picture similar to those which were the subjects of the complaint might fittingly be exhibited in a public gallery, yet the indiscriminate exposure, sale, & circulation of such prints were calculated to prejudice good morals:—Held: the magistrate, in considering whether the photographs were indecent or obscene, was entitled to take into account the circumstances in which they were kept for sale; & assuming that similar pictures might fittingly be exhibited in a public gallery, yet the circumstances in which the photographs were kept for sale by the accused entitled the magistrate to hold that a contravention of the section had been committed.—MCGOWAN v. LANGMUIR, [1931] S. d i. —— ——.]—Evidence of the general reputation of a house is admissible to show that it is a bawdy house.—R. v. THEIRLYNCK, [1931] 1 W. W. R. 352; affd., [1931] S. C. R. 478; 4 D. L. R. 591; 56 Can. C. C. 156.—CAN.

d ii. —— ——.]—The decision in R. v. Theirlynck is not to be taken as laying down a rule that the bare fact that a police officer was delayed in entering a house may be relied upon to support the inference that the house is a common bawdy house & that people found therein must be deemed to be keepers or inmates of such a house. A provincial Ct. of Appeal should set aside a conviction for keeping or being an inmate of a common bawdy house where the conviction is based exclusively upon the fact that there was delay in opening up the premises to police officers. Evidence of the reputation of the house, while admissible to show that the house is a bawdy house, is not by itself sufficient to support a conviction of the people who live therein for being keepers or inmates of a bawdy house. The Theirlynck case stands for nothing more than that the cumulative effect of the circumstances proven in that case was sufficient to support the conviction.—R. v. MCEWAN & LEE, [1932] 3 W. W. 8143a. —— —— By sub-lessee—Whether "lessee" within statute.]—Deft. was & had been for about seven years the lessee of premises consisting of four floors & a basement. He used the ground floor & basement as a shop in which he carried on the business of a tailor. He sub-let unfurnished the first & second floors respectively as flats to two women. These flats were approached not through the shop but by a separate entrance, & apart from his position as landlord deft. had no right to enter them & did not occupy them. It was stated by the police that the women were known to them as prostitutes, each of whom took men to her own flat. Deft. was charged for that he being the lessee of the premises unlawfully & knowingly permitted part of them, namely, the first & second floors, to be used for the purposes of habitual prostitution contrary to Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (c. 69), s. 13 (2): —Held : deft. was not the "lessee" of the flats within the sub-sect. & the charge should be dismissed.—SIVIOUR v. NAPOLITANO, [1931] 1 K. 8143b. —— What must be proved—Frequenting by prostitutes & receipt of money unnecessary.]—On an information under Criminal Law Amendment Act. 1885 (c. 69), s. 13 (2), against the occupier of premises, for unlawfully & knowingly permitting them to be used as a brothel, it is not necessary for the Crown to prove that the women resorting to the premises are prostitutes, known, as such, to the police, or that they received payment for acts of fornication, or of indecency, committed by them with men; it is sufficient to prove that with the knowledge of the occupier persons of opposite sexes were permitted there to have illicit sexual intercourse.—WINTER v. WOOLFE, [1931] 1 K. 8176 i. Concert—Free admission—Collection taken.]—Applt. corpn. existed for the purpose of disseminating the doctrines of Rationalism. Without a consent of any kind from the Municipal Corpn., it held a concert on a Sunday evening in a picture theatre, to which no charge was made for admission. There was a notice reading, "Unless you contribute sixpence we run at a loss," & a silver-coin collection was made. The concert consisted, in part, of a lecture which might have had some educational value, &, in part, of diversions of a light character. Applt. was convicted of an offence under Municipal Corpns. Act, 1928, s. 309. On an appeal by way of rehearing :—Held : an entertainment had been held & applt. had been rightly convicted.—NEW ZEALAND ASSOCN. B. was not at the performance complained of:—Held: B. had not ceased by reason of his absence to be manager & in control of the performance, & was the "keeper" within Sunday Observance Act, 1780 (c. 49), ss. 1, 2.

(2) H. was alleged to have announced the fights, introduced the boxers, announced the results & to have conducted the collection. H. was not identified as the person who had performed these duties, but he did not give evidence to deny the charge:—Held: H. was master of the ceremonies within sect. 1 of above Act.

(3) A handbill bearing the imprint of S.P., Ltd., dated May 5, 1935, & giving details of the performance & of the price of seats was handed to a person awaiting admission:—Held: the imprint was not in itself sufficient evidence that S.P., Ltd. had printed the handbill.

(4) F.P., Ltd. in their paper "Boxing" announced one of the contests which was to take place at the performance in question. No price of the seats was mentioned & no payment was received for the announcement:—Held: the announcement was an advertisement within sect. 3 of the above Act.

(5) Pltf. in one action sued the four parties above mentioned for penalties under Sunday Observance Act, 1780 (c. 49). It was contended that the four defts. were being sued for four different debts, & that such a joinder was not permitted under R. S. C., Ord. Dancing." An informer claimed penalties under Sunday Observance Act, 1780 (c. 49), against defts. for advertising entertainments on Sundays, they being the printers & publishers of the newspaper:—Held: (1) defts. were not advertisers within sect. 3 of the Act. The claim should have been brought against defts. as printers or publishers under the same sect.; (2) an amendment of the claim ought not to be allowed as 6 months had elapsed since the alleged offence, & to allow an amendment would be to allow an action to be brought after the expiration of the period of limitation applicable to the proceedings under sect. 5 of the Act; (3) the advertisement in its terms was an advertisement of a place & not of an entertainment, & no offence had been committed against sect. 3 of the Act.—GREEN v. KURSAAL (SOUTHEND-ON-SEA) ESTATES, LTD., [1937] 1 All E. 8224 iv. —— ——.]—The accused appealed on a case stated under Part XV. of the Criminal Code from a conviction under sect. 501 (f) of the Code for watching & besetting a theatre in New Westminster with a view to abstain picture a certain labour council. Owing to a dispute employees belonging to the union affiliated with said council notified the manager of the theatre that they would strike unless their demands were complied with. The outcome of this demand was that other projectionists, properly licensed but not members of said union, were employed. In protest accused donned yellow slickers bearing on the back the legend: "The Edison Theatre does not employ Union Picture Projectionists affiliated with the New Westminster & Vancouver Trades & Labour Council," & so equipped walked up & down the adjacent street. The statements so made were true. The accused did not accost any one or interfere in any way with patrons going into or leaving the theatre. Some loss of business, however, followed, by reason of these activities. Upon the foregoing facts accused were convicted. The appeal was dismissed.—R. v. RICHARDS & WOOLRIDGE, [1934] 2 W. W. The besetting was admitted & also the fact that the acts proved were done with the view stated. The acts proved were parading in front of the theatre wearing coats on which were printed, "This theatre is trying to destroy union working conditions" & other similar legends. The conduct of defts. was peaceable; there was no uproar or disturbance, no one accosted, no crowd gathered; & there was no evidence of any threats, obstruction, molestation, or incommoding of patrons:—Held : proof merely that defts. acted with the view stated in sect. 501 was not proof that they acted "wrongfully & without lawful authority."—R. v. BALDASSARI, [1931] O. sg. Death by exposure.]—Accused was charged on an indictment which set forth that on a public highway & in an adjoining field " you did assault " a woman named, " & did compress her throat with your hands, beat her with your fists, knock her down & kick her repeatedly on the face, head, arms, body & legs with your booted feet, & did expose her in said field while in an injured & unconscious condition to the inclemency of the weather, & you did murder her." Objections were taken to the relevancy of the indictment on the grounds that the branch of the charge libelling exposure disclosed no crime known to the law & was irrelevant for lack of specification.

Lord Mackay repelled the objections, but expressed an opinion that, in cases where exposure was libelled as a cause of death, specific statements should be made in the indictment of all facts & conditions connected with the exposure.—H.M. ADVOCATE v. M'PHEE, [1935] S. C. (J.) 46.—SCOT.

8541a. —— Stopping fight.]—Applt., a lad of 16, in separating two boys who were fighting, caused the death of one of them. The only witness was one S., who was present at the time & was charged as accessory after the fact. At the trial a letter was read from the solrs. acting for defts. asking for the production of all statements made by defts. & S. This was characterised as improper & production was refused. Also at the trial counsel for defts. agreed that the medical aspect of the case should be argued by one counsel only, & it was agreed that this should be done by counsel for an accessory. This counsel was not allowed to deal with this subject, & was told to confine himself to the question whether his client was an accessory : —Held : (1) in the circumstances the killing only amounted to manslaughter, there being no presumption of malice ; (2) the letter asking for production of the statements was quite a proper one & the statements should have been produced ; (3) counsel for the accessory was quite entitled to argue whether there had been a murder or not, & this would be so even if the prisoner had pleaded guilty. He was, therefore, fully entitled to discuss the medical aspect of the case ; (4) S. being an accomplice, his evidence required corroboration. The fact that he kept silence as to the death of the boy was not corroboration.—Mahadeo v. R., [1936] 2 All E. R. 813 ; 80 Sol. Jo. 551, P. C.

The dying declaration was a lengthy narrative by deceased which day by day she related to her mother, who wrote down the story; this narrative, which concluded with the words "I wish C. punished," appeared to have been read over to deceased shortly before her death & adopted by her at that time as a true statement; a number of questions at the same time were submitted to her by police officers, & her answers with the questions were the subject-matter of two separate declarations. The narrative, together with the two short statements containing the questions & answers, were all put before the jury. 9154a. ——— Detention after receipt of remission marks.]—M. was convicted in Dec. 1925, of certain misdemeanours & sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour & twelve months' imprisonment, the sentences to run consecutively. An order was made by the ct. directing that he should be detained in prison in conformity with the sentences passed. He was first detained in Portsmouth Prison & afterwards in Pentonville Prison. In Dec. 1927, after M. had been removed to Pentonville Prison, the Governor of Portsmouth Prison indorsed on M.'s stage card the forfeiture of five remission marks, to make it agree with M.'s record. There was a dispute whether or not the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had ordered the forfeiture of those marks on May 10, 1926, & the jury differed with regard to it. As a result of the forfeiture of those five marks M. was released by the Governor of Pentonville Prison on July 21, 1928, instead of on July 20. On Aug. 2, 1928, M. brought an action against the Governors of both prisons to recover damages for his detention in prison during that one day. The jury found that the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had not acted maliciously nor with intention to injure M. & that he had not made a false statement:—Held: the Prison Rules did not confer upon M. any legal right to an earlier discharge by the obtaining of remission marks, & that therefore the action could not succeed against either of the Governors; having regard to the findings of the jury the action could not succeed against the Governor of Portsmouth Prison; the Governor of Pentonville Prison was protected, as he had merely acted in pursuance of the order of the ct.—MORRISS v. WINTER, [1930] 1 K. 9307a. ——.]—On the trial of a prisoner for having had unlawful carnal knowledge of a girl under sixteen years of age, the judge directed the jury that although what the girl said to her mother several months after the offence was committed was not evidence, yet the jury could infer what the girl said, namely, that the prisoner was responsible for her condition, from what the mother did, because the prisoner was at once accused, & that that amounted to corroboration of the girl's story. Further, that the fact that the prisoner when he was charged by a police officer & cautioned made no denial of the charge was also corroboration of her story :—Held : both directions were wrong. sk. Partner.]—W. & R. carried on business in partnership as customs agents & income tax adjusters. W. attended to the customs agency only. A customer sent the firm a cheque, to be paid for income tax, drawn in favour of the Income Tax Comr.; worded "Credit payee's account only," & crossed "Not negotiable." The cheque was received by an employee of the firm, handed to a fellow employee & banked by him, cleared by the bank, & the amount of the cheque paid to the firm's account. R. then drew a cheque on the firm's banking account, for a similar amount & paid it into W.'s banking account. W. subsequently used for his own purposes practically the whole of this amount. There was no evidence that W. knew of either the receipt of the customer's cheque or of the dealings with it until after the cheque drawn by R. had been paid into his account:—Held: as, when R.'s cheque was credited to W.'s account, a debt due from the bank to W. was created, which was property of which W. remained a bailee, the jury might find W. guilty of larceny of the original cheque, if, on the evidence, it could find that he knew, after the payment into his account of the cheque drawn by R., of the existence of the bailment, & then converted portion of the debt to his own use.—R. v. WALL (1932), 32 S. On the trial of applt. for an offence under Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 84, the judge directed the jury that a written statement might be false within the meaning of the section not only because of what it stated, but also because of what it concealed, or omitted, or implied:—Held: this was a correct statement of the effect of the section, & applt. was rightly convicted of an offence under it.—R. v. KYLSANT (LORD), [1932] 1 K. The prospectus intimated that "the substantial amount of the additional working capital which will now become available should assist materially in extending both the volume & the scope of the co.'s activities." In fact the co. to be acquired was engaged in a gamble to make a corner in pepper:—Held: there was such a partial & fragmentary statement of fact in the prospectus that the withholding of that which n i. —— Form of indictment.]—The charge, intended to be of an offence under sect. 461, lacked an allegation essential to constitute the crime, namely, that the intent was to commit the assault, that is, on C. P., as charged, in the shop that was broken into; & there was no evidence that supplied this omission, so as to give foundation for an amendment under sect. 889 (2) that would make it in reality a charge under sect. 461. Without amendment, & without proof of the crime intended to be described, there was a finding of guilty of the charge, as set out, which did not describe any crime. 97 v. ——.]—Upon an application made to the High Ct. that the editor & the proprietor of a certain newspaper be punished for contempt of that ct. in publishing certain articles & letters in the newspaper purporting to criticise a decision of the High Ct.:—Held: the legal principles applicable in such a case are: (a) The High Ct. has ample jurisdiction to punish summarily those responsible for publications calculated to obstruct or interfere with the administration of justice, whether such publications take the form of comment referring to proceedings pending in the ct., or that of unjustified attacks upon the members of the ct. in their public capacity. (b) In the case of attacks upon the ct. or its members, the summary remedy of fine or imprisonment is applied only where the ct. is satisfied that it is necessary in the interests of the ordered & fearless administration of justice, & where the attacks are unwarrantable. (c) It is the duty of the ct. to protect the public against every attempt to overawe or intimidate the ct. by insult or defamation, or to deter actual & prospective litigants from complete reliance upon the ct.'s administration of justice. (d) The facts forming the basis of the criticism must be accurately stated, & the criticism must be fair & not distorted by malice. (e) Even although the criticism exceeds the bounds of fair comment so that other remedies of a civil or criminal nature are or may be available, the ct. will not apply the summary remedy unless upon the principles stated above. 224a. —— —— Appointment of receiver for debenture holders.]—Contempt of ct. may include conduct which, while it cannot directly influence a judge's mind, is calculated to affect the conduct of parties to proceedings, & the ct.'s jurisdiction to commit for contempt is not confined to cases in which its orders may directly be affected.

On the application of pltfs. in a debenture holders' action, a receiver of the shipping co. was appointed on the ground of jeopardy. A director of a co. which managed the shipping co.'s business, who was also a guarantor of debentures issued by the shipping co., authorised newspapers to publish interviews in which he adversely criticized the conduct of pltfs. in having obtained the appointment of a receiver, & he further stated that by so doing they had " smashed the goodwill & organisation of the business in a day " & that " no one in shipping circles can understand this line of conduct." The interviews did not state that the appointment was on the ground of jeopardy or that, as was the fact, the co. could not continue to carry on business unless money was immediately found. On a motion by pltfs. for an order to commit the director, & also the managing editor & the owners & publishers of the newspapers :—Held : the publication of injurious misrepresentations concerning parties to proceedings in relation to those proceedings may amount to contempt of ct., because it may cause those parties to discontinue or to compromise, & because it may deter persons with good causes of action from coming to the ct., & is thus likely to affect the course of justice.—Re WILLIAM THOMAS SHIPPING CO., LTD., DILLON (H. 274a. —— ——.]—Pltfs. were manufacturers of apparatus for conveying beer from cellar to bar in hotels & public-houses, & defts. were competing manufacturers of different apparatus for the same purpose. Pltfs. brought an action against defts. alleging that defts. had caused to be published to brewers letters disparaging pltfs.' said apparatus, & that pltfs. had thereby been prejudiced in their business, & claiming damages & an injunction A circular letter, purporting to be issued by defts., was thereupon published to certain brewers which enclosed a copy of pltfs.' statement of claim, & contained further adverse references to apparatus of the kind manufactured by pltfs., & a statement that defts. intended " to contest this ' cock & bull ' claim to the uttermost degree." It appeared that the circular letter & the enclosed copies of the statement of claim had been sent out by the publicity agent of defts. without their knowledge. On behalf of pltfs., a motion was made in the action for a writ of attachment against defts. for contempt of ct. in publishing the statement of claim & the covering circular letter, & an order nisi was obtained for a similar writ against the publicity agent for circulating these documents, on the ground that his doing so was calculated to prejudice the fair trial of the action. The agent stated that in doing what he had done he had no intention of prejudicing the fair trial of the action, & that if he had acted improperly he made his apologies to the ct. :—Held : the motion against defts. should be dismissed, & in the circumstances the order nisi against the publicity agent should also be discharged.—GASKELL & CHAMBERS, LTD. v. HUDSON, DODSWORTH & CO., R. v. HUDSON, Ex p. GASKELL & CHAMBERS, LTD., [1936] 2 K. 341a. —— ——.]—Pltf. obtained judgment in a county ct. against deft. for a sum of money & costs, & an appeal to the Div. Ct. by deft. was dismissed with costs. Pltf.'s solr. made various but futile efforts to obtain the fruits of the judgment. Deft. disobeyed a bkpcy. notice & an order for payment of the judgment debt & costs by instalments. Several judgment summonses were obtained against deft., but deft. evaded service of them. Eventually pltf.'s solr. served deft. with a judgment summons within the precincts of a ct. of justice where deft. was waiting for a case, in which he was pltf., to be called on. Deft. applied for a writ of attachment against pltf.'s solr. for contempt of ct. in so doing:—Held: in the circumstances, no contempt had been committed & the rule must be discharged.

The rule laid down in Cole v. Hawkins, No. 341, that the serving of process upon a party attending his cause in ct. was a contempt of ct. is now obsolete.—R. v. JONES, Ex p. MCVITTIE, [1931] 1 K. B. 664; 100 L. J. K. B. 193; 144 L. T. 597.

so. Misleading headlines.]—Garbled & misleading headlines in a newspaper, amounting to a criticism of the prosecution's case in the guise of a summary of the proceedings in cts. calculated to produce an atmosphere of prejudice in which the proceedings go on, is contempt of ct.—BENGAL GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL v. TUSHARKANTI GHOSH (1932), I. L. R. 60 Calc. 603.—IND.

PART IV. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.—E.

283a i. Photograph of prisoner—Identity in issue.]—It is a grave contempt of ct. to publish in a newspaper before trial the photograph of a person charged with a criminal offence, where it should have been apparent to the mind of any reasonable person that the necessity, or possible necessity, of proof of identity of the accused person with the criminal has arisen or may arise, & such publication is calculated to prejudice a fair trial.—A.-G. v. TONKS, [1934] N. Z. L. R. 141.—N.Z.

283a ii. ——.]—The test to be applied in order to determine whether the publication of the photograph of an accused person, in such a way as to state or suggest that it is he who is accused, is a contempt of ct. calling for summary action, is to see whether, as at the time when the photograph was published, there was a likelihood that the identity of the accused would come in question in some aspect of the case, so that the publication of the photograph would be likely to prejudice a fair trial. If the ct. is satisfied, beyond reasonable doubt, that there was such a likelihood, a case for intervention is made out. The question is not whether, on the facts then known, a defence based on identity is likely to be successful or likely to be set up; it is whether it is not reasonably probable that identity may come in question.—Re CONSOLIDATED PRESS, LTD., Ex p. AULD (1936), 36 S. PART IV. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 4.

sr. Necessity for interference with administration of justice.]—It is contempt of ct. to publish an article in a newspaper commenting on the proceedings in a pending criminal prosecution or civil action; but the summary jurisdiction possessed by a High Ct., to punish for contempt, ought only to be exercised when it is probable that the publication will substantially interfere with the due administration of justice.—THE GOVERNMENT ADVOCATE, BURMA v. SAYA SEIN (1929), I. 429a. —— Consent order—Breach of scheduled terms.]—There is a distinction between a case where there is in the body of an order an express direction or undertaking, & a case where the ct. is merely staying an action on terms which the parties have agreed, & only keeping the action alive for the purpose of enforcing those terms. In the latter case the terms are not an order of the ct. capable of being enforced by proceedings for contempt, but must be enforced by an action for specific performance of the terms or for an injunction to restrain breach of the terms, followed by proceedings for contempt in the event of further breach, while in the former case contempt proceedings can be launched forthwith on breach.—DASHWOOD v. DASHWOOD (1927), 71 Sol. That order was not served upon deft. co. or its directors until the lapse of six weeks from the date of the order. The copy of the order which was served upon deft. co. & upon its directors did not have indorsed upon it, as required by R. S. 427a. —— Immaterial documents—Inclusion disapproved.]—Documents not material to an appeal should not be included in the record. If one party wishes a document to be included, but the other party considers it unnecessary, the matter should be referred to the High Ct. or its registrar. It does not follow that because unnecessary documents have been printed in India they should be included in the books for the Judicial Committee. It is the duty of the solr. in England to make a selection of the necessary documents, the other papers being ready in case they are required. 679a. Passing-off action—Improper finding of fraud.]—Pltfs. in Nov. 1929, began to sell cigarettes in tins of one hundred, which tins bore a trade mark of crossed swords in gold on a red ground, the words "Golden Sword" & a price indication 2 for 1, meaning 2 cigarettes for 1 cent. On the cigarettes themselves was the trade mark of crossed 2 1 printed in red. In May, 1931, defts. put upon the market cigarettes in packets of ten, which packets bore a representation of an ace & a king of hearts & the words "Twenty One" (that hand in Vingt-et-un & also in a Chinese game counting twenty-one). Each cigarette bore the words "Twenty One Cigarettes" in blue. Pltfs. commenced an action in the Supreme Ct. at Singapore & claimed an injunction to restrain defts. from applying a mark consisting of the words or numbers "Twenty One" to containers for cigarettes sold by them & from passing off, by using such mark, cigarettes not of pltfs.' manufacture as & for pltfs.' cigarettes. Pltfs. also claimed the usual other relief. The trial judge held that pltfs. had established their case, & that they were entitled to the relief which they sought. An injunction was granted. Defts. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal of the Straits Settlements. The findings of fact by the trial judge were unanimously upheld & the appeal was dismissed. Defts. appealed, by special leave, to the Privy Council:—Held: having regard to the short time between the appearance in the market of applts.' cigarettes & the issue of the writ the action was in effect a quia timet action, resps. had never suggested that there could be any confusion between the cigarettes of resps. & those of applts. so far as concerned dealers & distributors to whom such dealers sold, that the market referred to in certain paragraphs of the statement of claim was admittedly that in which the consumer bought & not that in which dealers & retailers bought; the case was not opened on a footing of fraud, & it was doubtful whether the statement of claim would have justified such an opening; but there was by the lower cts. a finding of fraud although (i.) no plea of fraud had been properly raised on the pleadings, (ii.) fraud had not been opened, & (iii.) no questions had been put to the witnesses to suggest that fraud was being charged; there was no evidence on which a finding of fraud could be based; the trial judge had founded his judgment upon an

By virtue of legislation & orders in council, the whole of such stocks were vested in the Minister of Finance of Canada in trust for His Majesty. A new co. called the Canadian National Ry. Co. having been incorporated to amalgamate an old co. of that name & the Grand Trunk Co., the Minister surrendered the stocks in question to the new co. for cancellation & received from the new co. one share for the value of the stock surrendered. Applt. claimed on behalf of himself & all other holders of such stocks that the legislation, orders in council & agreements, whereby the above transaction was carried through were invalid & void, & asked for the rectification of the register of the Grand Trunk Co. He also claimed damages against the ry. cos. for breach of duty in removing his name from the register of the Grand Trunk Co. The question was also raised whether this appeal was a mere question of jurisdiction & procedure, or whether there was a matter in controversy exceeding in value 4,000 dollars & thus giving an appeal as of right to the Privy Council. The damages claimed were greatly in excess of 4,000 dollars :—Held : (1) the first claim was a claim against the Crown & could only be prosecuted by petition of right, & the Exchequer Ct. of Canada had exclusive jurisdiction in such a matter; (2) the claim for damages was not against the Crown, & as to that the action should be allowed to proceed.—LOVIBOND v. GRAND TRUNK RY. By a petition of right the suppliants, assignees of civilian claimants who suffered loss or damage by German aggression out of the War, claimed on their behalf payment of compensation out of the moneys paid or payable as reparations under the above article. The case made by the petition was that the claimants had sent particulars of their claims, first, to the Foreign Claims Office, &, afterwards, to the Reparation Claims Department in accordance with the instructions of His Majesty's Government, that these claims had been duly verified by the Government, & were included in the agreed total of claims for reparations which Germany was required to pay under the treaty, & that the Crown in inviting the claimants to submit their claims had constituted itself an agent or a trustee for the claimants in respect of any money received by it from Germany on account of reparations, & that any such money was money had & received by the Crown to the use of the claimants :—Held : on demurrer by the Crown, the petition afforded no ground for the contention that the money received under the treaty was received by the Crown as an agent or a trustee for the claimants, or as money had & received to their use, & was bad as disclosing no ground of claim cognisable by the ct.—CIVILIAN WAR CLAIMANTS ASSOCN., LTD. v. R., [1932] A. After a fiat "Let Right be Done" is granted, & the petition is filed in ct., it becomes a pleading, & under the Rules of Ct. is subject to any reasonable amendment, providing it does not involve any substantial alteration in the cause of action, or does not set up a fresh cause of action.—HANSEN v. R., [1933] Ex. Resp., after the hearing of the case but prior to judgment, made a motion before the trial judge for leave to amend the prayer of her petition of right by replacing the words "Minister of Roads" by the words "His Majesty the King." The motion was granted by the trial judge at the same time that judgment was given awarding damages, which judgment was affirmed by the appellate ct. Applt.'s counsel before this ct., besides denying any liability of the Crown upon the facts of the case, contended that the trial judge should not have allowed the substitution of the name of "His Majesty the King" for the "Minister of Roads" without the previous authority of a new fiat :—Held : it was competent to the Superior Ct. to grant the motion to amend the petition of right, if that were considered necessary.—R. v. DEMERS, [1935] S. In 1794 the master had reported that the lunatic had no heir-at-law or next of kin. In 1798 & 1801 the Crown made ex gratia grants of these funds to certain persons & obtained an indemnity in respect of these grants. In 1926 a petition was presented by persons claiming to be the next of kin of the lunatic for the payment to them of the whole of her personal estate. The parties agreed to confine themselves, for the present, to seeking a determination of the following questions: (a) whether the petition was maintainable on the assumption that no part of the funds in question ever came into the hands of or was dealt with by his present Majesty or his nominees or grantees or was carried to the Consolidated Fund; (b) whether the petition was barred by any Statute of Limitations; (c) whether in view of Petitions of Right Act, 1860 (c. 34), s. 5, the suppliants could proceed without serving the petition upon the successors in title of the persons to whom the ex gratia grants had been made: —Held: Petitions of Right Act, 1860 (c. 34), s. 5, did not apply to the case.—Re MASON, [1928] 1 Ch. 385; 97 L. PART V. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

c i. —— —— Commitment not in any criminal case under any Act of Parliament of Canada.]—Petitioner was convicted, in July & October, 1928, on charges under Intoxicating Liquor Act of New Brunswick, & was committed to gaol in York County, N.B. He applied to a judge of this ct. for a writ of habeas corpus, alleging that, on & prior to Dec. 10, 1917, Canada Temperance Act was in force in said county, that, on that date, an Order in Council, passed pursuant to Statutes of Canada, 1917, c. 30, became effective, suspending the operation of the Canada Temperance Act in said county; that, at the time of the passing of said Order in Council, there was in force the New Brunswick Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1916, referred to in said Order in Council as being as restrictive as the Canada Temperance Act; that, in 1927, New Brunswick Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1927, c. 3, came into force, which repealed the 1916 Act, & was less restrictive than Canada Temperance Act; & he contended that, as a result, the said suspension of the operation of Canada Temperance Act automatically ceased, & that Act came into force in said county, & that the offences for which he was convicted & committed to gaol were offences against that Act & not against the Provincial Act:—Held: a judge of this ct. had no jurisdiction to issue the writ applied for, as the commitment was not "in any criminal case under any Act of Parliament of Canada" within Supreme Court Act, s. 57.—DOHERTY v. HAWTHORNE, [1929] 1 D. L. R. 136; 50 Can. Crim. Cas. 209; [1928] S. C. R. 559.—CAN.

c ii. —— —— ——.]—The jurisdiction of the Supreme Ct. of Canada in respect of habeas corpus extends only to cases of commitment following upon charges of offences which are criminal by virtue of statutes enacted by the Parliament of Canada; it does not extend to cases of commitment for offences at common law or under statutes enacted prior to Confederation which are still in force, even if these last offences have also been declared to be criminal by a federal statute.—SMITH v. R., BLACKMAN v. R., [1931] S. A person may apply for the writ while in the custody of a constable, immediately upon being arrested, & need not wait until he is actually incarcerated. But a person at large on bail is not so restrained of his liberty as to entitle him to the writ.—Re ISBELL, [1930] S. C. R. 62; 1 D. L. R. 393; 52 Can. C. C. 170.—CAN.

801. For the existing paragraph in original volume substitute as follows :—

From order declaring prisoner's right to liberty—Order not directing discharge—Order of Court of Appeal—No appeal to House of Lords.]—No appeal lies from an order of a competent ct. for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus where the ct. determines the illegality of appct.'s detention & his right to liberty, although the order does not direct his discharge.

Upon the application of a man whom the Home Secretary had caused to be arrested & deported to Dublin, where he was interned by the Govt. of the Irish Free State, the Ct. of Appeal, reversing the decision of the Div. Ct., granted an order nisi, which they subsequently made absolute, for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus directed to the Home Secretary, the ct. holding that the detention was illegal as the Home Secretary had no power to order a person to be interned in the Irish Free State ; &, owing to a doubt whether the Home Secretary had control of the body, the order allowed him a week within which to make his return to the writ. Before the week had elapsed an appeal by the Home Secretary to the House of Lords was heard on the question of competency :—Held : notwithstanding the generality of the language of Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (c. 59), s. 3, the House had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR HOME AFFAIRS v. O'BRIEN, [1923] A. 1230a. —— No fresh grounds for rehearing advanced.]—Appct. was the owner of certain houses situated in West Norfolk. These houses were entered in the valuation list for 1929 at £30 gross & at £22 rateable value. On July 30, 1929, appct. made a proposal in writing to the rating authority for the amendment of the list under Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90), s. 37 (1), with the result that the assessments were reduced to £25 gross & £18 rateable value. Not being satisfied with that decision, appct., acting under sect. 37 (8) of the Act, on Nov. 18, gave notice of appeal to the clerk of the peace, but by reason of delay a copy of such notice was not served on the assessment committee within the period specified in Sched. V., Part I. of the Act & the appeal was withdrawn. A second proposal was then made by appct. on Dec. 30, 1929, for the amendment of the valuation list upon the ground (inter alia) that the assessment was excessive, but without proposing what the amendment should be. On a rule nisi to show cause why the return should not be taken off the file, & calling on the forty-eight individual members to show cause why writs of attachment should not issue against them for disobedience to the peremptory writ, the ct. was of opinion that, under the circumstances, all forty-eight members were duly served with the peremptory writ in Mar. 1903. It was ordered that writs of attachment should issue against the seven members originally served, the writs to lie in the Crown Office until a certain date, leaving the onus on the seven members to satisfy the ct. that the writ was obeyed. ii. ——.]—Until a charge is preferred & dealt with by trial or stay in the ct. to which an accused has been committed for trial, he cannot be committed for trial again for the same offence. Where a right of appeal exists, an order of prohibition will issue only if something has been done contrary to the laws of the land or so vicious as to violate some fundamental principle of justice. Once it is conceded that a magistrate has jurisdiction, a mistaken exercise thereof is a ground for appeal & not for prohibition. Prohibition has always been used to prevent inferior cts. from acting without authority & not to remedy wrong decisions by them.—Re FRASER & HALPIN, [1933] 1 W. W. R. 255; 1 D. L. R. 781; 59 C. C. 2402 i. Not from order in "criminal cause or matter"—Supreme Court of Judicature Act (Ireland), 1877.]—By a proclamation dated Dec. 10, 1920, the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland proclaimed certain counties, including County Cork, to be under martial law. By a proclamation dated Dec. 12, 1920, the Commander-in-Chief in Ireland declared the unauthorised carrying of arms to be punishable by death, & he authorised the general officer commanding in Cork to issue orders for the holding of military cts. as might be necessary. In May, 1921, applts., who were civilians, were tried by a military ct. held by order of the general under the authority of the Commander-in-Chief on a charge of improperly carrying arms, & were convicted & sentenced to death, subject to confirmation. Applts. applied in the Chancery Division for a writ of prohibition against the military ct., the Commander-in-Chief, & the general commanding in Cork to prohibit them from proceeding further with the trial of applts. or from carrying into execution any judgment against them, on the ground that the ct. was illegal & had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter. POWELL, J., refused the application, & the Ct. of Appeal in Ireland dismissed an appeal from his order as incompetent upon the ground that it was an order made in a criminal cause or matter within sect. 50 of the Supreme Ct. of Judicature Act (Ireland), 1877 :—Held : the order of POWELL, J., was not made in a criminal cause or matter within the Act, because the proceedings before the military ct. were in no sense criminal proceedings, & that an appeal lay from that order.—Re CLIFFORD & O'SULLIVAN, [1921] 2 A. 2533a. —— —— ——.]—The prisoners were charged at Caernarvon Assizes with arson & malicious damage to govt. property & buildings at an aerodrome. Great local feeling had been aroused against the aerodrome on religious & nationalist grounds, & the prisoners, who were members of a Welsh nationalist movement, admitted that they had set fire to the buildings. While on bail, the prisoners had prepared addresses to be delivered to the jury at the trial; the addresses contained matters & appeals on religious, nationalist & conscientious grounds. One of the prisoners had given numerous sermons in various churches in North Wales & had received many ovations because of his share in the burning. A pamphlet had also been circulated by two of the prisoners giving their reasons for their share in the burning. At the trial the jury disagreed. Large groups of people had assembled outside the ct. & disturbances had occurred:—Held: (1) this was a proper case for the removal of the trial to the Central Criminal Ct. under the Central Criminal Ct. 2735a. —— Order of County Council—Improper grant of cinematograph licence.]—It was the practice of a certain County Council, in granting licences to use premises for cinematograph exhibitions, to impose the condition that the premises should not be so used on Sundays, Christmas Day or Good Friday; but also to entertain applications for permission to open the premises for cinematograph entertainments on those days. A co. applied for a licence to open & use premises for cinematograph entertainments, & also for permission to open the premises for such purposes on Sundays, Christmas Day & Good Friday. In compliance with this application the County Council made an order to the effect that, "subject to arrangements at the premises being completed to its satisfaction, the Council will take no action for the present in the event of the above named premises being opened for cinematograph entertainments on Sundays, Christmas Day & Good Friday as from & including Sunday, July 6, 1930, provided: (i.) that a sum of £35 be paid to charity in respect of each Sunday, Christmas Day & Good Friday on which the premises are opened for cinematograph entertainments." The permission was also subject to conditions relating to the auditing of receipts & expenses, the character & hours of the entertainments, & the employment of servants :—Held : a writ of certiorari should issue to bring up & quash the order of the County Council as having been made without jurisdiction, the council having no power to dispense with the provisions of the Sunday Observance Act, 1780 (c. 49).

I am unable to distinguish in principle between the application for a licence under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), & an application made with regard to a licence for a public-house, which for many years . . . has been held to be a judicial act (SLESSER, L.J.).—R. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, Ex p. ENTERTAINMENTS PROTECTION ASSOCN., LTD., [1931] 2 K. In accordance with the regulations of the Post Office medical service, the case was referred to the chief medical officer, who had special knowledge of telegraphist's cramp, & he certified that appct. was not suffering from it :—Held : (1) the giving of a certificate was a judicial act, in respect of which certiorari would lie; (2) it issued ex debito justitiæ at the instance of an aggrieved person; (3) an appeal to a medical referee under sect. 43 (1) (f) of the above Act was not equally beneficial, since he could only deal with the medical correctness of the certificate & could not inqure into its validity.—R. v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL Ex p. CARMICHAEL, [1928] 1 K. 2736b. —— Grant of permission to build by local authority.]—Where a draft town planning scheme has been proposed for an area, & the Minister has made an interim development order authorising the local council to grant permission for the development of the area, the decision of the council on an application for such permission (which may confer on appct. contingently a legal right to compensation if his building is found to contravene the scheme when it comes into force) is a judicial & not an administrative decision. If, therefore, one of the councillors voting in favour of the resolution to grant permission has such an interest in the matter as to disqualify him from voting on account of bias, certiorari will lie to quash the decision.—R. v. HENDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, Ex p. CHORLEY, [1933] 2 K.
